Wanderer in the Promised land. 1933 Scribner $2.75; Soncino 7s 6d 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 2 Palestine—Antiq. 3 Levant—Descr. & trav. 33-9813

"Mr. Bentwich was an officer in Lord Allenby's army when it followed the track of Thothmes the Great and Ramses from Egypt into Palestine; and his spirit was stirred in him. Since then, he has lived in the land of his ancestors, and has wandered in it as Scott wandered on the Borders. There does not seem to be an inch which he has not explored from Aleppo to Eziongeber; and every place comes to him clothed in an immortal history. . . But Mr. Bentwich has an eye toward the future as well as on the past. He is a Zionist, and plainly believes that the prosperity of the country depends on the diligence and ability of the Jewish immigrants." New statesman and Na-

* Bible lands to-day. 1927 Appleton-Century $3; 10s 6d 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 2 Levant—Descr. & trav. 27-3382

"Other records of Biblical pilgrimage limit themselves largely to the Holy Land. This book is unique in that it encompasses the entire geography of both Old and New Testaments. The author claims to have been the first person to attempt to cover in one journey all of the scenes of Biblical history. An interesting addition to books of travel. End maps show the route." Wis bul.

"The book is not written for scholars but for the public. It is easy to read, full of personal impressions, informal and inviting and is well illustrated from the writer's own photographs." Literary rev.

Land of promise; tr. from the French by L. W. Wise. 1933 Macaulay $2; Laurie 10s 6d 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 2 Jews—Restoration 33-7175

"The author, a French Jew, went to Palestine to add to his preparation for writing a life of Christ, but he was so moved by the Jewish rebuilding of that land, that he abandoned his original project and wrote instead his impressions of the Zionist accomplishment in agriculture, education, and engineering." Book rev. digest

"In deft, sensitive episodes Fleg paints the panorama of the new promised land, its multiple achievements and pressing problems, the interplay and often the clash of Arab and Jew, nationalist and Communist, pietist and radical."

Fosdick, Harry Emerson
‡ Pilgrimage to Palestine. 1927 Macmillan $1; Student 8s 6d 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 2 Palestine—Historical geography 27-25565

"A most illuminating and inspiring book on the Bible lands, by the well-known liberal minister. His open-mindedness and thorough knowledge of the Bible and Hebrew history, together with his literary ability, unusual opportunities for observation and 'sheer love for the land' combine to make this a narrative which will be enjoyed by all who read it. The map, index, table of Bible references and bibliography make it useful for the student. Clear type." Cleveland

Hyamson, Albert Montefiore
Palestine old and new. 1928 McBride $3; Methuen 7s 6d 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 2 Jerusalem—Descr. 28-28772

"It contains a solid mass of information which will be extremely useful to the tourist, but will be of little assistance to the stay-at-home reader who wants a picture of the new Palestine, as seen against the background of the old . . . As a guide-book for the tourist, 'Palestine, Old and New,' has much to commend it. The ground is systematically covered, and the visitor who places himself in Mr. Hyamson's hands will miss hardly anything of interest; indeed, if he has any complaint, it will be that the incessant flow of information is apt at times to become a trifle bewildering." Leete, Frederick De Land, bp.
Palestine; land of the light. 1932 Houghton $2.50 915.69

1 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 32-33813

"A popular, informal guide-book for the traveler and the Biblical student, combining ancient and modern history, description, and views of present-day conditions. Illustrated with photographs. Index." Book rev. digest

"A student rather than a sightseer, Bishop Leete enriches what he observes with what he knows. The historical and religious significance of Palestine are constantly in the foreground of his chapters. His viewpoint is primarily that of the churchman. Survivals of historic conditions and ways of living are what chiefly interest the author, and in the topography of Palestine he traces 'the world's living Bible.' His book will appeal to both the traveler and to the religious teacher." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Rostovtsev, Mikhail Ivanovich
Caravan cities; tr. by David and T. T. Rice. 1932 Oxford $4.75; 15s 915.69

1 Syria—Descr. & trav. 2 Arabia—Descr. & trav. 3 Palestine—Descr. & trav. 4 Cities and towns, Ruined, extinct, etc. 5 Caravans 33-5329

"Petra, Palmyra, Jerash and Dura are the four cities of which the author writes, alike in that they owed their importance to that caravan trade which flourished in ancient times and is not extinct even in our own. Professor Rostovtzeff writes interestingly of the daily life in these cities, of their government, their history, culture and art." Cleveland

"In the present state of our knowledge this book is a more valuable contribution to cultural inquiries than to historical outlines; the cultural problems are more tangible, while the historical suggestions, though coming from so distinguished an authority, must await confirmation from the hands of particular excavators. For most of the work Professor Rostovtzeff is in a holiday humour. . . It is all good reading, and the photographs are excellent." Times (London) lit. sup.

Bergman, Sten
Through Kamchatka by dog-sled and skis; [tr. from the Swedish by Frederic Whyte]. 1927 Seeley 21s 915.7

1 Kamchatka—Descr. & trav. 27-15185

Formerly carried also by Lippincott

"Dr. Bergman's book deals with one of the few remaining corners of the world where exploration in the good, old-fashioned sense is still possible. It is a vivid description of adventurous journeys among the interesting and almost unknown peoples of the most inaccessible parts of Kamchatka. His expedition, which began with a shipwreck, was organised by Swedish scientists for zoological, ethnographical, and botanical research, with the first two departments as the author's special province. This is a popular account of its non-technical side. Dr. Bergman describes two journeys—one on skis and with dogs from northeastern Kamchatka to Petropavlovsk, the capital, the other of four months on dog sledges into the central and northern regions of the peninsula." From Red Sea to Blue Nile; Abyssinian adventure. 1925 Macaulay $3.50 916.3

1 Abyssinia—Descr. & trav. 25-19846

"The record of three months on muleback, the story of what happened to Mr. Harold Jones, cinema operator, and myself during an eleven hundred mile trek through mountains and forests, rivers and deserts in search of photographic material. It is a tale of adventures, serious and frivolous, of what we saw and heard and did between the Red Sea and the Blue Nile, but it is only an impression of Abyssinia as she appeared from tent and saddle." Makin, William J.

1 Red sea—Descr. & trav. 33-4930

"This volume of lively, descriptive journalism, though inaccurate here and there, will give quite a considerable amount of pleasure to any stay-at-home reader who would like to visit vicariously Palestine, Egypt and various Red Sea ports like Hodeidah and Jidda. There is a detailed and really well written account of the Duke of Gloucester's visit to Addis Ababa for the crowning of Ras Tafari. This portion of the book gives a vivid picture of the life in the capital of Abyssinia." Times (London) lit. sup.

Powell, Edward Alexander

Beyond the utmost purple rim. 1925 Appleton-Century $3.50 916.3

1 Abyssinia—Descr. & trav. 2 Madagascar—Descr. & trav. 25-7918

"Colonel Powell deals with areas of Africa which are comparatively unknown to Europeans —Abyssinia and Madagascar, with passing glimpses of Somaliland, Kenya Colony, Zanzibar and the Comoro islands. The book is not all colorful description, as the title would suggest. A background of history and customs is supplied and there are comments on politics and economic conditions. Numerous illustrations from photographs." Book rev. digest

1 Morocco—Descr. & trav. [29-26172]

"Another of the 'Things seen series,' giving something of the history of Morocco, and describing its scenery, its people and their customs. One chapter is devoted to the mountainous Riff country, another to Salli, a famous pirates' nest. Numerous excellent illustrations." Cleveland

Elsner, Mrs Eleanor

Magic of Morocco. 1928 Dodd $3.50; Jenkins 6s 916.4

1 Morocco—Descr. & trav. [29-8719]

"An enthusiastic account of a trip to Morocco, describing the country and the manners and customs of the natives, and telling something of the history of the cities visited. Well illustrated. Large type." Cleveland

Hall, Leland

* Salah and his American. 1934 Knopf $2; Cresset 7s 6d 916.4

1 Morocco—Descr. & trav. 2 Negroes in Morocco 34-966

"Study of the relationship between an American, temporarily in Morocco, and Salah, a coal-black Negro, formerly a slave in the household of a Berber chieftain. During the months when he was servant to the American, Salah came to depend upon his master to such an extent that he could not grasp the fact that his master would eventually leave him and return to America. The master in turn felt a strange responsibility for the wilful individual who had become practically his slave." Book rev. digest

"To convey the special charm of Mr. Hall's little book is almost impossible. The descriptions of native life in Morocco are admirable and so are the many comic scenes in which Salah plays an innocent part." N.Y. Times

Ossendowski, Ferdynand Antoni

Fire of desert folk; English text by L. S. Palen. 1926 Dutton $3; Allen, G. 16s 916.4

1 Morocco—Descr. & trav. 26-16591

"Carrying letters of introduction that opened official doors wide and secured for him every facility for the trip, the author with his wife saw Morocco at his comfortable leisure; a journey in marked contrast to his feats of hardy adventure in other countries. In 'The fire of desert folk' he paints word pictures of Moroccan scenes and photographs. [map] Book rev. digest

"The present volume is a more than usually interesting book of travel. Mr. Ossendowski has definite views and opinions about the places he visits, and even though one is not convinced that those views are necessarily sound, they are always interesting." Spectator

Sloane, William Milligan

Greater France in Africa. 1924 Scribner $3; 12s 6d 916.4

1 Morocco 2 Algeria 3 France—Colonies—Africa, North 25-360

"The author has attempted . . . to furnish a brief summary of his visit to Morocco and Algiers, as a member of the group invited by the Committee France-America to make a tour of those parts of Greater France; and also to furnish a certain background for the better comprehension of what was seen and heard." Preface

"Mr. Sloane's work scarcely pretends to be more than introductory. It is the result of a five weeks' tour of Morocco and Algeria . . . He quite frankly admits, that the party in the time at their disposal had little opportunity for seeing anything but what the French authorities wanted them to see. On the other hand, the conditions in which the tour was carried out gave Mr. Sloane and his colleagues quite unusual facilities for investigating at first hand the French administrative system in North Africa; and it is in its appreciation of this system that the main value of the book consists." Wharton, Mrs Edith Newbold (Jones)

* In Morocco. Scribner $3; Appleton-Century 20s 916.4

1 Morocco—Descr. & trav. 20-17098

First published 1920; reprinted 1925. Also available in the Travellers' library (Smith, P. $1; Cape, J. 3s 6d)

"Colorful descriptions of a month's automobile journey in 1918 through the little traveled land of Morocco which still retains its mystic, old-world attractiveness. Touches on the history, architecture, social conditions and folklore of the country . . . Excellent full-page illustrations, bibliography, index, [map]. N.Y. state lib.

"The best thing a returned traveler can do is to give you not facts but atmosphere. Edith Wharton in 'In Morocco' does this for you excellently well, partly because she is so impersonal, never intruding her own reactions, simply bringing up the scene around you with all its blinding sunlight, desert heat and vivid colors." Belloc, Hilaire

Esto perpetua; Algerian studies and impressions. McBride $2.50; Duckworth 5s 916.5

1 Algeria—Descr. & trav. [6-24003]

First published 1906. Combines considerable history and geography with personal impressions in a style that makes easy and engaging reading. Illustrated with many small sketches by the author interspersed through the text

Hafsa, pseud.

Desert winds. 1927 Appleton-Century $3.50; Laurie 16s 916.5

1 Algeria—Descr. & trav. 2 Algeria—Soc. life & cust. 3 Sahara—Descr. & trav. 27-23834

" 'Hafsa,' says the foreword 'is an American citizen of distinguished Arab and Spanish descent.' In colorful prose gives an impressionistic description of Algeria. Not narrative travel altho based on a personal journey. Gives a good background for understanding the Arabs and the influence of the desert." Wis. bul.

"This is a distinctly original book. The style is exotic, diffuse, rather irritating; the writer, who is an American of Arabic and Spanish descent, coins words to suit her meaning. She is apt to become lyrical in describing things seen and people encountered in her travels; and yet she has the charm of sincerity and the knack of getting to the heart of things." Spectator

1 Algeria—Descr. & trav. 2 Tunisia—Descr. & trav. 27-27775

Published in England under title: The breath of the desert

"The author's notebook of his travels thru Algeria and Tunisia were the source of the material for this volume. The following brief description of the way the notes were gathered is at once commentary and index. It occurs in the preface: 'notes jotted down or elaborated in hotels, Government offices, native taverns, wayside Moorish cafés and markets; among beggars and the descendants of buccaneers; in palaces, in the houses, huts and tents of Berbers, Kabyles and Arabs; before the mosques; during hunting expeditions on the plains or among peaks of the Jujura; amid Roman or Phoenician ruins or out on the limitless wastes of the Sahara.' " Book rev. digest

Buchanan, Angus

Sahara. 1926 Appleton-Century $7.50; Murray, J. 21s 916.6

1 Sahara—Descr. & trav. 2 Natural history—Sahara [26-13835]

"An intrepid explorer and an accomplished biologist recounts vividly his 3,500 mile journey through the great African desert. He describes his adventures with zest and writes with understanding of the strange tribes he encountered. There are chapters on the birds and animals of the desert. Well illustrated by photographs taken on the expedition. [Map]" Cleveland

"Captain Angus Buchanan is an eloquent talker. He can also write. He succeeds in conveying to us very well the terror of the dead, decaying desert, across which caravans pass like hurried, silent ghosts." New statesman

De La Rue, Sidney

Land of the pepper bird; Liberia. 1930 Putnam $3.50; 15s 916.6

1 Liberia—Descr. & trav. 30-10354

"A former financial adviser of the Republic of Liberia writes entertainingly of its people and their customs, its social and economic problems, and its flora and fauna." Cleveland

"It is evident from the fullness and variety of the information contained in it, and from the fluency with which it is imparted, that it was his pleasure as well as his business to make a thorough study of the country and its inhabitants. Mr. de la Rue provides an answer to any question likely to suggest itself to the general reader. But it needs patience to find the answer. There is no index." Times (London) lit. sup.

Across the Sahara by motor car; with an introduction by André Citroën; tr. from the French by E. E. Fournier d'Albe. 1924 Appleton-Century $3.50 916.6

1 Sahara—Descr. & trav. 2 Algeria—Descr. & trav. 3 Sudan, French—Descr. & trav. 4 Automobiles—Touring 24-25931

"The rough journey across the sands of the Sahara desert from Touggourt to Timbuctoo was made in small caterpillar cars—a cross between motor-car and tank, designed especially for the purpose. The perilous trip involved many . . . trials . . . The full story of the difficult journey, which was accomplished in twenty days, is told by the leaders of the expedition, with numerous illustrations." Book rev. digest

Hall, Leland

1 Timbuktu 27-24122

"With eye, ear and mind open to every impression, the author settled for a few months on the edge of the Sahara, welcoming the Arabs, the Berbers and black men who came to his door. He has written down little stories of his contacts with native life in a leisurely, colorful narrative that has individuality and keen interest. Photographs, map on end papers." N.Y. libraries

"Leland Hall's description of several months residence in Timbuctoo shows sensitive perception and response to beauty, and much sympathetic friendliness towards the native. Such an attitude as his would go far towards overcoming the fear and hatred felt for whites in black countries, and gives the account a pleasant freedom from the subconscious arrogance of many visitors' records." Ossendowski, Ferdynand Antoni

Slaves of the sun. 1928 Dutton $3.75; Allen, G. 16s 916.6

1 Africa, West—Soc. life & cust. 2 Africa, West—Descr. & trav. 28-28578

An account of a journey through the western part of tropical Africa in 1926

"Professor Ossendowski is—as is abundantly proved in his earlier books—a man of action, but in this book he is mainly speculating—conjuring up the mind of the African native and the past and future of his continent; after a reference to the 'expeditions and discoveries of Livingstone and Stanley,' he goes on: 'the only sphere left for me to investigate is that of the souls of various coloured peoples.' He carries out this investigation confidently on lines of his own. Where the idea underlying some story told him or some disclosure of native practices brought out in Courts of law strikes his imagination he invests it with characters, plot, and dialogue and makes it his own." Red carpet on the Sahara. 1925 Jones, Marshall $3.50 916.6

1 Sahara—Descr. & trav. 25-19847

"A charming description of a six-weeks' camel trip across the Sahara Desert made by a Cleveland woman, author of 'The white heart of Mojave.' The beauty of the desert and a sympathetic, vivid picture of Arab life are unfolded. Adults and young people will read this book of travel with pleasure." Cleveland

Seabrook, William Buehler

Air adventure; Paris-Sahara-Timbuctoo. 1933 Harcourt $2.50; Harrap 8s 6d 916.6

1 Aeronautics—Flights 2 Sahara—Descr. & trav. 3 Timbuktu—Descr. 33-10859

"This volume contains the record of the trip by air made by the author, an American woman novelist, and a French flying ace, across the Sahara desert to Timbuctoo and back. The object of the trip was an interview with Père Yakouba, the monk who was introduced to readers of the author's earlier book, 'Jungle Ways.'" Book rev. digest

"Seabrook's verve and his paradox, finding the ordinary in the midst of the unusual, and reversing it at times, have given him his own place among the contemporary travelers. Others have gone to Arabia, Haiti and Africa; some have brought back widely different tales. But when we read one of Seabrook's books, all we care is to see how he makes this particular locale adjust itself to his personality and furnish us a new and jolting sense of physical and psychic adventure." * In brightest Africa. 1923 Doubleday, Page o.p. 1933 916.7

1 Africa, East—Descr. & trav. 2 Gorillas 3 Hunting—Africa 23-17409

"A naturalist's viewpoint and problems make this record of various hunting expeditions one of unusual interest. Not only are the incidents of big game hunting described, but the results of observations of the characteristics of lions, gorillas, and elephants are given, as well as practical explanations of the mounting of specimens for museum groups. . . Illustrations." N.Y. state lib.

"This is one of the best books dealing with big game which has appeared for a long time. Mr Akeley's record of his travels, adventures, and observation of animal life is fascinating." Nation and Athenaeum

* Carl Akeley's Africa. 1929 Dodd $5; Gollancz 18s 916.7

1 Africa, East—Descr. & trav. 2 Hunting—Africa, East 3 Zoology—Africa, East 4 Akeley, Carl Ethan 29-27647

"An account of the Akeley-Eastman-Pomeroy expedition for the American museum of natural history, written by the leader's wife, Mary Akeley, who accompanied her husband. Their hunt for animals on the plains of Africa, and the work of photography and preparation of the skins for preservation and shipment, is fully described, there are also descriptions of the land and its people. At the climax of the trip Mr Akeley was stricken with fever, died, and was buried in the heart of the country he loved. His wife carried on with the expedition, chiefly in the land of the mountain gorilla and in the sanctuary of the Parc National Albert." Book rev. digest

"Her book is one most decidedly worth owning and reading, whether one is vitally interested in Africa or not. In this modern age 'Carl Akeley's Africa' is a unique record of a great man and a great work written by the one person who could do such a task full justice, his wife. That she did not fail is nearly as great a tribute to her husband as it is to her." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

My farm in lion country. 1933 Stokes $3; Hurst 12s 6d 916.7

1 Tanganyika territory—Descr. & trav. 2 Hunting—Africa, Central 3 Lions 33-27385

"Dairy farming in Tanganyika, Central Africa, is an exciting and often dangerous business. Mrs. Boyd gives an animated description of everyday life in a land where elephants stroll across her garden and her Persian kitten enjoys playing tag with a visiting leopard. The book is quite different from other accounts of African life and is written in an informal, engaging style with plenty of humor." Cincinnati

Bradley, Mrs Mary (Hastings)
Caravans and cannibals. 1926 Appleton-Century $5; 21s 916.7

1 Kongo, Belgian—Descr. & trav. 26-21484

The book, "primarily the record of a game trail through a land of mountain cannibals east of Lake Edward, is the outcome of a second African trek . . . She tells us . . . of bush witchcraft and devil dances, of elephant, buffalo and lion hunting, of rubber-gatherers and of gorillas. She herself is so interested in all the strange folk and sights she meets and her subjective impressions are so keen that she makes them live for us quite without any effort of fine writing. [Illustrations and maps]" Literary rev.

"Her little daughter's presence adds a new touch of novelty to a story of adventure that could hardly fail to make good reading on its own account. Mrs. Bradley with her eager curiosity, her pluck and her easy, fluent pen, keeps the interest alive to the last page." New statesman

The author describes her first African trip in an equally interesting way in "On the gorilla trail" (1922 Appleton-Century $5; 21s) It is an account of an expedition into the Eastern Congo to study the gorilla

Kenya days. 1927 Longmans $4.25; Arnold, E. & co. 12s 6d 916.7

1 Kenya Colony and Protectorate—Descr. & trav. [28-28020]

A good book for a library needing material on this region. Good illustrations and map

"Mrs. Buxton explains in the preface to this book that it is written largely as an answer to the many questions which she, as a resident in Kenya, is continually asked . . . The ten chapters include descriptions of Nairobi—two safaris, one in the Masai Reserve and one round Mount Kenya, a tour from Naivasha to Lake Victoria and something on game, house boys, European farms, Kenya houses, and some Kenya tribes. Throughout there is clear evidence of an observant mind and a power of describing what is seen, briefly and charmingly." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Africa, Central—Descr. & trav. 2 Kongo river 29-18538

"No interesting element in African life seems to be omitted from this story of a trip from the west coast to the Indian Ocean—big-game hunting, cannibal tribes, training of elephants, exiled foreigners, even missionaries." Pittsburgh

"In an easy, conversational style the writer tells of the training of wild elephants, the pigmies, with their gentle, lovable natures—far from the deadly savages she has a right to expect, from current report. . . At Nairobi, the journey over, the reader will be as loath to leave as the author was to start for the United States and civilization." Boston Transcript

916.8 SOUTH AFRICA

"South-African geography," by E. H. L. Schwarz (new ed 1927 Blackie & Son 6s) is a small volume in textbook form which will be useful for reference, when such material is needed. In addition to treating South Africa it has a section on general geography and brief sections on other parts of Africa

Coudenhove, Hans
My African neighbors; man, bird, and beast in Nyasaland. 1925 Little $2.50 916.8

1 Nyasaland 25-17364

Also available in the Travellers' library (Smith, P. $1; Cape, J. 3s 6d)

"A close and accurate observer of the habits and traits both of man and beast, writes entertainingly and instructively of his contacts with the natives, the birds and animals of Nyasaland. The accounts of apes and monkeys, white ants and warrior ants, and of his little mongoose, Rikki-Tikki, are as interesting as his revelations concerning the negro mind." N.Y. libraries

Dawson, William Harbutt
South Africa: people, places and problems. 1925 Longmans $5.50; 16s 916.8

1 Africa, South—Descr. & trav. 25-20852

"Mr. Dawson's book is a very comprehensive one, made up in part of a traveler's impressions but to a greater degree, of the seasoned conclusions of a student and historian. The social problems of the South African Union are his chief interest, the relations between the two dominating European races and of both with the natives. The latter question is discussed in the chapter entitled Will South Africa go black? Other chapters take up political and social life, education, types of scenery, gold mines, agricultural conditions, Asiatics in South Africa, right and wrong settlers, and the segregation question. [Illustrated]" Book rev. digest

Kemp, Samuel
Black frontiers; pioneer adventures with Cecil Rhodes in Africa. 1931 Harcourt $3; Harrap 8s 6d 916.8

1 Africa, South—Descr. & trav. 31-32924

"The author when a boy of seventeen went out to South Africa where he took part in the gold rush to Johannesburg in 1886, and later served with Cecil Rhodes's company of mounted police, formed to explore and subdue Matabeleland and Mashonaland. His heroes are Rhodes and Jameson, but he also has a kindly regard for Kruger and the Boers." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Kemp gives us a vivid story of the adventurous days when Johannesburg and Kimberley were in the making and turbulent gold seekers from all over the world rushed to the Rand. It is a book of adventure, but it is also a little footnote to Imperial history." Saturday rev.

Waldo, Fullerton Leonard
Down the Mackenzie through the great lone land. 1923 Macmillan $3; 15s 917.12

1 Mackenzie river 2 Northwest, Canadian—Descr. & trav.
23-7839

"The journey began at Edmonton, Alberta . . . and continued by the Arctic express to the northermost point reached by railway. The route thenceforward was by water, to the Mackenzie and down that river to the frontier post of Fort McPherson at the head of the Mackenzie delta. Like Stefánsson, the author finds his Arctic 'friendly.' He writes with enthusiasm of his experiences and the people he met along the way, of the devoted work of the missionaries and the Gray nuns and the exploits of the Royal Canadian mounted police." Book rev. digest

"The chronicle is lively incidental narrative, rather descriptive than heavily informational, but giving a good impression of the journey, the region along the river and its people and conditions. The reader will not be bored, and he will get a considerable amount of impressional, but apparently accurate, information, but the map is inadequate, and the index sketchy." Springfield Republican

White, Stewart Edward
The forest. 1903 Doubleday, Doran $2 917.13

1 Outdoor life 3-27957

Describes the picturesque wild Canadian country north of Lake Superior

Let no old camper look upon this volume as a treatise on woodcraft, though there is much woodcraft in it. Neither can it be considered a book of travel or description, for the landscape is not defined. It is rather a series of detached impressions of the mystery and charm and wonder of the forest. 1 French-Canadians 2 French in Canada 3 Quebec (Province) 33-25768

Also obtainable from Dent, in Toronto, Canada at $2

"A most sympathetic and well-informed book, illustrated with many good photographs. Mr. Bovey describes the great province of Quebec, recalls its romantic history that began two centuries before Englishmen settled in Canada, and then deals with the French Canadians of today." Spectator

"Mr. Bovey's . . . chief business in this well-documented and profusely illustrated book is to make a plea for the French Canadian. His history of French Canada—particularly those parts of it in which he deals with the influence of religion and the Jesuit missions—is unusually fair to all concerned. Even if the book is not distinguished by a very deep ethnological sense, it shows a rare understanding of 'the most important political minority in the British Commonwealth.'" "His account of the history, the legends, the personalities of the communities he writes about, is the result of unlimited personal observation, as sympathetic as it is delightful. I cannot always share his conclusions as when he likens Tepoztlan to Florence and his adjectives are sometimes too brightly purple for my taste, but the spell of Mexico has been in his blood longer than in mine. It is a book you should read: a book, too, you should look at. Mr. Beals has collected scores of the crisp and charming pen and ink sketches of Diego Rivera to illustrate its pages. And he has much sound common sense in his concluding chapters." Stuart Chase in Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"People of Mexico," by Wallace Thompson (1921 Harper) is another valuable book on Mexico which is also out of print, 1933. Deals with racial history and with conditions and customs of the country

Brenner, Anita

* Your Mexican holiday, a modern guide; il by Carlos Merida. 1932 Putnam $2.50 917.2

1 Mexico—Descr. & trav.—Guide-books 32-17487

"Compiled with the active cooperation of the Mexican authorities and bureaus, this is an up-to-date guide-book to a holiday land that is being discovered annually by more and more Americans. The usual tourist information about railways, routes, etc., is followed by chapters on Mexico City, ancient civilizations, colonial cities, honeymoon places (towns of special beauty), fiestas, arts and crafts, food and drink, agriculture and industry, education, art, hunting and fishing, and automobile highways. A directory is included. [Maps]" Book rev. digest

'Motorists' guide to Mexico" by Michael Scully and Virginia Scully (1933 Southwest press $1.75) is another good guide book. R. H. K. Marett's "Archaeological tours from Mexico ity" (1934 Oxford pa $1.25; Simpkin pa 3s 6d) is a guide to the principal sites of pre-Spanish civilization in Mexico that can be conveniently reached from Mexico city and useful to the prospective visitor

Carpenter, Frank George

Mexico. 1924 Doubleday, Doran to libraries $4 917.2

1 Mexico—Descr. & trav. 2 Mexico—Soc. life & cust. 24-6666

"Like the others of the author's World travel series the book is a readable, lavishly illustrated account of the country and its people. He does not confine himself to descriptions of sights seen in Mexico but links up history with the places described and gives some account of customs, industries, religion, etc." Book rev. digest

1 Mexico—Descr. & trav. 2 Mexico—Soc. life & cust. 3 Mexico—Civilization 31-27256

"Mr Chase says that the purpose of his book is to create an understanding between 'old family Americans and their parvenu cousins' on the other side of the Rio Grande. The two civilizations are compared—the one based on handicraft, the other on the machine; then, taking Tepoztlan, a town of 4,000 people, as typical of the Mexico of today, Mr Chase shows how a machineless community lives, as contrasted with our 'Middletown.'" Book rev. digest

"With its implications, this is one of the most vital and thought-provoking books of our time. It is elaborated with a variety of data concerning Mexican Indian life, enriched with vivid glimpses of the charm, color, variety, and picturesque uniqueness of the Mexican scene. . . Mr. Chase's obvious purpose has been adequately fulfilled, and he has made a unique and invaluable contribution to current enlightenment. The salient conclusion is that Mexico has far more to give to the United States that we to Mexico." Sat. rev. of lit.

Viva Mexico! 1908 Appleton-Century $2; 8s 6d 917.2

1 Mexico—Descr. & trav. 8-28075

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Appleton dollar library

"An entertaining book in which the author with unrestrained frankness quaintly discusses Mexican things that interest him. It touches upon social, religious, political, and business topics, and handles them all in bold, independent fashion and with as much carefulness as a writer with a whimsical and somewhat humorous disposition could be expected to exhibit." Redfield, Robert Tepoztlan, a Mexican village. (Univ. of Chicago pub. in anthropology. Ethnological ser.) 1930 Univ. of Chicago press $3; Cambridge univ. press 13s 6d 917.2

1 Tepoztlán, Mexico 2 Ethnology—Mexico 3 Mexico—Soc. life & cust. 30-15556

"A study of the daily round of life in a modern Mexican village, showing that the inhabitants constitute an intermediate group between tribal and city types of life. The author provides a carefully documented account of this pueblo, its communal organization, its methods of labor, its customs, medicine and magic, clothes, cookery and land tenure, and tells how its inhabitants live and die. (Illustrations and map)" Book rev. digest

"Redfield's book is intensive and pioneering—the first modern, thorough investigation of a typical Mexican village. 'Tepoztlán' is of far greater importance for a proper understanding of Mexico than nearly all the books on political and institutional life which have appeared in English, though special attention should be called to Gruening's 'Mexico and Its Heritage.' 'Tepoztlán' is worthy to be included among the best scientific works written on Mexico." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 Yucatan—Descr. & trav. 2 Yucatan—Antiq. 3 Mayas [25-6042]

"Dr. Gann, British archaeologist and fellow of the Maya society, gives an informal account of an expedition to Yucatan to study the ruined cities of the Mayas. Together with descriptions of the ancient civilization as revealed in its ruins are stories of the strange customs of the natives to-day." Pittsburgh

"Dr. Gann tells his story well, treating with an excellent humour those incidents of travel which are so exasperating in the experience and so amusing in the recollection. The early history of the region is well set forth in the form of a commentary which never becomes wearisome." Times (London) lit. sup.

Koebel, William Henry

Central America. (South American ser. v9) 1917 Scribner $4.50; Benn 15s 917.28

1 Central America [18-1581]

"Mr. Koebel . . . deals in this work with Guatemala, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras, Panama, and Salvador. His method is to trace the history, geographical features, and industries of Central America as a whole, and then to particularize by dealing specially with the individual states. The book is well illustrated. [Map]." Spectator

Another good book on this region is Wallace Thompson's "Rainbow countries of Central America" (1926 Dutton $3) which is half description of the country and the ruins of past civilizations, and half historical, social and economic information. Publisher reports out of stock, 1933

* Magic island. 1929 Harcourt $3.50; Harrap 5s 917.29

1 Haiti—Soc. life & cust. 2 Voodooism 3 Witchcraft 4 Negroes in Haiti 29-2970

"A fascinating study of the primitive superstitions of the natives of Haiti. Fantastically illustrated." Wis. bul.

"We are given brief but eminently impartial appraisals of the American occupation and what it has accomplished; kindly, humorous sketches of the poets and politicians constituting the black 'haute monde' of the capital city, and just enough of the history of this proud and bloody island to afford a background of understanding." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Strode, Hudson

* Story of Bermuda. 1932 Smith, H. $5 917.29

1 Bermuda islands—2 Architecture, Domestic 32-32888

"Professor Strode serves up its early history with gusto. Then, being himself a professor of English, he calls forth the roster of writers who have been there and felt its charm. From Tom Moore to Mark Twain they have been dithyrambic about it. Having called his witnesses to prove his superlatives justified, the author gives us a fascinating account of this paradise—its architecture, its gardens, its weather, its strange but delightful conservatism." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Terry, Thomas Philip

Terry's guide to Cuba including the Isle of Pines; with a chapter on the ocean routes to the island. rev ed 1929 Houghton $3.50; Black, A. & C. 16s 917.29

1 Cuba—Descr. & trav.—Guide-books 29-29710

A reliable up-to-date guidebook, which contains general information about the island, a detailed guide to Havana, and plans for twenty excursions from Havana to adjacent points of interest. The 1929 edition adds information about air routes

Van Dyke, John Charles

In the West Indies. 1932 Scribner $2; 8s 6d 917.29

1 West Indies—Descr. & trav. 2 Caribbean sea 32-3265

"Travel sketches of the West Indies and other islands of the Caribbean. The author has purposely written of these lands pictorially, rather than politically, economically or socially, but the economic conditions of the black man and the possibility of help for him thru diversified farming have held his interest thruout. Maps on end papers." Book rev. digest

"Isles of romance" by G. A. England (1929 Appleton-Century $3.50; 12s 6d) describes interesting sights and customs of islands of the Atlantic coast, from the St Lawrence to the Caribbean

Verrill, Alpheus Hyatt

* Cuba of today. 1931 Dodd $2.50 917.29

1 Cuba—Descr. & trav. 2 Havana—Descr. 31-1371

"The author's 'Cuba past and present' is supplanted by this book, which, like the former one, is both historical and descriptive. It is a guide for tourists, warning them of the drawbacks as well as describing the pleasures of Cuban travel. The author advises travelers to take their own cars and devotes a chapter to motor travel." Bkl.

Contains illustrations from photographs and maps

In the wake of the buccaneers. 1923 Appleton-Century $4 917.29

1 Caribbean sea 2 West Indies—Descr. & trav. 3 Buccaneers 23-5451

"Affords an entertaining description of little-known islands and towns of the West Indies, and blended with this is a series of thrilling tales of freebooting activities that took place over three centuries ago in the regions visited by the author." Literary rev.

"The result of a cruise in a modern pirate ship, tracking pirate stories and relics . . . Told in a breezy, buccaneering way and beautifully illustrated." M. L. Becker

Jamaica of today. 1931 Dodd $2.50 917.29

1 Jamaica—Descr. & trav. 31-29917

"A convenient volume to supplement a guide, having a historical sketch and readable chapters on Kingston, touring the country by automobile, fruits and flowers, forests and wild-life, practical information about towns, etc." Pittsburgh

West Indies of today. 1931 Dodd $2.50 917.29

1 West Indies—Descr. & trav. 31-25406

The book describes the smaller and less well known islands of the West Indies: the lesser Antilles, including the Virgin Islands; the Leeward Islands; the Bahamas; Barbados; Curaçao; Guadeloupe; Martinique; the Windwards; and others. The author treats the islands separately. Includes a condensed glossary of the West Indies. Illustrated

The author's more comprehensive "Book of the West Indies" (1917 Dutton $4) covers the larger islands as well as the smaller ones, but since it was published in 1917 the information is not now up-to-date

1 Gonave island 2 Voodooism 3 Haiti—Soc. life & cust. 31-26895

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"Faustin Wirkus, a young Polish-American from the Pennsylvania coal mines joined the marines and was sent to Haiti during the early days of the American occupation. Sent to La Gonave, a lonely island off Port au Prince, as resident district commander, his intelligent handling of their affairs won him the friendship of the natives, and they crowned him emperor, with Voodoo rites. [Illustrations and map]" Book rev. digest

"Extraordinarily interesting story told with warm detail and great vividness. It is a good book." Arthur Ruhl in Sat. rev. of lit.

1 U.S.—Civilization 2 National characteristics, American 3 U.S.—Soc. condit. 29-25482

Published in England with title: Searchlight on America

"Bitter medicine but decidedly tonic are these essays on 'some aspects of American culture' which the author feels are the, on the whole, deplorable result of America's business man's civilization. Of special interest are 'The cost of prosperity,' 'Our dissolving ethics,' 'Mass production and intellectual production' and 'The art of living.' Mr. Adams is the author of various American histories." Cleveland

Provincial society, 1690-1763. (History of American life) 1927 Macmillan $4; 20s 917.3

1 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. 2 U.S.—Civilization 27-24316

"A vivid portrayal of American life during the Pre-Revolutionary period, in which bits from old newspapers, memoirs and early travels are fused by a brilliant and witty style into a smoothly flowing narrative." Cleveland

"Very readable and illuminating is this third volume in a series of 12 which is to cover, when complete, 1492-1927. The aim of the series is to trace the evolution of civilization in the United States. Each volume is written by a specialist in its particular period, and attention is called to the illustrations, all carefully selected from contemporary material." N.Y. state lib.

Beard, Charles Austin

* (ed.) Century of progress. 1933 Harper $3 917.3

1 U.S.—Civilization 2 U.S.—Econ. condit. 3 Progress 4 Inventions—Hist. 5 Science—Hist. 33-23949

Articles by twenty-five specialists on achievements and tendencies in American life during the past hundred years. Partial contents: Idea of progress, by C. A. Beard; Invention as a social manifestation, by Waldemar Kaempffert; Process of social transformation, by Jane Addams; Advancement of natural science, by Watson Davis; The arts, by Fiske Kimball; Literature, by John Erskine

"Taken as a whole the book is a singularly well-balanced compendium, free of overlapping and exhibiting distinguished competence. . . Mr. Beard's book is more than a monumental record of achievement notwithstanding that achievement is its main theme. It is also an indication of gaps in the American structure, of things to be done and problems to be solved. The combination has rarely been so successfully worked out." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Beard, Mrs Mary (Ritter)

* (ed.) America through women's eyes. 1933 Macmillan $3.50 917.3

1 Women in the U.S. 2 U.S.—Soc. condit. 3 U.S.—Hist. 33-22168

A collection of extracts from letters, journals and books written by American women illustrating the share women have had in the development of American civilization from colonial times to the present

"Obviously such an attempt as this must be fragmentary and the extracts vary greatly in value and interest. There are some rather remarkable omissions. . . But this is a stimulating book, in spite of these defects and a somewhat over-official atmosphere. Like most anthologies, it arouses in the reader a desire to make his own anthology on somewhat different lines. It calls attention to a rich field of interest and research in American life." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Beer, Thomas

The mauve decade; American life at the end of the nineteenth century. 1926 Knopf $3.50: Cassell 12s 6d 917.3

1 American literature—Hist. & crit. 2 U.S.—Intellectual life 3 U.S.—Civilization 26-9922

"In a book brimming with color and vitality and lacking no illustrative detail which it was possible to gather from books, unpublished letters or oral tradition, Mr Beer has depicted the period of the nineties in America. Stroke on stroke, he brings to life its women, morals, politics, society, literature, the West, the Irish—the personalities and the state of mind of the period—and dramatizes them all." Book rev. digest

"As a review of a period 'The Mauve Decade' is prejudiced, no doubt, but always stimulating and lively; it presents a crowded scene with knowledge and humour, and contains odd bits of information that the social historian may loot later on." Times (London) lit. sup.

Bowden, Robert Douglas

In defense of tomorrow. 1931 Macmillan $2; 10s 917.3

1 U.S.—Civilization 2 U.S.—Soc. condit. 31-30546

"An optimistic review of American civilization which discusses religion and culture, politics and government, education, art and literature, and social relations to discover its future outcome." Pratt quarterly

"The author is quite correct in his objections to the popularistic muckrakers and calamity howlers. His treatment is sane, in good taste, and, on the whole, well balanced. Happily, it is quite devoid of Pollyannian or Rotarian ecstasy. But it is very definitely and frankly an attempt to show the 'silver lining' of Western civilization, and, as such, is no more scientific than Spengler and others whom the author criticizes." Brownell, William Crary
Democratic distinction in America. 1927 Scribner $2.50 917.3
1 National characteristics, American 2 Democracy 27-25380
"In considering this vast subject of American characteristics, the author, in a manner somewhat historical, traces the trend of democratic feeling, shows our basic traits, temper, humor, sentiment, and tradition; and, with these factors as a basis, he points the way toward better educational training and popular culture . . . Here is no book for the casual reader; but one that should stimulate the mind and broaden the scope of cultural attention. Mr. Brownell is profound. He has written a book that is in more than adequate keeping with his excellent suggestions." Boston Transcript

1 U.S.—Historic houses, etc. 2 Boston—Historic houses, etc. 3 New York (City)—Historic houses, etc. 4 Philadelphia—Historic houses, etc. 5 U.S.—Hist.—Revolution 28-695
"Trips from Boston, New York and Philadelphia to Revolutionary spots, whereon the author proves herself to be a very good guide in a chatty, informal manner. In filling in the background, the author has relied mostly on Fiske. 'A bag of books,' at the end, suggests some more explicit and specialized guide-books on the same subject. There are many illustrations." Providence
"She has woven into her narrative here an anecdote and there a description, now an allusion and again a bit of historical chronicle with the result that her book has interest if not much significance. It should prove a pleasant commentary for those who are covering the routes she describes." Sat. rev. of lit.
M. C. Crawford's "Romantic days in the early republic" (1912 Little o.p. 1933) contains entertaining descriptions of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and other cities at this period, and the social life of the time

1 U.S—Hist.—Addresses, essays, lectures 2 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. 3 Washington, George 25-19574

"A five-page bibliography shows how wide and thorough has been Mr. Faris's search for his material and the book itself is evidence enough of the ingenuity and the care with which he has classified and pieced together the enormous number of excerpts culled from the many sources consulted. There are sixteen chapters dealing with as many phases of early American life. . . . The volume is profusely illustrated, many of the pictures being from old prints, and its front end-papers is a reproduction of a map of early post routes." N.Y. Times

1 U.S.—Civilization 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 3 National characteristics, American 4 U.S.—Intellectual life 29-3157

"A study of the United States by a distinguished Frenchman (in collaboration with an American) less minute in treatment than Siegfried's 'America comes of age.' Following a brief critical history of American government, there are reviewed the significant qualities of American life today as seen in business, politics, the press, churches, education, etc. The authors sound a note of warning in regard to 'the hateful fear of America' in Europe." 1 U.S.—Soc. condit. 2 U.S.—Econ. condit. 3 U.S.—Civilization 27-24315

"Professor Fish treats a period in our history, when a vigorous population dreamed of starting a new civilization beyond the Appalachians. He shows how the new appreciation of the rights of the plain people wrought a revolution in political life, in manners, religion, and reform." Chicago

"An interesting and valuable piece of work. Though it contains much that is common knowledge to those who may have read ever so little on the period, it assembles much to be found only in out of-the-way places." Amer. hist. rev.

Frank, Waldo David

Re-discovery of America; an introduction to a philosophy of American life. 1929 Scribner $3; 12s 6d 917.3

1 U.S.—Civilization 29-6953

"This criticism of American life and culture analyzes its European background, its gods and cults, art, leaders, and the spirit of the people. Out of the confusion of the 'American jungle,' Waldo Frank tries to discover a direction for the growth of a creative American life." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Frank carries along an imposing amount of intellectual luggage, and stops again and again to assort and display it. Merely as an intellectual tour de force the book is inspiring, and if the pace is breathless and the work itself 'almost fleshless and with no smiles or pleasant moods at all,' the expedition, once begun, remains fascinating to the end." * On wandering wheels. 1928 Dodd o.p. 1933 917.3

1 Atlantic states—Descr. & trav. 28-29806

"The authors, English artists who have written and illustrated several other delightful travel books, bought a 1920 model sedan and set out to see a slice of America. The car, christened the Happy Hearse, took them thru Eastern North America from Maine to Savannah, by way of Pennsylvania and Kentucky, and back by way of the Carolinas. The end maps are unique, showing the salient points of the trip, not geographically but socially. A book that will be read in any library." Wis. bul.

"Shrewd, sensible, slyly humorous, cheerfully tolerant, they see and report on everything from artists' colonies to cotton fields, and discover much that is still picturesque in the American rural scene. The illustrations, in black and white and color, are charming." Outlook

Airways of America; guide book no. 1: United air lines. 1933 Geographical press $2.50 917.3

1 Airways—U.S. 2 U.S.—Descr. & trav.—Guide-books 3 Physical geography—U.S. 4 Geology—U.S. 5 U.S.—Descr. & trav.—Maps (33-29117)

"A geological and geographic description of the transcontinental air route from New York to Chicago and San Francisco. The route is divided into thirty-nine sections, for each one of which a route map, or bird's eye diagram has been prepared. The descriptions of the maps are intended to be read during flight across the region but they are of interest also for the reader on land. The book has chapters on the physiographic provinces of the United States, on the agricultural areas and vegetation regions, and on the climatic and seasonal aspects of the air route. Bibliography. Index. Map in pocket." Book rev. digest

"Invaluable as 'Airways of America' will prove as a companion on the air journey from coast to coast, it will have a still wider sphere of usefulness. The photographs and diagrams, the great variety of physiographic types, the instances of agricultural adaptations will make it welcome among the students of geography on the ground." "Mr. Mumford's 'golden day' is the period of Emerson, Thoreau, Whitman, Hawthorne, and Melville, whom the author regards as the formulators of the only real and indigenous American culture. He also considers the pioneer period, the post-Civil War period, and the opening of the 20th Century." Pittsburgh

"Treating our imaginative literature and our philosophy as a key to our culture, Mr. Mumford has composed a history of the American mind that is likewise an account of the principal experiences by which that mind has been nourished. It is an admirable piece of exposition, skilfully organized and lucidly presented." Sat. rev. of lit.

Henry James's "American scene" (1907 Harper o.p. 1933) is an analysis of the impression made by American civilization when the author revisited this country after 25 years absence

A new chapter of 14 pages, "Impressions of post-war America, 1927-28," by J. A. Spender

has been added in the 1931 printing and the bibliography has been enlarged

The editor's "intention in this compilation was to select characteristic and interesting passages from the books of twenty-five or thirty of the ablest British travellers and arrange them to give a view of the development of American Society from Washington's day to Harding's . . . [and] with these selections . . . to combine an account of the circumstances under which the various travellers came to the United States, the changes which have taken place in the British attitude toward America, and the reception which the Americans accorded their chief British commentators." Preface

"A compilation of this kind is too often superficial and incoherent; in the present instance it is highly successful, thanks to good judgment and good editing." Times (London) lit. sup.

Roundabout America. 2v in 1 1933 Harper $3.50 917.3

1 U.S.—Descr. & trav. 33-11156

Also obtainable in two volumes at $2 each

"For young or old, this is the only book of its kind; a trip around the country, North, South, East and West, by motor, autobus, steamer, train, plane or what have you. Conditions being as they are, it is unlikely that two young women will start out on a similar enterprise for some time to come. . . The pictures are, of course, an important feature. . . Fortunately for the length of the book, the authors do not take time off to set down personal adventures of the discursive sort; they keep to their route and record only the impressions of bright-eyed and sympathetic sightseers." From here to yender; early trails and highway life. 1932 Dutton $3.75 917.3

1 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. 32-19472

"An historical picture of the trails and highways which went 'from here to yender' thru New England and New York during the seventeenth, eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries. The author describes not only the highways themselves but also the conveyances which passed over them, the ox-carts, stage coaches, covered wagons, and gigs, and the people who rode in them and their modes of living. There is a chapter on roadside burial grounds, and one on pedlars and their wares." Book rev. digest

Published in England under the title: The America of today

"The English and the American titles taken together—the America of today through English eyes—exactly describe the book. Following his second and recent visit to the United States Mr Spender, long editor of the now unhappily defunct Westminster Gazette, writes this book of contrasts, describing American life, interests and activities against the background of his own experience of their English counterparts." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Spender has written the best book about the United States which we have read for a very long time. We expected something more than the fleeting impressions of a great journalist, and Mr. Spender has not disappointed us." Spectator

* Abroad at home; American ramblings, observations and adventures. 1916 Appleton-Century $5 917.3

1 U.S.—Descr. & trav. 2 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. 16-7843

"The author, with Mr. Wallace Morgan the artist as his companion, set out from New York to visit the United States. Mr. Street has written about it, and Mr. Morgan has added pictures that illuminate Mr. Street's text. Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City, and San Francisco were visited and each is described and differentiated, for the two travelers found that each had characteristics and a personality of its own. They were interested chiefly in cities; the country is viewed largely from the train window." Book rev. digest

Puritan's progress. 1931 Scribner $3.50; 12s 6d 917.3

1 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. 2 Puritans 31-26543

"Arthur Train's perusal of his own family history—and of the Puritan inheritance which has been handed down from one generation to another—led him to write this history of social progress under the shadow of a stern tradition. Using his family tree as a framework, he traces the evolution of the Puritan mind, from decade to decade, thru the past one hundred and fifty years of American history." Book rev. digest

"An engaging book, just personal enough to make us sure of actualities; filled with historical episodes that did not get into the school histories, with the asides out of which we learn more about the old-timers than they told themselves." N.Y. World

Trollope, Mrs Frances (Milton)

1 U.S.—Soc. life & cust. [27-19767]

"A reprint from the fifth (1839) edition. Mrs. Trollope, the mother of Anthony Trollope, didn't enjoy her four years in the United States. In fact her experiences here were undoubtedly unpleasant, and probably justified her caustic comments upon our lack of culture and general crudeness." Chicago

Another book of an early period by a foreign author who visited this country is Frederika Bremmer's "America of the fifties; ed by A. B. Benson" (1924 Am.-Scandinavian foundation $2; Allen, G. 11s). It is a collection of letters, mostly to her sister, written when she was travelling in the United States 1849-51. They were first published in this country in 1853 under the title "Homes of the new world"

1 New York (City)—Foreign population 2 New York (City)—Soc. condit. 24-26898

"The author, who for twenty years has made a study of every nook and corner of New York, gives a description of the twenty or more nationalities living between the East River and the Hudson on Manhattan Island. Being a linguist, he formed intimate association with these people, listening to their tales of joy and woe, eating their food and taking part in their amusements. The book is a surprise even for those well acquainted with New York. The illustrations are in keeping with the spirit of the text." St Louis

The author's "Manhattan side-show" (1931 Appleton-Century $4; 18s) contains anecdotes of life in New York and of New York personalities

Colonial days in old New York. 1896 Scribner o.p. 1933 917.471

1 New York (City)—Soc. life & cust. 2 New York (City)—Hist. 1-15834

"This book should perhaps have been 'intituled' Colonial days in New Netherlands, for much of the life described herein was in the days of Dutch rule." Preface

Contents: Life of a day; Education and child-life; Wooing and wedding; Town life; Dutch town homes; Dutch farmhouses; Dutch larder; Dutch vrouws; Colonial wardrobe; Holidays; Amusements and sports; Crimes and punishments; Church and Sunday in old New York; "The end of his days"

Irwin, William Henry

Highlights of Manhattan. 1927 Appleton-Century $6 917.471

1 New York (City)—Descr. 27-23036

"Mr Irwin knows and loves his New York and as he guides the reader from Bowling Green to the Barnard Cloisters he shares his enthusiasm for this or that view, and furnishes interesting bits of human history about a home here, a public building or a park there. Mr Suydam's pencilled drawings delightfully illustrate the book." Book rev. digest

Morand, Paul

New York. 1930 Holt $2.50; Heinemann 7s 6d 917.471

1 New York (City)—Descr. 30-31141

Translated by Hamish Miles with illustrations by Joaquin Vaquero

"A vivid, impressionistic interpretation of New York, by a visiting Frenchman. He saw it all, from the Battery to the Harlem night clubs, but altho his observations were made as late as 1929, the publishers have found it necessary to add foot notes to mark changes in the appearance of the city. Sophisticated, traveled readers will particularly enjoy it, altho it might serve as a guide for any visitor to the city." Wis. bul.

Nutting, Wallace
Pennsylvania beautiful (eastern). (States beautiful ser.) 1924 Old America co. $4
917.48

1 Pennsylvania—Descr. & trav. 25-2571

"Mr. Nutting has made a picture-book of Pennsylvania . . . With his camera he has followed Pocono's creeks to their hidden falls; neglecting the monuments of the Philadelphia region, he has made discoveries of his own in old Zionsville and in the modern canal-side colony at New Hope. His genius lies in the book. The text rambles through collections of the Conestoga wagons which came from the banks of the stream he pictures, and reflections upon the Pennsylvanian's passion for iron work." N.Y. Tribune

Travels. (American bookshelf) 1928 Macy-Masius o.p. 1933 917.5

1 Southern states—Descr. & trav. 2 Indians of North America—Southern states 28-3822

"This classic of American literature was first published in Philadelphia in 1791. William Bartram, a botanist who traveled widely for specimens, was the son of John Bartram whose botanical garden, the first established in America, is now preserved in Philadelphia as a city park. Bartram's famous book, describing his travels in the Carolinas, Georgia and Florida, is given in these pages without abridgment. It is largely concerned with natural history and abounds in descriptions of forest life. It is also valuable as an original authority on the Southern Indians and as an account of the manners, customs and government of the tribes visited." Book rev. digest

Kephart, Horace

Our southern highlanders. new and enl ed 1922 Macmillan $3 917.5

1 Mountain whites (Southern states) 22-21761

"In the present edition I have . . . continued the story of moonshining to the present day, and have added three new chapters." Preface to the revised edition

"Sympathetic description of the life and customs of the uncouth, uneducated mountaineers who, living in the southern Appalachian region, are shut off from the outside world. A bear hunt, the habits of 'moonshiners' and the spirit which engenders violent feuds are interestingly treated, and much information concerning a people of whom little is known is given. Excellent photographic reproductions and map." Wis. bul.

Odum, Howard Washington

American epoch; southern portraiture in the national picture. 1930 Holt $3.50 917.5

1 Southern states—Civilization 2 Southern states—Soc. condit. 30-27845

This study of the development of the South is presented thru "four generations of southern Americans whose changing cultures have provided the most dramatic episodes in our national history, whose backgrounds and experiences comprehend all of the basic elements in the architecture of modern civilization." Preface

"The title of the work discloses Odum's theme but gives no indication of the charm with which he tells the story of the part the South has played and is playing in the civilization of America. The old South is redrawn, perhaps overdrawn on the romantic side, but the paradoxes and the culture that were the ante-bellum South are well portrayed." Current history

Old South; essays social and political. 1892 Scribner $2 917.5

1 Southern states 2 Virginia—Soc. life & cust. 3-31223

Contents: Old South; Authorship in the South before the war; Glimpses of life in colonial Virginia; Social life in old Virginia before the war; Old colonial places; Old Virginia lawyer; Want of a history of the southern people; Negro question

"The book owes its significance to the fact that the author is descended from a distinguished Virginia family, and has had special opportunities to absorb the traditions of southern life. Moreover, he has made a careful study of old records . . . While he recognizes the faults of the old regime, the author generally presents only the brighter side." Pittsburgh

"The author and her husband, accompanied by their dog, with their small equipment in a marvelous homemade cart named Sisyphus, spent several months tramping and camping in the southern mountains of the United States. These sketches are concerned with their experiences, both grave and gay, during the trip. [Illustrations]" Book rev. digest

"The language of the mountaineers, their rich, strange seventeenth century English is not so rhythmically treated as by Maristan Chapman or Lucy Furman. But the character sketches, the brief, vivid accounts of incidents, sad, melodramatic, and absurd are lovely." Outlook

Tannenbaum, Frank

Darker phases of the South. 1924 Putnam $2.50; 10s 917.5

1 Southern states—Soc. condit. 24-2302

"In his consideration of social conditions in the South, the author studies the reasons for the significance and dominance of the Ku Klux klan; the conditions of mill villages and workers; southern prisons and chain gangs; the curse of the single crop—cotton—which is not only king but tyrant; and the race problem." Book rev. digest

"His interpretation of the South in its industrial and race relationships is full of understanding for the way in which different attitudes have arisen and survive the social and economic changes now taking place. He does not condemn, he explains; and, for the most part, his explanations are historically and psychologically convincing. The last chapter of the book, containing suggestions for solutions of some of the outstanding problems of the South, is most stimulating but not altogether satisfying." Survey

"The author writes of his boyhood in the Ozark mountains. Home life and occupations, school, singing school and debating society, courtings and weddings, barbecues, camp meetings, country school teaching—these are the substance of a story that is rich in American folk flavor. An attractively made book, with appropriate woodcut illustrations." Wis. bul.

"There is no attempt at style in the book and no trace of fine writing; the mountaineers are seen clearly and without prejudice . . . Older Americans who were once familiar with the life depicted by Mr. Hogue in his agreeable and interesting autobiography will find his book well worth reading; younger ones will discover in it a truthful account of how another generation found life good without many trimmings." "Southwest Missouri and northwest Arkansas is the Ozark area. The 'mountains' are only hills, but they are rugged enough to furnish cover within which have been preserved some of the aspects of the American frontier society of a hundred years ago. In 'The Ozarks,' Mr Randolph gives a vivid and veracious account of the customs, industries, manner of life, sports, speech and songs of the Ozark hillman. He is himself no 'furriner,' for he has spent enough time there to be accepted as a native." Christian century

James, Will

Cowboys north and south. 1924 Scribner $1.75; 7s 6d 917.8

1 Cowboys 24-23378

"Spirited drawings with text written in an unspoiled vernacular. The author says 'I was born and raised in the cow country, I am a cowboy and what's put down in these pages is not material that I've hunted up, it's what I've lived, seen, and went through before I ever had any idea that my writings and sketches would ever appear before the public.' Reprinted from 'Scribner's' and 'Saturday Evening Post.'" Wis. bul.

Drifting cowboy. 1925 Scribner $1.75; 7s 6d 917.8

1 Cowboys 25-21273

"A notable successor to his 'Cowboys, North and South.' Mr. James tells his stories exceedingly well, his use of the vernacular being especially admirable, but it is in his drawings that he runs off with all the prizes. They are as chock full of action as an outlaw pony upon the touch of the hated spur; as vigorously alive as a young bronc on a frosty morning." Bookman

The author's "Cow country" (1927 Scribner $1.75; 7s 6d) is another collection of cowboy yarns illustrated with the author's inimitable drawings. More experiences of this cowboy artist are found in his "All in the day's riding" (1933 Scribner $2.50; 10s 6d)

Overland trail; the epic path of the pioneers to Oregon. 1929 Stokes $3.50 917.8

1 Oregon trail 2 The West—Descr. & trav. 3 Overland journeys to the Pacific 4 Frontier and pioneer life 29-28794

"This is a single consecutive narrative only in so far as it follows the course of the trail. More accurately it is an interesting collection of story and legend gathering about the trail. Somewhat journalistic in style. The illustrations contribute to the historical value." Wis. bul.

Pilgrims of the Santa Fe. 1931 Stokes $3.50 917.8

1 Santa Fé trail 2 Southwest, New 31-25892

"The author writes of the successive waves of migration that passed southward toward Santa Fe—the Spanish conquerors, the French traders, the Mormons, the American army, the gold seekers, and finally the railroad builders. Rich in anecdote and story." Wis. bul.

Lummis, Charles Fletcher

* Mesa, cañon and pueblo. 1925 Appleton-Century $5 917.8

1 Southwest, New—Descr. & trav. 25-18070

"The author emphasizes the historical and exploratory side rather than the natural beauties of the places visited, his knowledge of the Spanish conquerors making the chapters on their exploits extremely interesting. Best of all are the accounts of strange customs among the various Indian tribes." Literary rev.

Based on the author's "Some strange corners of our country." Well illustrated and provided with maps and useful bibliographies

Another interesting book by this author is "Flowers of our lost romance" (1929 Houghton $4) It contains nine stories of Spanish and Indian life in the Southwest

Rollins, Philip Ashton
The cowboy. 1922 Scribner $2.50 917.8
1 Cowboys 2 Frontier and pioneer life 3 The West—Soc. life & cust. 22-8713

"Describes in conscientious detail the evolution of ranching and the everyday life of the cowboy and shows his share in the development of the West. Not especially well written, but valuable as an accurate picture of a vanishing type too often romantically misrepresented." Cleveland

Santee, Ross
* Cowboy. (Juveniles of distinction) Grosset $1 917.8
1 Cowboys 2 Ranch life 28-20230

Satisfactory cheap reprint of a book published by Cosmopolitan book corporation in 1928

"At six the author ran away to become a cowboy; at twelve he tried again; at fifteen his father outfitted him and let him go. Heart and soul were bound in that life. His experiences are described with careful accuracy, in racy vernacular, and the account is a picture of real cowboy life, splendidly done. The illustrations by the author are notable. Young people, as well as old, will enjoy this." Bkl.

The author's "Men and horses" (1926 Appleton-Century $3) is another well-illustrated book of stories of cowboy life

Saunders, Charles Francis

Powell, John Wesley
First through the Grand canyon. (Outing adventure library) 1915 Macmillan $2 917.91
1 Colorado river 2 Grand canyon 3 U.S.—Exploring expeditions 15-18649

"Major Powell's report on this first exploration of the Colorado River was published by the Smithsonian institution in 1875. Together with the scientific data appended, it forms a large quarto volume, which is now out of print. The narrative part is here republished without abridgement." Introduction

"The thrilling story of Major Powell's exploration of the Grand canyon of the Colorado (1869-70), the first known descent of that river by boat, has been buried for many years in government documents. Horace Kephart, editor of the series in which it now appears, calls the trip 'one of the most hazardous adventures in the history of exploration.'" Review of reviews

F. S. Dellenbaugh's "Romance of the Colorado River" (3d ed 1909 Putnam o.p. 1933) gives the history of the river including accounts of Major Powell's voyages. The story of a more recent trip taken in 1923 in the same region is told in L. R. Freeman's "Down the Grand Canyon" (1924 Dodd $3.50)

"Brief description of the Grand canyon country for tourists. Takes up the geology, exploration, Indians and wild life of the region." Book rev. digest

"It is a book of experience, a very able book, a contribution to the study of geography, and also a magically beautiful human document. It must be taken as complementary to Dellenbaugh's 'A Canyon Voyage,' and the two should be read together. The title the author has given his work has a guide book tang, but it is no mere book for those whose ambition it is to say they have seen. It is a distinctly well-written and interesting essay." James, George Wharton
1 Utah 2 Mormons and Mormonism 22-9635

"In treating of Utah the author attempts, according to the condensed summary on the title page, to give 'the story of its desert wastes, of its huge and fantastic rock formations, and of its fertile gardens in the sheltered valleys; a survey of its rapidly developing industries; an account of the origin, development, and beliefs of the Mormon Church; and chapters on the flora and fauna, and on the scenic wonders.' This summary is complete but for references to Utah's educational and literary interests, and her artistic development. The book is profusely illustrated, partly in color, and has a colored insert map of Utah, a bibliography and an index." Book rev. digest

"Any account of the settlement and development of Utah must present in more or less detail a study of Mormonism. This phase of the story of Utah, Mr. James has examined carefully and with an open mind. And he presents his data with an admirable impartiality as far removed from any taint of 'propaganda' as it is from prejudice." Boston Transcript

"When, in 1900, a straying burro led its master to a rich deposit of silver and gold in the Southwestern desert, there began the last of the West's wild mining days. This book is a record of the mining camps of Tonopah, Goldfield, Rhyolite, and Rawhide and of the men who made and lost fortunes and reputations there during the decade that followed. The author has gathered his material in part from old newspaper files, but in larger part from the lips of the men themselves." Book rev. digest

James, George Wharton

1 California—Descr. & trav. 14-19629

"The history of its old missions and of its Indians; a survey of its climate, topography, deserts, mountains, rivers, valleys, islands and coast line; a description of its recreations and festivals; a review of its industries; an account of its influence upon prophets, poets, artists and architects; and some reference to what it offers of delight to the automobilist, traveller, sportsman, pleasure and health seeker." Subtitle

"The abundant and excellent illustrations combined with the persuasive text, make it a potent tract for the region and an entertaining one." Nation

In and out of the old missions of California. new and rev ed 1927 Little $4.50 917.94

1 Spanish missions of California 2 Missions —California 3 Indians of North America—California 4 Franciscans in California 27-5828

In this new edition "additional data, bringing the work up to date, will be found at the end of several chapters, notably the final one on 'The preservation of the missions.'" Contains many excellent illustrations

"This interesting volume covers a broad field successfully. It begins with the founding of the California missions, then gives a chapter upon Junipero Serra and his coadjutors, followed by a discussion of the Indians at the coming of the padres and at the present time . . . Perhaps the most distinctive feature of the volume is its treatment of mission architecture and interior decoration." Book rev. digest

The author's "Old Franciscan missions of California" (new ed 1925 Little $2) is "in most of its pages a mere condensation" of his larger work

Muir, John

* My first summer in the Sierra. 1911 Houghton $3.50 917.94

1 Sierra Nevada mountains 11-14183

"Diary of a trip in 1869 to the head-waters of the Merced and Tuolumne rivers and the Yosemite region. Author accompanied a flock of 2000 sheep, but accounts of camp life are secondary to the enthusiastic and poetic descriptions of nature and of sometime thrilling experiences. Beautifully illustrated from photographs with some sketches made on the trip." N.Y. state lib.

The author's "Mountains of California" (new and enl ed 1911 Appleton-Century $3.50) describes with charm glaciers, forests, storms and other features of mountain beauty

The Yosemite. 1912 Appleton-Century $3.50; 12s 6d 917.94

1 Yosemite valley 12-11005

"Though cast in the form of a guide-book containing outlines of excursions, maps, tables of distances, rates of transportation and special advice to tourists, the book is much more than that. It is a rich storehouse of observation by a profound lover of nature. Personal experiences and narratives are combined with scientific speculations, botanical lore and graphic descriptions of scenery." Pittsburgh

Contains illustrations and a map

Peixotto, Ernest Clifford

Romantic California. new and enl ed 1927 Scribner $3 917.94

1 California—Descr. & trav. 27-23033

First published 1910. In this third edition very few changes have been made as the author prefers to leave the book as originally written

"Handsomely made book of descriptions and sketches accompanying the author's drawings of little-known corners of California, picturesque either from natural scenery or relics of Spanish occupation and other historical associations." N.Y. state lib.

"Historic spots in California" by H. E. Rensch and Mrs E. G. H. Rensch (1932-33 Stanford univ. press; Oxford) is a guidebook to historic places with chapters on the historical background. Two volumes are available: The southern counties ($2.50; 11s 6d) and The valley and Sierra counties ($3.75)

1 Renard Island, Alaska 20-6728

"Diary of an artist who, with his nine year old son, spent a winter on Fox island in Resurrection bay off the coast of Alaska. An unusual record of a year's isolation and of rare companionship between father and son. Illustrated with bold, impressive, symbolic drawings suggestive of William Blake." N.Y. state lib.
Drawings by the author and an introduction by Dorothy Canfield

Marshall, Robert
Arctic village. 1933 Smith, H. $3 917.98

1 Koyukuk river 2 Alaska—Descr. & trav. 3 Eskimos 4 Frontier and pioneer life 33-11590

"Attracted, on his first visit to a remote Alaskan town, by the frontier conditions, as well as the contentment evidenced by the people, the author returned to spend a year north of the Arctic circle. He took copious notes on everything—climate, occupations, domestic economy, sexual customs, recreation, and conversation of the white and Eskimo residents, and his book, informally conversational in style, is a 'Middletown' of the Far North. Excellent photographic illustrations." Bkl.

Muir, John
Travels in Alaska. 1915 Houghton $3.50 917.98

1 Alaska—Descr. & trav. 15-26894

"Accounts of the naturalist's visits to Alaska in 1879, 1880 and 1890, in which his passion for glaciers stands out prominently, but his love of all forms of nature also finds place. The descriptions of glacier excursions are relieved with many thrilling and humorous incidents and comments on Indian life. Excellent illustrations." Wis. bul.

Muir, John—Continued

"Upon this book . . . all but finished before his unforeseen departure, John Muir expended the last months of his life . . . He worked with characteristic care and thoroughness through the great mass of Alaska notes that had accumulated under his hands for more than thirty years. The events recorded in this volume end in the middle of the trip of 1890. Muir's notes on the remainder of the journey have not been found." Preface

Another good book of Alaskan experiences is S. H. Young's "Adventures in Alaska" (1919 Revell $1) by a missionary who gives an interesting picture of life there during the gold rush

Stuck, Hudson

* Ten thousand miles with a dog sled. 1914 Scribner $4 917.98

1 Alaska—Descr. & trav. 14-9357

"A record of sled journeys over the winter trails in the interior of Alaska, chiefly in the great valley of the Yukon and its tributaries. On one hand it is a skilfully drawn picture of ice-bound regions in all their silent majesty, with many an illustration to add concreteness to the physical attractions of the regions; on another, it is a testimonial to the strength of hardy and [illegible] throws light upon the aboriginal population and the problems of civil government that need solution." Book rev. digest

The author's "Ascent of Denali (Mount McKinley)" (1914 Scribner $2.50) is a modest story of the first ascent of Mount McKinley. Contains little scientific data. Excellent photographs

Underwood, John Jasper

Alaska, an empire in the making. rev ed 1925 Dodd $3.50 917.98

1 Alaska 25-7015

First published in 1913. Interestingly written account of Alaska; its scenery, resources, industries and history written by a resident of fourteen years standing who has woven into the narrative many of his own experiences on hunting and fishing expeditions. This edition, written after a journey thru Alaska in 1923, contains corrections and additions bringing the earlier volume up-to-date, 1923. Generously illustrated by photographs

Walden, Arthur Treadwell

* Dog-puncher on the Yukon. (Riverside lib.) Houghton $1 917.98

1 Yukon river and valley 2 Klondike gold fields 28-15596

A 1931 reprint with fewer illustrations of a book first published 1928. Available in England in the original edition (Laurie 21s)

"In unassuming and forthright fashion, the author has put into a running narrative his exciting, strange and sometimes harrowing experiences both before and after the Klondike gold strike, when he was a trader and driver of dog-teams on the trail. Mr Walden is at present (1928) in charge of the sledge dogs on Commander Byrd's expedition to the South Pole. Map on end papers. Photographs." N.Y. libraries

"All the old properties are described—the Skagway mess, the White Pass difficulties, the short rations, the vigilance of the Mounted Police, the Dawson madness. Occasionally a new story salts the pages. But there is a sincerity, an air of eye-witness truthfulness which, coupled with a very clear and straightforward telling, vivifies the old scenes." Sat. rev. of lit.

Willoughby, Mrs. Florance (Barrett)

Gentlemen unafraid. 1928 Putnam $3.50; 15s 917.98

1 Alaska—Descr. & trav. 28-22306

"Reprinted from the 'American magazine' where they first appeared, these articles describe Miss Willoughby's childhood in Alaska, and some Alaskan heroes, gentlemen unafraid, whom she has known: Alexander (Sandy) Smith, trailblazer; Scotty Allan and his famous dog, Baldy; George Evans, mining engineer; Captain Sydney Barrington, Yukon pilot; and Dr C. C. Georgeson, plant wizard of Alaska. Illustrated from photographs of Alaskan scenes." Book rev. digest

"Her book, if it lacks form, is at least full of interesting matter." Nation and Athenaeum

Sitka, portal to romance. 1930 Houghton $3 917.98

1 Sitka, Alaska 2 Tlingit Indians 30-9234

"Provocative in its interest is this book by a returned traveler, who lived as a child in Sitka. She still detects the flavor of the Russian regime in Alaska, finding many scions of the old Russian nobility, remnants of Russian civilization among the natives, the Greek church still flourishing and romance still lurking in old buildings, walks and drives. She does not miss the beauty of the forest and harbors, nor the promise of Alaska of today. For all libraries." Wis. bul.

South America; observations and impressions. new ed rev 1914 Macmillan $4.50; 21s 918

1 South America 2 South America—Descr. & trav. 14-3120

"Scholarly, just and optimistic; the result of four months' travel supplementing years of study. Describes the countries individually and discusses the problems of the continent as a whole, touching but slightly on political matters. Maps, bibliography." N.Y. state lib.

"The book is certainly interesting and, above all things, excellently written. It contains nothing that can be counted new or in the least unknown, but yet the writer's personality gives it a charm that nothing can impair." Saturday

Dickey, Herbert Spencer

My jungle book. 1932 Little $3.50; Hutchinson 12s 6d 918

1 South America—Descr. & trav. 2 Orinoco river 3 Indians of South America 32-26203

"The author, an American doctor who has spent most of thirty years in South America, was the leader of an expedition which finally discovered the headwaters of the Orinoco in July, 1931. Only the last two chapters of this book, however, are directly devoted to this expedition, the others dealing with scientific expeditions in general . . . political conditions, Indians, wild life, etc. [Illustrated]" Book rev. digest

Dickey, Herbert S.—Continued

"Dr. Dickey speaks his mind in discussing the exploration racket, missionaries, South America's dislike of the United States and various other things. His own achievements are so distinguished that his words carry weight, and we think they should be required reading for all who are interested in South America, or in exploring in general." Outlook

1 South America—Descr. & trav. 2 South America—Soc. life & cust. 3 South America—Race question 32-27260

Published in England under title: South America; a continent of contrasts

"In this excellent travel book the author, hiding behind the fictional character, Goehis, covers most of the South American countries, investigating and reporting with zest and true German thoroughness, and philosophizing more or less. It is an interesting book and an authentic account of the writer's varied experiences and observations." Cincinnati

"What the author has to say is not exactly red-hot news, but on the other hand it covers more ground more thoroughly than do most works of the kind. . . With a useful map, a tolerably satisfactory index and some half a dozen good illustrations this book adds not a little to the ordinary man's knowledge of South America." Times (London) lit. sup.

Faris, John Thomson

Seeing South America. 1931 Revell $2.50 918

1 South America—Descr. & trav. 31-18160

"Mr. Faris's work is quite frankly a 'travel book' in the specific sense of that sometimes misapplied word—a more or less spiced-up tourist's manual, that is to say, readably telling the prospective traveller the main show-places on a tour of the South American continent, how one gets to them, and something about what they are like." 1 South America 2 South America—Econ. condit. 3 South America—Indus. 30-16378

"For each of the large republics one chapter briefly sketches the political and economic expansion of the nation. . . These are followed by regional chapters emphasizing the relation of living conditions and economic activities to the natural environment." Preface

"We have long needed a volume of this character, not only for use in university classes, but also for the enlightenment of that increasing number of persons desiring to know something of the environment of the rapidly developing countries of South America. . . No work heretofore published on the South American countries fills the need which Professor Jones has met. He has given to the world the best presentation that we today possess of the economic background of the civilization of the republics of South America." Annals Amer. acad.

Silver seas and golden cities. 1931 Liveright $3.50; Am. bk. supply 15s 918

1 South America—Descr. & trav. 2 Portugal—Descr. & trav. 3 Spain—Descr. & trav. 31-8039

Representing an American magazine, Mrs Keyes set out to gather material on Latin lands for editorial purposes. Her ultimate goal was South America but she traveled first through Portugal and Spain to acquaint herself with the background of the mother countries of the South American republics. The book contains numerous illustrations

"As few travelers in these South American countries have the social sponsorship given Mrs. Keyes, few travel stories about them hold so many or such intimate pictures not only of the homes of the Spanish patricians but of their outwardly reserved but upon acquaintance, lavishly, hospitable owners. . . Wherever she went, Mrs. Keyes met people worth knowing. Many of these South Americans, educators, statesmen are internationally known, and Mrs. Keyes's description and estimates of them and of the ideals they champion are of value." Boston Transcript

Coming of South America. 1932 Day $3.50 918

1 South America—Politics 2 South America—Econ. condit. 3 South America—Relations (general) with U.S. 32-13031

"A terse, factual, and in a very solid sense of the word, 'newsy' report on political and economic conditions and tendencies in the more important South American states. Those intent on human interest, atmosphere, 'color,' in what might be called their 'free' state, will not find them there. The influences which largely account for the differentiations of character and scene will be found, however, and much fresh, first-hand and useful information about countries." Peck, Annie Smith

Flying over South America. 1932 Houghton $3.50 918

1 South America—Descr. & trav. 2 Aeronautics—Flights 32-30648

"The 79-year-old author records her observations of the cities and towns, the people, and particularly the mountains of South America, made during her 20,000 mile trip, chiefly by airplane, during the seven months from November, 1929 to June, 1930. The book is illustrated with numerous photographs, many of them taken from the air." Book rev. digest

"Her book's chief value, notwithstanding its interest in other aspects, lies in the exposition it makes of the ease, quickness and comfort with which tourists . . . and others can reach any part of South America and of the thousand allurements and pleasures and benefits they will find there." 1 South America—Descr. & trav. 2 South America—Politics 33-27157

"An entertaining account of the author's six months' trip to South America in 1931, written in the form of letters sent to friends in France. He visited the capital cities and some of the show-places of the Antilles, Panama, Venezuela, Argentina, Chile and Peru. With the trained mind of an acute observer, he sketches his impressions of countries, people, and their economic troubles." Ontario library review

Whitbeck, Ray Hughes
Economic geography of South America. 2d ed 1931 McGraw $3.50; 17s 6d 918

1 South America—Econ. condit. 31-1804

First edition 1926. The subject matter has been brought up to date, a reference map of South America has been added and bibliographies and statistical tables have been revised

"This book has grown out of the writer's course in the Geography of South America given at the University of Wisconsin, and out of a visit in 1924 to parts of Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, and Brazil." Preface

"A text and reference book. It discusses the people, resources, industries, and commerce of each country, and treats as special units the great natural divisions such as the basins of the Amazon and of the Rio de la Plata, the central valley of Chile, the pampas of the Argentine, etc. The human element also is given due consideration." Bkl.

Zahm, John Augustine
Along the Andes and down the Amazon, by H. J. Mozans, (pseud.) (Following the conquistadores, v2) 1911 Appleton-Century $5; 21s 918

1 Peru—Descr. & trav. 2 Ecuador—Descr. & trav. 3 Amazon river 11-14181

"Narrative of a trip from Panama to Lima, including an exploration of the Amazon from source to mouth. Enthusiastically written, with a wealth of quotation and frequent reference to the early chroniclers." Pittsburgh

A supplement to "Following the conquistadores up the Orinoco and down the Magdalena"

Bibliography: p529-34

The author's "Through South America's southland" (1916 Appleton o.p. 1933) is the narrative of a trip thru Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Argentina and Chile, especially interesting for the historical and biographical material about the places visited. Volume 3 of his Following the conquistadores

An interesting book of exploration by a field naturalist who was connected with some of the Roosevelt expeditions is "In the wilds of South America" by L. E. Miller (1918 Scribner $6)

918.1 Brazil

Three books which are out of print, 1933, but which will still be found useful and interesting are:

Landor, A. H. S. Across unknown South America. 1913 Little. It deals with the author's explorations in Brazil through a hitherto impenetrable area

Lange, Algot. In the Amazon jungle; ed in part by J. O. Hauser. 1912 Putnam Adventures in the jungle of the upper Amazon, in the rubber tree country, where the author lived among cannibals

Lange, Algot. Lower Amazon. 1914 Putnam "A narrative of explorations in the little known regions of the state of Para, on the lower Amazon, with a record of archaeological excavations on Marage Island at the mouth of the Amazon river, and observations on the general resources of the country." Elliott, Lilian Elwyn
Brazil today and tomorrow. 1917 Macmillan $3; 15s 918.1

1 Brazil 17-10576

"An excellent and useful work based on seven years' travel in Latin America and two years' special study of Brazil, during which the author visited seventeen out of the twenty states. The matters of greatest interest to investors and business men are treated more fully than in most books on Brazil, and some new subjects are introduced, among them being that of colonization. Well illustrated." Wis. bul.

Fleming, Peter

1 Brazil—Descr. & trav. 2 Indians of South America—Brazil 3 Fawcett, Percy Harrison [33-31720]

"The author was one of a party, composed chiefly of Englishmen, who traveled into unexplored regions in central Brazil with a vaguely defined hope of solving the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Colonel Fawcett some eight years before. The book contains a half-mocking, half-serious, wholly entertaining account of their adventures, mishaps, tribulations, and differences of opinion." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Fleming satirizes expedition jargon, the pseudo-heroics of solid romantics by their camp fires. There has, he feels, come into these only too gentlemanly advances upon astonished Nature a slightly ludicrous air. He is therefore out to 'debunk' adventure, and the rapid malice of his eye fits him for the task." Christian science monitor

James, Herman Gerlach

1 Brazil 25-9569

"Professor Herman G. James has spent much time in South America . . . The first five chapters contain a historical survey of the country down to the present time. Then follows a chapter on the governmental system which, together with two later chapters devoted to the individual states, is naturally of greatest interest to the student of government. The remainder of the book deals with the natural resources, population, agriculture, industries, transportation and commerce of the country." Amer. pol. sci. rev.

The author's revision of his book published nearly twenty years ago. Now issued in attractive format with woodcuts by Claire Leighton. The original work is published in Everyman's library (1928 Dutton 70c, lib. binding $1)

"From Swansea to Para thence up the Amazon and far up the Madeira, through Brazilean forests, Mr. Tomlinson made his adventurous way in the tramp-steamer, Capella. He tells his story somewhat in the manner of Conrad, interweaving as he proceeds, yarns spun on shipboard by his mates." Cleveland

"His account of the voyage and of what he saw in the jungle is a refreshing departure in travel literature." Saturday rev.

Up de Graff, Fritz W.

Head hunters of the Amazon; with a foreword by Kermit Roosevelt. 1923 Dodd $3.50; Jenkins 7s 6d 918.1

1 Amazon river 2 South America—Descr. & trav. 3 Indians of South America—Amazon valley 23-5829

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"The story of an American engineer's seven years of wandering among the forests of the upper reaches of the Amazon, travels undertaken for love of adventure rather than for scientific purposes. He describes life in a head-hunting tribe, one of their raids and the mode of preserving the ghastly trophies. [Illustrations and map]." Cleveland

"However variously testing the experiences described, the narrator is always the same, simple, practical—one might say, unimaginative—man, and his narrative is always consistent with itself and with human nature. He is content to recount what happened to him; and it is a happy accident of chronological order and not literary art that preserves an unforgettable episode for the end." Times (London) lit. sup.

Voyaging southward from the Strait of Magellan. 1924 Putnam $7.50; 37s 6d 918.2

1 Tierra del Fuego—Descr. & trav. 2 Magellan, Strait of 24-24641

"The artist cruised in a small sailboat southward from the Strait of Magellan, along the bleak coasts of Tierra del Fuego and around the Horn. At various points the voyagers made anchorage, taking short inland excursions and penetrating the mountain regions of Tierra del Fuego. In these wilderness places they met a warm hospitality from the settlers, both poor and rich, and the artist found uncommon beauty to paint. He has illustrated in black and white the seas and headlands and settlements along the voyage's course. [Maps]" Book rev. digest

"Mr. Koebel, is a well-known authority on South America, and in this book he renders a distinct service to the large number of people who are interested in the Argentine." Saturday rev.

918.3 CHILE

Bowman, Isaiah

Desert trails of Atacama. (American geographical society. Special pub. no. 5) 1924 Am. geographical soc. $5 918.3

1 Atacama desert 2 Chile—Descr. & trav. 24-2631

The author, who is, 1933, director of the American geographical society, attempts "to describe and interpret a region traversed on three field expeditions . . . the Desert of Atacama and the high ranges and plateaus of the Central Andes which end in the Puna de Atacama on the south. The narrative is brief, personal experiences being introduced, as a rule, only when they serve to complete the geographic picture." Preface

1 Chile—Descr. & trav. 2 Argentine Republic—Descr. & trav. 23-8000

"The book is based on two journeys made around the South American continent, by boat, by rail and by automobile. It describes the ports and cities, the farming regions, the deserts and the mountains; also the fauna and flora of the two countries, their population, industries and governments. Bibliography. Index." Book rev. digest

"Facts about Chile and Argentina are recorded in this book in a thorough and painstaking way that leaves little to be desired in the way of information. The book is the work of an experienced traveler and newspaper correspondent, and shows its author's training as a practical information-gatherer on every page." Outlook

Elliott, Lilian Elwyn

* Chile today and tomorrow. 1922 Macmillan $5; 25s 918.3

1 Chile 22-20544

"An account of Chilean geography and history is followed by a survey of Chile's natural resources, agriculture, commerce, railroads, finance, naval defences and racial divisions. There is a chapter on the troublesome Tacna-Arica boundary controversy and one on Chilean literature. Still another chapter is devoted to Easter island, unimportant commercially, but possessing interesting remains of an ancient culture, in its strange series of stone statues and wooden carvings. A map is provided and a list of Chilean terms." Book rev. digest

"Modern Chile," by W. H. Koebel (1913 Macmillan o.p. 1933) is an older book, which because of lack of newer material, will still be useful to libraries having it. Gives an account of the country, its economic conditions and social customs at the time the book was written

918.4 BOLIVIA

Duguid, Julian

‡ Green hell; adventures in the mysterious jungle of eastern Bolivia. 1931 Appleton-Century $4; Cape, J. 10s 6d 918.4

1 Bolivia—Descr. & trav. 31-5972

"Four men—the author (an Irish writer), an English photographer, a Russian tiger-hunter, and a Bolivian diplomat, make an exploring-adventure trip thru the forests of eastern Bolivia. The chief adventures of the journey came not from encounters with ferocious animals or deadly snakes, but from insects and lack of water." Book rev. digest

"Putting aside his fine descriptive power it is, in fact, Mr. Duguid's ability to draw people that puts his book head and shoulders over the common ruck of travel books. He has more than a spark of the true creative artist and he makes every man and woman whom he met in this terrifying, exotic world, vividly alive. He brings the whole of this savage green symphony of forest present to the reader's imagination and senses. One sees, hears, smells, tastes and touches with him." Spectator

* Flight into America's past; Inca peaks and Maya jungles. 1932 Putnam $3.50 918.5

1 Peru—Descr. & trav. 2 Incas 3 Guatemala —Descr. & trav. 4 Yucatan—Descr. & trav. 5 Mayas 6 Aeronautics—Flights 33-1227

A popularly written account of visits to Peru and the Mayan Peninsula, made largely by aeroplane. The author's main interest is in the archaeological lore of these places. Illustrated with many photographs of mountain scenery, architectural relics, and works of ancient art

"Mrs. Beale is an observing traveler whose emotional and imaginative response to what she sees gives background and setting and glowing appeal to all the unusual sights she describes, and her pages are packed with information derived from the original sources of professional archaeologists and historians. While her book would be the best of companions for any one taking a similar journey, it will afford the armchair traveler some fascinating hours." N.Y. Times

1 Orinoco river 2 Venezuela—Descr. & trav. 24-20968

"A narrative of travels thru the wilderness of the Orinoco and its tributary the Ventuari. The journey began at Ciudad Bolivar in Venezuela and covered six thousand miles, part of it thru almost unexplored country. It led the author finally to the home of the Maquiritares, or so-called 'white Indians.' [Maps]" Book rev. digest

"Mr. Friel is very evidently experienced in photography. The illustrations are excellently chosen and should well repay him for the weary hours spent in taking and preserving them. The book may be summed up as the account of a very creditable performance, creditably placed before the public." Sat. rev. of lit.

An earlier book, now out of print, 1933, which records a journey on the Orinoco and gives a picture of the country is "Up the Orinoco and down the Magdalena," by J. A. Zahm (1910 Appleton) This is volume 1 of the "Following the conquistadores" series. Another story of travels in this region is "Señor Bum in the jungle" by H. S. Johansen (1932 McBride $3.50; Gollancz 10s 6d) by a penniless American who went up the Orinoco, crossed to the Rio Negro and came out by the Amazon

London, Jack
Cruise of the Snark. 1911 Macmillan $2 919
1 Oceanica—Descr. & trav. 2 Voyages and travels 11-14527
"A vivid narrative illustrated from photographs, of a cruise that the author with his wife set out upon around the world. The Snark, into the construction of which the author put a deal of personality, a staunch sail-boat which it seemed wise to supply with a seventy-horse-power engine, made for safety and comfort, after sailing for two years without touching rock, reef or shoal, was wrecked in the South seas. The adventures of the two years' cruise are reproduced vividly with none of the zest for them, dangerous moments, or admirable achievements left out." Book rev. digest
"The log of the Snark," by Mrs C. K. London (1915 Macmillan $2.50) supplements her husband's story of the same trip. A daily record of events and impressions

919.1 MALAYSIA

An unusually good narrative of travel and adventure in Malaysia, which is unfortunately out of print, 1933, is "Where the strange trails go down; Sulu, Borneo, Celebes, Bali, Java, Sumatra, Straits Settlements, Malay states, Siam, Cambodia, Annam, Cochin-China," by E. A. Powell (1921 Scribner)
An entertaining book of scientific travel of an earlier date, 1854-1862, by a famous scientist, A. R. Wallace, is "Malay archipelago" (Macmillan $4; 10s 6d)

Clifton, Mrs Violet Mary (Beauclerk)
Islands of Queen Wilhelmina. 1927 Houghton o.p. 1933 919.1
1 Dutch East Indies—Descr. & trav. 2 Dutch East Indies—Soc. life & cust. 27-27774
"A colorful book on the East Indies. Recounts an actual journey, shown on a sketch map, with many and excellent illustrations placed where they should be in relation to the text, but in some way produces a haunting sense of unreality. That it has an introduction by Lord Dunsany indicates its quality." Wis. bul.
"Mrs. Clifton is admirably qualified to report on their sights and customs; she looks and remembers; she neither loses consciousness in Faery-land nor requires it to conform to some pattern brought from the workaday world." Times (London) lit. sup.
Another good book which is primarily a history but which includes material on the physical features, natural history, industries and social conditions of the islands, is H. A. W. Van C. Torchiana's "Tropical Holland" (2d ed 1923 Univ. of Chicago press o.p. 1933)

Half-way sun; life among the headhunters of the Philippines. 1930 Brewer o.p. 1933 919.14
1 Ifugaos 2 Luzon—Descr. & trav. 30-32129
"Mr Barton has lived, as a teacher, for eight years among the head-hunters of northern Luzon, the largest island of the Philippine group. This book represents his study, during these years, of the culture of the Ifugaos, their methods of gaining a livelihood, their native beliefs and superstitions, and their social customs. The book has many illustrations, including several photographs of the magnificently terraced lakes which the people have built for the growing of rice, their staple crop." Book rev. digest
" 'The Half Way Sun' is a permanent contribution to our literature about the Philippines; far more interesting than any of the ephemeral political accounts. The book is beautifully illustrated, well printed and indexed." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Life or death in Luzon. 1933 Bobbs $3.50 919.14
1 Luzon—Soc. life & cust. 2 Igorot 3 Philippine islands—Soc. life & cust. 33-5610
"Thirty years in the Philippines, first as a non-commissioned officer in the early days of the American occupation, then as gold prospector, coffee planter and trail engineer, finally as governor of Bontoc province, gave the author ample opportunity to observe one side of Filipino life. He knows the wild tribes, or some of them, up one mountainside and down another. The picture—doubtless perfectly accurate for the time and area involved, and certainly absorbingly interesting—suggests that the Philippines are about on a cultural level with the more backward parts of Borneo." Christian century
"That this author is not exaggerating his picture of conditions in Luzon seems to be assured by the foreword written by Gen. J. G. Harbord, whose own broad knowledge of the Philippines gives him a measure by which to gauge the general accuracy of the unusual story. The book carries numerous photographs." Springfield Republican

Kroeber, Alfred Louis

Mayo, Katherine
Isles of fear; the truth about the Philippines. 1925 Harcourt $3.50 919.14
1 Philippine islands—Pol. & govt. 2 Philippine islands 25-8538
"An account of political and social conditions in the Philippines as the author found them when she made a personal investigation among the various peoples and races of the islands in order to determine the extent of their desire and ability for independence. Miss Mayo maintains that the majority of the people prefer American administration because they fear the Filipino 'politico' whose extortion and violence they know from their experience with native local officials." Powell, Hickman
Last paradise. 1930 Cape, J. 18s 919.2
1 Bali (Island) 30-15833
"Bali, a small volcanic island near Java, is described by the author as the last paradise because it is one of the few spots on earth still untouched by modern civilization. He describes the beauty of the natives and the simplicity of native life, where each trade is practised as a fine art. He supplies intimate glimpses of native dances, dramatics, etc; and much that Mr Powell has written of so enthusiastically is illustrated in the volume by the drawings of Alexander King, and the photographs by André Roosevelt, who has lived at Bali for some time." 919.3 AUSTRALASIA

"Threshold of the Pacific," by C. E. Fox (1924 Knopf $5; Routledge 18s) is an account of the inhabitants of San Cristoval in the Solomon Islands, which is an important contribution to ethnology. It is in the History of civilization series

Bolitho, Hector
The New Zealanders. (Outward bound lib.) 1928 Dent 5s 919.3
1 New Zealand—Descr. & trav. 29-10314
The author places his work somewhere between the guide book, a dull narration of facts and that vivid book which is yet to be written wherein the author "will record the peculiar colonising genius which has made New Zealand different from all other dominions, he will write the romance of the Maori, the story of pioneer fortitude, the poetry of lovely earth, the record of lives of wholesome, industrious middle-class people." This small volume inclines well toward the latter class

Collinson, Clifford Whiteley
Life and laughter 'midst the cannibals. 1926 Dutton $5 919.3
1 Solomon islands—Descr. & trav. 2 Ethnology—Solomon islands 27-5954
"In his unconventional way Mr. Collinson gives an attractive account of a trader's daily experiences in the Solomons, where earthquakes and alligators are now, perhaps, more dangerous than the natives. The photographs are good. [Maps]." Spectator
Hermann Norden's "Byways of the tropic seas; wanderings among the Solomons and the Malay archipelago" (1926 Witherby 16s) is an attractively illustrated book which describes the islands, the natives and their customs

Fletcher, Robert James
Isles of illusion; ed. by Bohun Lynch. 1923 Constable 5s 919.3
1 New Hebrides—Descr. & trav. 23-12764
Formerly carried also by Small
"A collection of letters written to Mr Lynch. They cover the years 1912 to 1920 and form a very frank statement of what the writer saw, felt and thought during these years, years of exile and adventure. The writer . . . sometimes admits to being completely satisfied with the 'lotus-eating' existence of the islands, and scorns Europe and its civilization; at other times he curses the Pacific, its islands and all their works, and longs for a return to England and the life he once knew. But everywhere he is nothing if not frank, assertive and picturesque." Spectator

"The dangerous adventures of a cinema man and his . . . wife while taking moving-pictures of the cannibals in the New Hebrides. Among the things described are a moving-picture exhibition for the cannibals, their dancing and their method of head-curing. Interestingly illustrated." Cleveland

Muspratt, Eric
My South sea island. 1931 Morrow $2.50; Hopkinson 7s 6d 919.3
1 Solomon islands 31-23330
"Having knocked about the world as a sailor, hobo and odd-jobber, the author, at 21, was offered a six months' management of a cocoanut plantation on a remote South Pacific island. The story of his achievements, his handling of the natives, his long bout with fever, has the charm of naturalness, coupled with a feeling for beauty of scene and intelligent observation of his men." N.Y. libraries
"He gives a detailed account of his illness, particularly of his spiritual reactions during its long course and the subsequent convalescence; in other hands this part of the book might well have become morbid and so tedious; yet it never is so; for Mr. Muspratt's method of setting down his experiences both subjective and objective is so unaffected that the reader suffers with him." "A fascinating account of eight years spent making coconut palms grow for the first time in the favorable soil of Cape York, the northern extremity of Australia. There, among the most backward race in the world, the author settled down after previous adventures as trader, gold-seeker, and pearler. He writes with zest and humor of the danger, hardships, and compensations of his life among strange peoples." Cleveland

"He has written an unusual book, that rarity among travel books which can be enjoyed as art. 1 Physical geography—Australia 2 Australia—Econ. condit. 20-10068

"In this edition statistics have been revised throughout and the text has been brought up to date. Revised maps have been drawn and new ones inserted where desirable. Fresh matter . . . has been added." Preface to the fifth edition

The first part, entitled "Physiographic aspects," has chapters on exploration and exploitation, physical conditions and natural regions. The second part, entitled "Economic aspects," has chapters on stock-raising, agriculture, mining, timber and sugar, fishing and transport. The book is written in textbook form. The author states that he has laid most stress on "the physical controls that govern industrial conditions." Index and maps

1 Australia—Descr. & trav. 2 New Zealand—Descr. & trav. 33-22675

A series of impressions of a four-months trip thru Australia and New Zealand, written by a Hindu author and scholar

"The account he writes in this little book of his trip to the far Southlands is a simple, pleasantly told tale of travel, whose most interesting feature is perhaps his unconscious disclosures, as he goes along, of his own personality. He is sometimes deliciously and quite unconsciously mid-Victorian in his sentiments and viewpoints, but he is always interested in what is fine and beautiful, of high consequence and elevated outlook, and he is as eager and ardent for new and lovely sights and interesting experiences as if this were some youthful pilgrimage." "It is unusual to find a missionary with a genuinely scientific turn of mind . . . Mr. Holmes is such a missionary. He has spent twenty-five years in New Guinea, and has studied the natives as no mere traveller can do. His professed purpose in this book has been to present Papuan life from the point of view of the Papuan, and he deals copiously with every aspect of that life devoting chapters to Folk Lore, Marriage Customs, Art, Occupations, Games, Religious Observances, Languages, Property Rights . . . His book is a mine of interesting and thoroughly entertaining information, plentifully illustrated with both photographs and sketches." New statesman

1 Papua—Descr. & trav. 26-10941

"Parts of this narrative of exploration read like a shilling shocker, but it is evidently written in good faith, and is extremely interesting. The author, in company with a British government official, penetrated far into the interior of New Guinea where he came in contact with the weird and terrifying facts of cannibalism and native warfare. Good illustrations." Bkl.

"The book has no scientific value, unless as a chronicle of one incident in the life of wily Yapitze it shows the consummate powers of dissimulation of which the Papuan is capable. It fulfills its purpose, it entertains." Sat. rev. of lit.

Foster, Harry La Tourette

Vagabond in Fiji. 1927 Dodd $3; Lane 12s 6d 919.6

1 Polynesia—Descr. & trav. 2 Fiji islands—Descr. & trav. 27-21490

"The author . . . was sent to the South Seas by a publishing firm to find Romance. He went, but advises his readers to turn to Melville and London and O'Brien for Romance. The South Seas have been commercialized. But in spite of the rents in the glamour, Mr. Foster makes this a most fascinating book. Unlike many writers, he speaks a good word for the missionaries, particularly the medical missionary." Wis. bul.

Hall, James Norman

Mid-Pacific. 1928 Houghton $3 919.6

1 Tahiti—Descr. & trav. 28-12172

Fourteen essays and travel sketches which describe adventures chiefly in the Society Islands "Apart from any material explanations, his book is vivid because it is the expression of a real personality. Mr. Hall is no mere wanderer; he is, as it were, a philosopher of travel." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

The author's earlier book, "Faery lands of the South Seas" (1921 Harper o.p. 1933) written in collaboration with C. B. Nordhoff is the story of their life for a year or so in the southern Pacific

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"A study of the psychology of the adolescent girl in Samoa, where the author lived for eight months, part of the time as an adopted daughter in a Samoan household." Pratt quarterly

"Her work has unquestionable value for the psychologist, the data being handled carefully and presented logically, and the conclusions well-reasoned; but the unusual features for a book on psychological subjects is that it is exceedingly well written and possesses charm. The book will prove interesting and valuable to the student of psychology and attractive to any reader who does not object to the handling of natural facts with ungloved hands." Outlook

1 Polynesia—Descr. & trav. 24-24212

Account of a trip in the Marquesas, Paumotus, and Gilbert islands, in 1888-89. "It is, in effect, a sort of glorified log; but a log of real enterprise and adventure in a marvelous part of the world . . . It is the wisest of his travel books, and the most genuine . . . Throughout, there is a simple exposition of a fascinating subject, a kind of life remote from our experience, a civilization strict and dignified, minds and habits interesting in themselves and by contrast with our own." Frank Swinnerton

The South Seas edition of this title (1925 Scribner 90c) includes sections, "The Eight Islands" and "Letters from the South Seas." not included in the Biographical edition

"Riddle of the Pacific" by J. M. Brown (1925 Benn 30s) is an interesting account of the mystery and archeology of Easter island and its people

919.8 ARCTIC REGIONS

Two other interesting accounts of expeditions are:

Brainard, D. L. Outpost of the lost; an arctic adventure. 1929 Bobbs o.p. 1933 The story of the Greeley expedition of 1881-83, a record of great heroism in privation, and one of the best human documents of polar literature

McCracken, Harold. God's frozen children. 1930 Doubleday, Doran $1 The account of the author's scientific expeditions in the North, the discoveries made by the Stoll-McCracken Siberian Arctic expedition in the Aleutian islands

Amundsen, Roald Engelbregt Gravning, and Ellsworth, Lincoln
Our polar flight; the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar flight. 1925 Dodd o.p. 1933 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 North pole 3 Aeronautics—Flights 25-25739

Story of the flight which attempted to reach the North pole in 1925 as told by the several members of the expedition. Illustrations from photographs and a chart of the expedition

"A thrilling account of an enterprise which, though modified from its original rather grandiose form, still remains on record as an attempt to achieve the apparently impossible, the successful outcome of which was more lucky than likely." Nation and Athenacum

The story of the author's flight by airship across the North Pole in 1926 is told in "First crossing of the polar sea" by R. E. G. Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth (1927 Doran o.p. 1933)

Bartlett, Robert Abram, and Hale, Ralph Tracy
Last voyage of the Karluk. new ed 1928 Hale $3 919.8

1 Karluk (Ship) 2 Arctic regions [16-23799]

A very interesting account of the expedition of the "Karluk," flagship of Stefansson's Canadian Arctic expedition, 1913-16. The tale of perilous adventures, the loss of the ship, and the long walk over the Arctic in search of help is told by the captain of the ship and written down by Mr Hale

Borup, George
* Tenderfoot with Peary. 1915 Stokes $2.50 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Peary, Robert Edwin 11-6719

First published 1911. The 1915 reprint has only 8 illustrations against 42 in the original, and the map omitted

"A vivid account of Peary's trip to the Pole, humorous, slangy and full of 'pep,' but also alive with that splendid heroism and determined fight against almost over-whelming odds which make the book an inspiration to read." Bookshelf for boys and girls

Brown, Robert Neal Rudmose
Polar regions; a physical and economic geography of the Arctic and Antarctic. 1927 Dutton $4; Methuen 12s 6d 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Antarctic regions [27-26974]

"This book brings together from scattered sources most of the facts known about the polar regions. It has useful maps and a bibliography, and the general reader will find it a convenient reference book when polar topics arise." New statesman

Bruce, William Speirs
Polar exploration. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 1911 Holt $1.25, student's ed $1; Butterworth, T. 2s 6d 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Antarctic regions [11-10328]

"A traveller's sample revealing to some extent what is in the great warehouse of the polar regions." Chapters on coloration of ice and snow, plant and animal life, magnetism, tides, etc., scientifically set down, yet with a personal note

Chapman, Frederick Spencer
Northern lights; the official account of the British Arctic air-route expedition, 1930-1931. 1933 Oxford $5; Chatto 18s, cheaper ed 7s 6d 919.8

1 British Arctic air-route expedition, 1930-1931 2 Arctic regions A33-3222

"This expedition, commanded by a youth of twenty-three, had for its object the investigation of the Greenland ice cap as the key point on a proposed air-route between this continent and Europe. Mr Chapman, an experienced member of the expedition was chosen to write this account and chapters are contributed by other members. The most interesting is that of Augustine Courtauld who describes his now famous winter vigil of five months alone in a base camp under snow, and at the last, in complete darkness." Book rev. digest

"An excellent straightforward account of a first class expedition with serious and worthwhile aims." Sat. rev. of lit.

Ellsworth, Lincoln
‡ Search. 1932 Harcourt $4 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Aeronautics—Flights 32-26344

"Lincoln Ellsworth . . . accompanied Amundsen almost to the North Pole on his airplane flight in 1925 and, the following year, crossed the Polar Sea from Spitzbergen to Alaska with him in the 'Norge.' His life has been a constant search for the unknown, and, for this sort of career, he prepared himself in every way possible. He has now written a more than usually interesting account of his explorations. Besides a day-by-day narrative of his air-voyaging in the North, he has told of his expedition across the Andes Mountains, also by airplane, which has been regarded as one of the greatest scientific contributions to the history of the development of South America." Providence

Contains illustrations and maps

Giudici, Davide
Tragedy of the Italia; with the rescuers to the red tent. 1929 Appleton-Century $3; Benn 12s 6d 919.8

1 Italia (Air-ship) 2 Krassin (Ship) 3 Arctic regions 4 Aeronautics—Flights 5 Nobile, Umberto 29-3210

"An Italian newspaperman aboard the Russian ice-breaker 'Krassin,' writes a straightforward and vivid account of the rescue of the 'Italia's' stranded crew from the Arctic ice pack, and of the picking up of Mariano and Zappi, who were wandering amid the ice. Giudici tells the generally accepted story, omitting any reference to the scandalous stories circulated about the death of Malmgren." Bkl.

"An intelligent and interesting piece of journalism. The translator, whose name does not appear, has done his work remarkably well. . . But certain points in the story inevitably arouse slight suspicions, which the author might perhaps have dispersed if he had dealt with them more openly" Nation and Athenaeum

Numerous illustrations from photographs

Another title desirable for libraries needing more material on this subject is Maurice Parijanine's "Krassin; tr. by Lawrence Brown" (1929 Macaulay $2.50)

Greely, Adolphus Washington
* Polar regions in the twentieth century; their discovery and industrial evolution. 1928 Little $4 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Antarctic regions 28-23632

"This is a partly rewritten, condensed, up-to-date edition of 'Handbook of polar discoveries' . . . which has been out of print for some time. Extensive bibliography and notes which were included in the fifth edition [1910 Little] have been omitted from this popularized edition." Bkl.

"The entire public may not find this book quite so indispensable as I do. I simply cannot get along without it . . . For I write books about the Arctic, too, and I constantly use Greely's accuracy against which to check details that come to me from other sources." Vilhjálmur Stefánsson in Sat. rev. of lit.

The author's "True tales of Arctic heroism in the new world" (1912 Scribner $1) relate "unusual episodes in Arctic service drawn from official relations and other accurate sources."

Jenness, Diamond
People of the twilight. 1928 Macmillan $3; 15s 919.8

1 Eskimos 28-11323

"Three years spent among the Eskimos of the North Alaskan coast and of Coronation Gulf have supplied the author with information about the dwellers in the Arctic regions. The material is admirably selected and graphically presented. Mr. Jenness is [1928] chief ethnologist on the staff of the National Museum of Canada." Ontario library review

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"Rockwell Kent sailed with young Sam Allen in a small boat to Greenland. This is his illustrated record of the voyage and the glorious days in Greenland among the Eskimos and friendly Danes." Book rev. digest

"There are pictures on almost every page; and, in the text, descriptive passages which bring the scenes before one in color and clear-cut lines and rhythmic motion; and the spirit of the whole is the author's high zest for life and everything appertaining thereto except the ship's mate." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

MacMillan, Donald Baxter
Etah and beyond; or, Life within twelve degrees of the pole. 1927 Houghton $5 919.8

1 Etah, Greenland 2 Arctic regions 3 Eskimos 27-24077

"Etah is on a northwestern point of Greenland. The explorer tells of his expedition, of 'life within twelve degrees of the Pole,' association with the Eskimos, observation of flora and fauna, and the homeward voyage." Boston

MacMillan, Donald B.—Continued

"An unscientific tendency toward loose statement is evident in MacMillan's book. However, while loose statements may invalidate a scientific book, they do not hurt a travel book. And, with the numerous clear photographs in 'Etah and Beyond,' this is a very attractive travel book for those who like to journey to the Arctic by proxy. [Map]" Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Four years in the white North. new and rev ed 1925 Hale $3 919.8

1 Arctic regions 33-27095

In the revised edition a foreword by Adolphus W. Greely has been added and the index enlarged

Author writes with enthusiasm of his Crocker Land expedition which spent four years in exploring the north of Greenland, proved Crocker Land a myth and made valuable scientific discoveries. Narrative includes a sketch of arctic exploration and many human and amusing anecdotes, excellent illustrations from photographs, three maps and index. Adapted from Dial

Nansen, Fridtjof

Hunting and adventure in the Arctic. 1925 Dodd $4 919.8

1 Hunting—Arctic regions 2 Arctic regions 25-7261

"This description of Dr. Nansen's first voyage is at once a cheerful contribution to autobiography and a valuable description of wild life in the Arctic as seen through the eyes of a novice. In 1882, when Dr. Nansen was a young fellow of twenty or so, and thinking of devoting his life to the study of zoology, he decided to go and have a look at 'the animal life and physical features of the Arctic Ocean' . . . The illustrations from his own pencil have no pretensions to artistic merit, but help us to appreciate the things he saw." [Maps] Saturday rev.

The author's expedition to the Arctic regions in 1888 is described in "First crossing of Greenland" (Longmans $2; 6s 6d). The one made in the "Fram," to the Arctic, 1893-96 is told in "Farthest north" (1898 Harper o.p. 1933)

North pole, its discovery in 1909 under the auspices of the Peary Arctic club 1910 Stokes $7.50 919.8

1 North pole 2 Arctic regions 10-22101

Account of his final successful expedition. Contains extracts from his diary and those of his companions; also a historical foreword by Gilbert H. Grosvenor and an introduction by Theodore Roosevelt. Many illustrations, of which eight are colored, and a folded map

Rasmussen, Knud Johan Victor

Across Arctic America; narrative of the fifth Thule expedition. 1927 Putnam $5, 7s 6d 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Eskimos 27-6197

"Equipped with Greenland sledges drawn by dogs, the author crossed Arctic North America to the Bering sea; and here he tells of his journey and of the life, the customs and habits of the primitive tribes of Eskimos who were his hosts along the way. A straightforward, exceedingly vivid narrative, illustrated from photographs. Maps." N.Y. libraries

"Rasmussen has given us, in this preliminary story of a notable expedition, not only a work of literary charm but also one of the deepest and soundest interpretations of primitive life and thought that has ever been put into a book." Vilhjálmur Stefánsson in Canadian historical review

Adventure of Wrangel Island; written by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, with the collaboration of J. I. Knight. 1925 Macmillan $6 919.8

1 Wrangell island 25-8914

"The story of an effort to colonize Wrangel Island, off the coast of Siberia, and hold it for the British empire as a flying base. The adventure ended tragically and the author's chief purpose is to tell the true story and counteract false newspaper reports of the expedition. Folding map and much documentary material in appendixes." Wis. bul.

Contains numerous interesting photographs

Friendly Arctic. 1921 Macmillan $6.50 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Eskimos 21-21129

"The author's third expedition, 1913-18. He calls the Arctic 'friendly' because he has proved that hitherto unexplored regions, believed to be without life and of unendurable cold, are really habitable, with an abundance of animal life, so that one who knows how can live off the country. Adventures are many and often thrilling, and the book is of absorbing interest. Illustrations, maps, index." N.Y. state lib.

The author's "Northward course of empire" (1922 Macmillan $2; Harrap 7s 6d) is a further development of his theory that the far northern lands are possible for industries and colonization

Hunters of the great north. 1922 Harcourt $2.50 919.8

1 Arctic regions 2 Eskimos [24-25758]

"An account of the explorer's first Arctic expedition in 1906-07. He describes in detail his travels in dog sledges and skin boats and his experiences while learning to live like a real Eskimo. To this narrative have been added three chapters telling how he learned to hunt caribou, seals, and polar bears. Two maps and other illustrations." Pittsburgh

* My life with the Eskimo. 1913 Macmillan $5 919.8

1 Eskimos 2 Arctic regions 13-21327

"Detailed and entertaining account of an expedition made to Arctic regions for ethnological purposes [1908-12]. Author studied the Mackenzie river natives and the blond Eskimos of Victoria island under most favorable conditions, living among them and speaking their dialect. Dr Anderson, his companion, adds a valuable chapter on the natural history collections of the expedition. Many illustrations. [Maps]" Pittsburgh

Also available in an abridged edition (1927 Macmillan $2.50) "The abridgement keeps the direct narrative of the original edition, eliminates digressions, and omits the scientific appendix. It should, therefore, be preferred by anyone who merely wants a story. But those interested in the geography, geology and biology of the Arctic, and in the religion, folklore and customs of the Eskimos, should prefer the unabridged version." Preface to abridged edition

"This story of the Andrée expedition, the discoveries of the remains of the camp on White Island in 1930, and of the bodies of the explorers, together with diaries and memoranda of Andrée and Strindberg are published in this volume for the first time. It forms a continuous narrative based on the documents left by the explorers but written from them in chronological order so as to give a complete picture of the whole expedition from July, 1897, to the discovery of the camp in 1930, and the journey home. The illustrations are worthy of special note—they supplement the narrative very thoroughly and include twelve films taken by members of the expedition in 1897, and subsequently developed in 1930." 1 New Siberia islands 2 Arctic regions 3 Eskimos 32-17346

"The narrative of a wandering life spent in the polar regions. Jan Welzl, born in a small village in what is now Czechosiovakia, left his native land at the age of 20 to become an adventurer and trader in the north. His story, told with a very indefinite sense of geography and little attention to chronology, is yet a fascinating revelation of an unusual life and personality." Wis. bul.

The author's "Quest for polar treasures" (1933 Macmillan $2; Allen, G. 10s 6d) continues the story of hazardous adventures of trading in the North

1 Antarctic regions 2 British Antarctic expedition, 1910-1913 30-11358

"This is the first American edition of Scott's last expedition, told by one of the survivors. It is a reprint of the second English edition in two volumes. Ten panoramic illustrations have been omitted, otherwise illustrations and maps are the same as in original edition." Bkl.

"The story of Scott's last expedition, told by one of the surviving members. Cherry-Gerrard, with Oates, constituted the two 'adaptable helpers' added to the scientific staff. He was then 24 years old. In the final tragedy he was one of the search party who found the bodies of Scott and his two companions. The story is magnificently told and the final chapter summing up the expedition from the viewpoint of ten years after is of extreme interest." Wis. bul.

* Cold; the record of an Antarctic sledge journey. 1931 Harcourt $3.50 919.9

1 Byrd Antarctic expedition, 1928-1930 2 Antarctic regions 31-30857

"The charm and glamor and high adventure to be found in the Antarctic are splendidly conveyed by the man who was second in command of the Byrd expedition. The record of the thrilling journey by dog sledges and skis into 'a land of glaciers and ice-clad mountains geologically and geographically untouched and unknown,' is not only absorbing in its abundant and exciting incidents, but it also contains many beautiful word-pictures as well as fine photographs of the region. Index." N.Y. libraries

1 South pole 2 Antarctic regions 33-11176

"A compendium of extracts from reports, narratives and diaries, to form the history of the progress of Antarctic exploration during the last twenty-five years. 'A good combination of history and adventure' it is authoritative, but written popularly enough to be read with interest. Excellent illustrations and maps." N.Y. libraries

Hayward, Walter Brownell

* Last continent of adventure. 1930 Dodd $3 919.9

1 Antarctic regions 30-12967

"This résumé of Antarctic exploration reviews briefly early discoveries and the scientific expeditions of various governments and then recounts the main facts of the expeditions led by Scott, Shackleton, Amundsen, Byrd, Wilkins, and others. Twenty-four illustrations from photographs add to the reader's interest." Bkl.

"Mr. Hayward, who has sympathy and imagination, misses nothing of interest in the record of Antarctic adventure. He is fortunate in his treatment, for it is a man's book as well as a boy's book; indeed, it has a universal appeal." N.Y. Times

1 Scott, Robert Falcon 2 Antarctic regions 3 Scientific expeditions 4 British Antarctic ("Terra Nova") expedition, 1910-1913 5 Terra Nova (Ship) 6 Discovery (Ship) 7 South pole 34-2248

"Describes Captain Scott's expedition to the south pole and the tragic return journey when the whole party perished of exhaustion and starvation within a few miles of safety. Based on Captain Scott's diary and also on the notes of other members of the expedition. Maps. Index." Ontario library review

"Mr. Lindsay's story is admirable for its restraint and eloquent condensation. Nothing of the picture left out, and not a word wasted." N.Y. Times

O'Brien, John S.

1 Byrd Antarctic expedition, 1928-1930 2 Dogs—Stories 31-10250

"A vividly written account of the sledge journey undertaken by the party sent out to establish an emergency base, prior to Byrd's flight over the pole. It forms an excellent supplement to 'Little America,' giving an insight into one phase of polar exploration that must still be carried on by dog sled." Wis bul.

"An absorbing account . . . from which the reader receives a vivid picture of the difficulties and perils of the trip and the spirit of the men that surmounted them . . . The book is attractively illustrated, both by photographs and by black and white drawings which excellently convey the spirit of the narrative. Especially engaging are the portraits of the dogs which played so important a part in the success of the expedition." N.Y. Times

Scott, Robert Falcon

Scott's last expedition; the personal journals of Captain R. F. Scott. 1923 Dodd $3; Murray, J. 7s 6d 919.9

1 Antarctic regions 2 British Antarctic ("Terra Nova") expedition, 1910-1913 3 South pole A24-65

First published 1913 in 2 volumes. This edition contains most of the material found in the first volume of the two volume edition, that is, the journals. Has a biographical sketch by Sir J. M. Barrie. Contains very interesting photographs and a map on end papers

"Few books on the subject of exploration have won the peculiar place achieved by Scott's record of his last trip, with its tragic ending. Its many and varied merits, aside from the tragedy, make it a classic of its kind." N.Y. Tribune

* Voyages of Captain Scott. 1915 Dodd $2.50 919.9

1 Antarctic regions 2 South pole 3 Discovery (Ship) 15-1820

"Retold from 'The voyage of the "Discovery"' and 'Scott's last expedition', by Charles Turley; with an introduction by Sir J. M. Barrie. Numerous illustrations in colour and black and white and a map." Title page

"It is a book to delight the heart of any boy of fifteen or sixteen, but the parent who buys it for this purpose is likely to want to keep it for himself. Charles Turley re-tells in simple, direct, manly fashion and, wherever possible, in Captain Scott's own words." Saturday rev.

Antarctic adventure and research. (Appleton new world of science ser.) 1930 Appleton-Century $2; 6s 919.9

1 Antarctic regions 30-7612

"More research than adventure, this book is an exposition of the physical geography, climatology, and related scientific data of the Antarctic regions, by the man who was senior geologist on Scott's last expedition, 1910-1913. He presents in brief the scientific findings of many expeditions, from 1739 to 1930. One chapter is devoted to 'The value of Antarctic exploration.' Charts and maps." Cleveland

1 Antarctic regions 2 Shackleton, Sir Ernest Henry [31-15325]

"The story of the 1914-1917 Antarctic expedition led by Sir Ernest Shackleton, told by commander Worsley who went with the expedition in command of the ship Endurance. The author, who was a friend of Shackleton, gives in substance a character sketch of the explorer, and a moving account of his death and burial in South Georgia in 1922." Book rev. digest

"This book is well written and welcome as a tribute to hero-worship and amazing fortitude. Commander Worsley has a happy, humorous spirit and having kept a diary in very trying conditions, he produces detail which is always effective. Incidentally, he makes out a useful contrast between the Arctic and Antarctic." Saturday rev.

ABOUT BIOGRAPHY. BIBLIOGRAPHY

Books about biography including bibliographies (920A) and biographical dictionaries (920D) are arranged in this Catalog as separate alphabets and placed before the books containing general collective biography (920). Some libraries may prefer to use R920 for these two sections of biography. Books on individual biography are classed 92 and are placed after all the 920's

Cross, Wilbur Lucius

Outline of biography from Plutarch to Strachey, with a bibliography. 1924 Holt pa 25c 920A

1 Biography 2 Biography—Bibl. 25-721

"This little essay was first given as an address at Columbia University in the summer of 1921. . . . The aim was to indicate in a general way the devious course taken by biography since Plutarch down to our own times, as a guide in the history of a literary genre that has its traditions as much as the novel or the drama." Signed articles, bibliographies." Mudge

An important set for any library. To be complete in 20 volumes

"National cyclopedia of American biography" consists of 22 volumes, regular series, a conspectus and index volume and supplements A, B and C. Published from 1892 irregularly in various printings and at $15 a volume

Dictionary of national biography; ed. by Leslie Stephen and Sidney Lee. 22v Oxford $140; £21 920D

1 Gt. Brit.—Biog. 8-31671

Originally published 1885-1901; reissue, 1908

"The most important reference work for English biography, containing signed articles by specialists, and excellent bibliographies. Articles are adequate, i.e. important names treated at great length, minor names more briefly, and are generally reliable and scholarly. Scope includes all noteworthy inhabitants of the British Isles and the Colonies, exclusive of living persons; includes noteworthy Americans of the colonial period. The first supplement includes biographies of those omitted from the main part and of those who died before January 22, 1901; the second supplement carries the record to December 31, 1911; the entire work includes 30,935 biographies. The index and the epitome (now published as 'The concise dictionary') serves a double purpose, i.e. it is both an index to the main work and (its) supplements, and also an independent biographical dictionary, as it gives abstracts, each about one-fourteenth of the length of the original article.

"The main work and first supplement [were] published in two editions, the original edition in sixty-six volumes, and a re-issue, 1908, on slightly thinner paper, compressed into twenty-two volumes. This reprint incorporates in the articles the corrections noted in the volume of 'Errata' and is, to that extent, to be preferred to the original edition. Libraries buying the work now are recommended to purchase the reprint, but libraries having the original edition and the volume of 'Errata' do not need the reprint." Mudge

"In several ways it differs from its predecessors, the first and second supplements. The number of names included is much smaller . . . contains only 450 biographies. Moreover, the character of the articles is somewhat changed, especially in the appended bibliographies, some of which are distinctly not equal in reference value to those in earlier parts of the D. N. B." I. G. Mudge in Library journal

—The concise dictionary from the beginnings to 1921. 1930 Oxford $7; 21s 920D

1 Gt. Brit.—Biog. 30-20128

In two parts: part 1, index and epitome of the main work and its first supplement (earliest times to 1900); part 2, index and epitome to the second and third supplements (1901-1921)

It gives an abstract of every article in the main work and its supplements. This volume would probably be sufficient for the needs of the small library

1 France—Biog. 8-11487

First issue 1908; second volume, 1909/10; third and latest volume 1924

"This contains approximately 6,000 names as against about 5,000 in the preceding edition (1910) and the articles are longer and more detailed. The actual difference between the two editions is in fact much more than 1,000 names. As only about one-third of the names in the 1910 edition seem to be carried over into the new, there would seem to be nearly 4,000 new names in the 1924 'Qui etes-vous?'" I. G. Adams, James Truslow
* Adams family. 1930 Little $4; Oxford 18s 920

1 Adams family 30-15559

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"The story of four generations of the 'most distinguished family in the United States' and of the events which they shared and frequently shaped is here told by a historian of the same name tho not the same blood. Established in America in 1636 the family during one hundred and twenty-five years developed no marked quality. Beginning with John Adams, historian, publicist, diplomat, and president of the United States and continuing thru John Quincy Adams, Charles Francis Adams, and, in the fourth generation, John Quincy II, Charles Francis II, Henry, and Brooks Adams, the family has steadily maintained its distinguished position and its aristocracy of intellect." Book rev. digest

"James Truslow Adams would not pretend that he had made in this volume any original contribution either to history or biography. But he has supplied an intelligent, readable and historically workmanlike running picture of a considerable section of our nation's development and of one highly important and always individual family which figured in that development, political or intellectual, through four generations." Springfield Republican

* Heroes of modern Europe. 1913 Crowell $1.75; Harrap 2s 920

1 Europe—Biog. A23-909

"The figures from history chosen by the author as the subjects of these sketches are: Dante; Lorenzo the Magnificent; Savonarola; Martin Luther; Charles the Fifth; William the Silent; Henry of Navarre; Richelieu; Louis XIV; Peter the Great; Frederick the Great; Voltaire; Napoleon; Mazzini; Garibaldi; Napoleon III; Tolstoi." Book rev. digest

Bolitho, William

Twelve against the gods; the story of adventure. 1929 Simon & Schuster $4; Heinemann 10s 6d 920

1 Biography 29-24645

Also obtainable in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

Contents: Alexander the Great; Casanova; Christopher Columbus; Mahomet; Lola Montez; Cagliostro (and Seraphina); Charles XII of Sweden; Napoleon I; Lucius Sergius Catiline; Napoleon III; Isadora Duncan; Woodrow Wilson

"Mr. Bolitho writes in journalistic style, to be sure, but in the brilliant perfection of it. He plays rhetorical elegance against disorder, untidy colloquialism carefully set, against classic phraseology strung haphazard. The result is striking. His approach to the subjects of his biographical essays on adventures is forceful, intelligent, free from prejudice as from sentimentality and fresh, even when he has no new material to offer." Outlook

Bolton, Mrs Sarah (Knowles)

* Lives of girls who became famous. rev and enl ed 1930 Crowell $2 920

1 Woman—Biog. 30-29879

Contents: Elizabeth Barrett Browning; George Eliot; Florence Nightingale; Jean Ingelow; Jenny Lind; Madame de Staël; Rosa Bonheur; Harriet Beecher Stowe; Helen Hunt Jackson; Lucretia Mott; Mary A. Livermore; Margaret Fuller Ossoli; Maria Mitchell; Louisa M. Alcott; Mary Lyon; Harriet G. Hosmer; Julia Ward Howe; Jane Addams; Alice Freeman Palmer; Clara Barton; Susan B. Anthony; Anna Howard Shaw; Frances E. Willard; Elizabeth Blackwell; Helen Keller; Lady Astor; Madame Curie

Entirely revised and reset. A few of the subjects, who were living when Mrs Bolton laid down her pen, have since passed away. Their biographical sketches have been completed. Some new material has been added, including: Jenny Lind, Jane Addams, Alice Freeman Palmer, Clara Barton, Frances E. Willard, Helen Keller, Anna Howard Shaw, Elizabeth Blackwell, Susan B. Anthony and Madame Curie

Biographies of Lady Brassey, Elizabeth Thompson Butler and Baroness Burdett-Coutts included in the old edition have been omitted

The author's "Famous leaders among women" (1895 Crowell) is out of print, 1933

* Lives of poor boys who became famous. rev and enl ed 1931 Crowell $2 920

Contents: Bernard Palissy; Carolus Linnaeus; Samuel Johnson; Benjamin Franklin; Oliver Goldsmith; James Watt; Wolfgang Mozart; Jean Paul Richter; Joseph Marie Jacquard; Bertel Thorwaldsen; Peter Cooper; Michael Faraday; George Stephenson; George Peabody; Sir Josiah Mason; William Lloyd Garrison; David G. ‡ American portraits, 1875-1900. 1922 Houghton $3.50 920

1 U.S.—Biog. 22-4659

Sketches of Mark Twain, Henry James, James McNeill Whistler, James Blaine, Henry Adams, Sidney Lanier, Grover Cleveland, and Joseph Jefferson

"Each sketch leaves with the reader a distinct picture of a real and interesting personality. The narrow limits forbid full portraiture, and in focusing for unity and sharpness of outline, the biographer necessarily sacrifices something of the modifying effect of minor details; but, on the whole, breadth of view and truth of perspective are fairly well preserved." Contents: Daniel Webster; Henry Clay; John Caldwell Calhoun; Horace Greeley; Edwin Booth; Portrait of a scholar: Francis James Child; Portrait of a scientist: Asa Gray

"The understanding is high, the writing excellent. One may not always agree with the interpretations, but it is a relief in these days to find something of honest research presented in such readable fashion." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Bare souls. 1924 Harper $3.50 920

Contents: Clue to the labyrinth of souls; Voltaire; Thomas Gray; Horace Walpole; William Cowper; Charles Lamb; John Keats; Gustave Flaubert; Edward Fitzgerald

"Psychological clinics aiming to bare the essential individualities of eight writers of the past, the author working with material supposed to be the most spontaneous and unguarded expressions of his subjects—their familiar letters. As the sketches are chiefly literary in their interest, they will appeal to a more limited audience than 'Damaged souls,' for example." Cleveland

Confederate portraits. 1914 Houghton $3.50 920

1 Confederate States of America—Biog.
2 Gettysburg, Battle of, 1863 14-7092

"Character studies of J. E. Johnston, J. E. B. Stuart, Longstreet, Beauregard, J. P. Benjamin, A. H. Stephens, Robert Toombs, Raphael Semmes and a short chapter on the battle of Gettysburg. Companion volume to author's 'Lee the American' and shows the same careful research and considered judgment. Appeared in large part in the Atlantic monthly. Portraits." N.Y. state lib.

"In these seven essays in psychography Mr Bradford has made a substantial contribution to American biography, to American history, and to American literature. The volume which contains them confirms Mr Bradford's position as one of the foremost of our contemporary men of letters. The book is well planned and well executed and well written. Mr Bradford constructs with an admirable architectural skill; and he writes with clarity and with charm. He has humor and he has wit; and he uses both these tools of the trade without calling our attention to the chips of his workshop." International book review

Daughters of Eve. 1930 Houghton $3.50 920

1 Woman—Biog. 2 France—Biog. 30-5265

Contents: Eve in the apple-orchard: Ninon de Lenclos; Eve as dove and serpent: Madame de Maintenon; Eve and Almighty God: Madame Guyon; Eve and Adam: Mademoiselle de Lespinasse; Eve enthroned: Catherine the Great; Eve and the pen: George Sand; Eve in the spotlight: Sarah Bernhardt

Mr Bradford's method is "to sort over the evidence, first hand and hearsay, searching minutely and patiently for the characteristic action, the phrase which crystalizes a personality When he has gleaned enough, or all that his scheme will contain, he reassembles them in just order and proportion, weaves them together with the necessary narrative and the gentlest explanation and comment." Quick and the dead. 1931 Houghton $3.50 920

1 Biography 31-7008

"Psychographs of four living men—Edison, Mussolini, Ford, Coolidge—and three now dead —Lenin, Roosevelt and Wilson. Mr. Bradford attempts a calm, dispassionate analysis and balance of the subjects' good and bad graces. The result with Roosevelt and Coolidge, for example, is interesting: with Lenin and Wilson it is disappointing. But as 'weight and measure' biographies, Mr. Bradford's have their virtues." Saints and sinners. 1932 Houghton $3.50 920

1 Biography 32-9257

Contents: Caesar Borgia; Saint Francis of Assisi; Casanova; Thomas à Kempis; Talleyrand; Fénelon; Byron

"In this, his 16th . . . volume, Mr Bradford is at his highest peak of literary skill and human understanding. A collection of essays dealing with seven of the world's most eminent saints and sinners might well tend to choppiness and fragmentary treatment. But in this instance succinct portrayal is combined with amazing comprehension to make a volume of delightful reading." Springfield Republican

* Ten modern poets. 1930 Harcourt $2.50 920

1 Poets 30-13387

"Five American poets; Robert Frost, Amy Lowell, Edna St Vincent Millay, Edwin Arlington Robinson, and Carl Sandburg; and five English poets, Walter de la Mare, A. E. Housman, Rudyard Kipling, John Masefield, and Alfred Noyes, are presented in the volume. The poets were chosen on account of their 'liberalized intellectual attitude,' and the author includes an evaluation of their work along with the biographical sketches." Book rev. digest

Twelve American poets before 1900. 1933 Harcourt $2.50 920

Biographical and critical sketches written for young people. Contents: Philip Freneau; W. C. Bryant; R. W. Emerson; H. W. Longfellow; J. G. Whittier; E. A. Poe; O. W. Holmes; J. R. Lowell; Walt Whitman; Emily Dickinson; Sidney Lanier; Eugene Field

"These well considered and sympathetic discussions will give a reader much more than mere biographical facts and a historical placing of the authors included. Miss Brenner's style is delightful and she has an instinct for choosing the incidents, the bits of personal description, that add vitality and charm to her text. She wisely uses a wealth of quotation, and in a way to incite readers to make a first-hand acquaintance with the poets represented." A. T. Eaton in N.Y. Times

Feiling, Keith Grahame

Sketches in nineteenth century biography. 1930 Longmans $2.50; 7s 6d 920

Biographical sketches, reprinted for the most part from the London Times, of Pitt, Canning, Croker, Southey, Wordsworth, Coleridge, Newman, Lytton, Bagehot, Disraeli, Curzon, and Lord Liverpool

"This volume of biographical sketches shows Mr. Feiling at his best. It contains a dozen portraits of statesmen and thinkers, from Pitt to Curzon, of widely different temperaments, and the connecting link between them is the Tory faith which all professed. In short, Mr. Feiling has successfully performed the difficult task of writing a history of Toryism, since its reincarnation in the days of George III, in the form of a series of studies of its leading exponents." "Henry James, Sr., and his sons William and Henry, are the subjects of this work. The religious, philosophical and literary bents, respectively, of all three, are clearly and skillfully described and analyzed." Providence

"The portrait of this entire family is clear in every corner and in the middle. It is a fine family group which has nothing of the tintype about it. It is modern photography marked by balance, precision, and taken by a steady hand." Boston Transcript

Guedalla, Philip

Fathers of the Revolution. 1926 Putnam $4 920

1 U.S.—Hist.—Revolution—Biog. 26-11640

"If dexterity of phrase and good humor, combined with lightly worn scholarship, are qualifications for such a task, Mr Guedalla has made here an excellent beginning. He can make even George III a rather interesting and sympathetic figure. Mr Guedalla has made his Eminent Americans as irresistible as Mr Strachey's 'Eminent Victorians.' There is no alternative." Independent

Hall, Josef Washington

Eminent Asians; six great personalities of the New East. 1929 Appleton-Century $5; 21s 920

1 Asia—Biog. 29-19316

Contents: Sun Yat-Sen; Yamagata and Ito; Mustapha Kemal; Josef Stalin; Mahatma Gandhi

"His information is the outstanding virtue of Mr. Hall's book. For the presentation of this information he is well equipped with a style usually simple and direct. His good fortune is that he has five remarkable stories to tell and he knows them well enough to tell them well.

Hall, Josef W.—Continued

These stories have more adventure than Mr. Zane Grey could invent. . . I could wish that in his otherwise dependable book Mr. Hall had spared us the use of inexact and unserviceable generalizations." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Hansen, Harry

Midwest portraits, a book of memories and friendships. 1923 Harcourt o. p. 1933 920

1 Authors, American 23-15084

"Character sketches of some contemporary Chicago writers whose careers are still in the making, with critical comment on their work. Separate chapters are given to Carl Sandburg, Sherwood Anderson, Robert Herrick and Edgar Lee Masters, Lew Sarett, Wallace Smith and Ben Hecht. There is a chapter also on Chicago's literary critics, on the famous round table at Schlogl's where so many writers gather, on the magazine 'Poetry' and its editor, Harriet Monroe." Book rev. digest

"Mr Hansen has written a book full of the quality of Midwestern letters and full of the spirit of the Middle West. His informal, unpretending method is one to which these authors, in so many of whom lingers something of the pioneer, yield themselves most readily. In a deeper sense than that of accuracy to fact he has been true to the land and to the men of whom he writes." New republic

Jaeger, Muriel

Adventures in living; from Cato to George Sand. 1932 Morrow $2; Bell, G. 10s 6d 920

1 Biography 32-24988

Published in England under title: Experimental lives, from Cato to George Sand

Sketches of the personalities of five experimenters in the ways of living: Cato, the Stoic; St Francis, the Christian; Lord Chesterfield, man of the world; Thomas Day, child of nature; and George Sand, the free woman

"Chesterfield and George Sand are perhaps the best of the lives, but St. Francis, who suffers most from the method of approach (his mysticism being virtually ignored) provokes the happiest examples of Miss Jaeger's power of graphic condensation. . . This is a book to buy and keep; and its author is to be congratulated on an unusual achievement." Spectator

Josephson, Matthew

* Robber barons; the great American capitalists, 1861-1901. 1934 Harcourt $3 920

1 Capitalists and financiers 34-4665

"The men whose fortunes form the subject of this history were the capitalists who seized power in the United States after the Civil war, men who thru their command of capital became commanders of industry and banking and of the government itself. The dominating figures of this era and this book are Jay Gould, the Vanderbilts, J. P. Morgan, Andrew Carnegie, John D. Rockefeller, James J. Hill, Collis P. Huntington, E. H. Harriman, Henry C. Frick, and others." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Josephson has told his story of 'The Robber Barons' with great verve and a fine sense of its dramatic values. What he has written is not a mere series of biographies but a genuine history, with the stories of the great American capitalists skillfully interwoven, and with an eye always on the broader social background. He has digested an immense mass of material, and he is particularly to be congratulated upon the lucidity with which he sets forth the complex financial transactions and the uncanny legerdemain by which most of the barons built up their fortunes." 1 Cabinet officers 2 Statesmen, American 34-7597

"Lively characterizations of fifty or more of the men behind the New Deal, not alone the principal personages but some of the assistants whose names do not figure in the papers. The book is pro-Administration. The first chapter is devoted to the 'chief croupier' of the New Deal, and a sketch of Mrs Roosevelt is included. Some of the 'fallen angels' of the Democratic party are described, and also the chief enemies of the Administration." Book rev. digest

"A skillful blend of accurate information and crisp, informal anecdote. Whether or not his judgments and his predictions can ultimately be depended upon, The New Dealers is bound to remain an invaluable (and very lively) reference book—a shrewd and exhaustive Who's Who of the Roosevelt régime." Plutarch

Everybody's Plutarch, arranged and edited for the modern reader by R. T. Bond. 1931 Dodd $3.50 920

1 Greece—Biog. 2 Rome—Biog. 31-32922

Includes "the salient lives only, omitting the biographies of those whom time has lessened in stature, or whose careers have been touched upon sufficiently in the records of their contemporaries. By careful selection of this sort and by the occasional deletion of passages of moralizing and the omission of the comparisons, the book has been reduced to contain, it is hoped, the best and essential part of the original, without the absence of any important figure from its pages. The translation used is that called Dryden's, corrected from the Greek and revised by Arthur Hugh Clough." Foreword

‡ Plutarch's Lives of illustrious men. rev by A. H. Clough Little $4 920

1 Greece—Biog. 2 Rome—Biog 21-3462

"This writer, one of the most celebrated of antiquity, lived in the first century of our era. The work that has immortalized his name, and made him a favorite with wise men and promising youth, is the lives of forty-six Greeks and Romans. These lives he wrote in pairs, portraying one Greek and one Roman, and then drawing a comparison between them. . . Among the most delightful sketches ever written." C. K. Adams

"Plutarch's heroes were the conquerors and rulers of the ancient world—statesmen, politicians, orators, and demagogues, whose conduct the biographer subjected, without being too severe with them, to the test of Greek ethics and philosophies as embodied in the teachings of Socrates and Plato and Aristotle." W. L. Cross's Outline of biography

First ladies. 1932 Macmillan $2 920

1 Woman—Biog. 2 U.S.—Biog. 32-30371

Short biographical sketches of the wives of the presidents of the United States, beginning with Martha Washington and including Mrs Hoover

"Each chapter is written in a different vein as each lady is considered, but it is all breezy and interesting, and tends to show that the influence of those 'first ladies' was a real one in each administration. The book is illustrated with charming silhouettes which the artist, Undine Dunn, produced after delving in old records for accuracy." Springfield Republican

Man of the renaissance. 1933 Viking press $3.50 920

1 Renaissance—Italy 2 Savonarola, Girolamo Maria Francesco Matteo 3 Machiavelli, Niccolò 4 Castiglione, Baldassare, conte 5 Aretino, Pietro 33-36995

In the lives of Savonarola, Machiavelli, Castiglione and Aretino, the author traces the development of the Italian renaissance from 1494 to 1530

"This is an amazing book, a book that will be read with interest and varying enjoyment by every student of the Renaissance and by every man or woman who delights in the brilliant pageantry of humanity which followed the sober procession of mediaevalism, or who finds increasing and unceasing interest in the perplexing problems of conflicting personalities grappling with policies and with principles, defying powers human and divine." Sergeant, Elizabeth Shepley

* Fire under the Andes; a group of North American portraits. 1927 Knopf $3 920

1 U.S.—Biog. 27-5413

"Miss Sergeant takes her title from Emerson's 'We must not only have hydrogen in balloons, and steel springs under coaches, but we must have fire under the Andes at the core of the world.' Regarding every one of her subjects as cosmos composed of spirit and matter and achievement, Miss Sergeant has attempted to penetrate to the core of each and make visible, by her gift of words, the nature of its central fire. The fourteen she has chosen are: Amy Lowell, Robert Edmond Jones, William Alanson White (the director of St. Elizabeth's Hospital), William Allen White, Eugene O'Neill, Elinor Wylie, Charles Townsend Copeland, Pauline Lord, Paul Robeson, Alice Hamilton ('Scientist in Armour'), H. L. Mencken, Willa Cather, Robert Frost and Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court." N.Y. World

1 Gt. Brit.—Biog. 19-16749

Contents: Cardinal Manning; Florence Nightingale; Dr Arnold; General Gordon

"The portrait that suggests most doubt is that of Dr Arnold of Rugby. . . . The details in Mr Strachey's essay may all be correct . . . but the perspective is all wrong, and the result is caricature. . . . The pictures of Cardinal Manning and Florence Nightingale are as distinguished as they are unconventional, and the story of the long tragedy of the mission and death of Gordon is a very fine piece of historical writing." Spectator

"Infused with sketches of almost Gibbonesque irony, these biographical studies of four distinguished and famous personages present them in aspects which are more or less familiar." Athenaeum

Portraits in miniature, and other essays. 1931 Harcourt $2.50; Chatto 6s 920

Contents: Sir John Harington; Muggleton; John Aubrey; Life, illness, and death of Dr North; Congreve, Collier, Macaulay, and Mr Summers; Madame de Sévigné's cousin; Sad story of Dr Colbatch; President De Brosses; James Boswell; Abbé Morellet; Mary Berry; Madame De Lieven; Six English historians: Hume, Gibbon, Macaulay, Carlyle, Froude, Creighton

"Minor figures are perhaps more suitable for this revelatory purpose than major ones who, at least as far as artists and writers are concerned, usually express their period only antithetically by their rebellion. So Mr. Strachey's studies of these little men and women, mainly of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, give us perhaps a better understanding of their times than would any vignette of the great (who, for that matter, customarily refuse to be vignetted)." "An intimately personal record of Dr Abbott's service as preacher, author, and editor, reflecting the religious, political, economic and social development in America during his life of nearly eighty years." N.Y. state lib.

"These papers are reminiscences, not history. They lay no claim to accuracy. I have never kept a diary or journal. I have always been more interested in what is going to happen tomorrow than in what happened yesterday. . . . The reader will find few dates and many inaccuracies in these papers. They are simply a record of the impressions left on the mind of a man who has passed the three-score-years-and-ten as he endeavors to recall some of the personages and incidents of a somewhat busy but not adventurous life." "The author of these reminiscences of a journalist began his career nearly fifty years ago in the offices of the New Orleans Times-Picayune, later serving successively on the New York Tribune, the Chicago Times, and the New York Journal. In 1921 he became editor of the Christian Science Monitor. He held that office and . . . served on the editorial board until the time of his death, 1934." Book rev. digest

"Although autobiographical in form, Abbot's book does not tell you much about himself, save as you may infer his personality from his comment upon the events he has seen and the people he has known during fifty years of hard newspaper work. As a whole, this book is a panorama of two generations of American political history as a keen-eyed, reflective, temperamentally judicious and discriminating reporter has seen it." Sat. rev. of lit.

"A delightful biography of the warmhearted, brilliant French woman who played so considerable a part in French journalism and politics from the days of the second empire. As the mistress of a leading political salon, as the founder and editor for twenty years of La Nouvelle revue (1879-99), Mme Adam did much to consolidate the third republic and to stimulate the revival of the French national spirit. She numbered as her friends Gambetta and Thiers among French ministers, and such eminent writers as George Sand, Flaubert, Victor Hugo, Pierre Loti and Maurice Barrès." Pittsburgh

"She is here presented to us by one who has lectured and written a good deal about France and French history, and who has had the advantage of Mme Adam's personal acquaintance and interest in the present work. "A type of autobiography which seems to stand absolutely in a niche of its own. Its wise philosophy of life, its deep understanding of human nature, its pervading charm of style and of mood, will surely entitle it to an abiding place among those rare volumes that are the perennial joy of cultured minds." F. T. Cooper in Publishers' weekly

30-25080

"These letters, dating from 1885 to 1891, are an admirable supplement to 'The education of Henry Adams,' and a further revelation of the writer's receptive and brilliant analytical mind and aloof, fastidious personality. They contain comment on society, literature, journalism, and political affairs, accompanied by mordant criticism of personalities. Many were written from abroad and from the South Seas, the latter among the best travel letters ever written." Cleveland

Adams, J. T. Henry Adams. 1933 Boni $2.50 92

33-27053

"This study was originally written as an introduction to a projected collection of Henry Adams's works. It is not long, but contains all the known facts, and from letters and other sources fills many of the gaps in Henry Adams's own remarkable autobiography. Mr. J. T. Adams writes in his usual clear, intelligent style." Cincinnati

Adams, John

Chinard, Gilbert. Honest John Adams. 1933 Little $3.75 92

33-32200

"Professor Chinard has recorded the varied and brilliant career of this first, and perhaps greatest, of the Adamses with sympathy and discriminating skill. The early chapters of his biography, based largely on the incomparably intimate Diary, trace the evolution of John Adams from a dreamy theological student to one of the leading lawyers at the Massachusetts bar, and the rise of constitutional issues between the colonies and the mother country until they darkened the political skies. . . Professor Chinard records the stages whereby the 'brace of Adamses' came to take the leading part in the constitutional debate and in precipitating the Revolution." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 U.S.—Hist.—1783-1865 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 3 U.S.—For. rel. 28-25438

"Charles Francis Adams made this massive fragment of the diary of John Quincy Adams available to the public fifty years ago, but it has long been out of print. . . It was a happy idea of Allan Nevins to compile a selection of extracts from this formidable work and in the compass of 600 pages to present the passages of greatest permanent interest. His subtitle, 'American Political, Social and Intellectual Life From Washington to Polk,' is not an exaggeration." N.Y. Evening post

Aksakov, Sergiei Timofieevich

A Russian gentleman; tr. from the Russian by J. D. Duff. (World's classics) Oxford 80c; 2s 92

1 Aksakov family 2 Russia—Soc. life & cust. W24-2

Russian classic published in 1856. This translation first published 1917

"Half imaginary memoirs centering about the author's paternal grandfather and describing his parents' courtship and early married life. The narrative closes with the day of the writer's own birth. It is accepted in Russia as a faithful picture of the conditions which prevailed in the district of Orenburg under Catherine the Great." Pittsburgh

Followed chronologically by the author's "Years of childhood" (Oxford 80c; 2s) which is an account of Aksakov's happy childhood between the ages of five and eight. "A Russian schoolboy" (Oxford 80c; 2s) continues his school and home life from his eighth thru his fifteenth year, 1807-1815

The author's "Chronicles of a Russian family" is a combination of parts of these three volumes of reminiscences published in one volume in the Broadway translations (1924 Dutton $3.75; Routledge 12s 6d)

Albert, prince consort of Queen Victoria

Bolitho, Hector. Albert the Good, and the Victorian reign. 1932 Appleton-Century $3.50; Cobden-Sanderson 25s 92

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist.—19th century 32-8168

"The letters written by the Prince Consort to his brother and recently discovered by Mr Bolitho in the Coburg archives have been used as the foundation of his record of the Prince's life in England. After sketching in with some interesting detail the childhood background both of Albert and Victoria the author traces the development of the Prince in his difficult position, his influence on the Queen's opinions and temper, and his growth in the esteem of her ministers. Altogether the book is an illuminating view of the birth of the Victorian age." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Bolitho has succeeded in this volume in making a very dull man extremely interesting, for he shows quite clearly that what is known as Victorianism owed far more to Prince Albert than to the Queen. That, indeed, is the great achievement of the book, for had Victoria been left to herself there can be no shadow of doubt but she would have been an entirely different woman from what she became under the domination of her husband." * Meigs, C. L. Invincible Louisa. 1933 Little $2 92

33-12751

At head of title: The story of the author of Little women

"A sympathetic and clearly-written biography of Louisa M. Alcott, picturing her in the midst of her family and friends, among whom she numbered Emerson and Thoreau. The book contains a chronology, and twenty-one photographs of the Alcott family and the houses in which they lived. Intended for young readers." Book rev. digest

"Louisa May Alcott and Cornelia Meigs are an ideal combination. . . Cornelia Meigs is herself the author of a number of excellent and well-loved books for young people; in their pages the reader finds the same integrity that characterizes Louisa Alcott's writing. Back of each author's work one senses a certain fine reserve and dignity and Miss Meigs's books, like those of the earlier writer, have a very definite American quality." A. T. Eaton in N.Y. Times

Aldrich, Mrs Lilian (Woodman)

Crowding memories. 1920 Houghton $5; Constable 24s 92

20-19664

"These reminiscences of the wife of a poet center about her celebrated husband but are rich in pictures of other great personages that she has intimately known, notably Edwin Booth, William Dean Howells, Samuel L. Clemens, Robert Browning, James McNeill Whistler, Julia Ward Howe, Charles Dickens. The book is well illustrated and has an index." Book rev. digest

"Mrs Aldrich has handled the rich material with good judgment and much insight, making a total that is always interesting, and often enlightening, entitling it to a definite place in our literary chronicles." Weekly review

Aldrich, Thomas Bailey

Greenslet, Ferris. Life of Thomas Bailey Aldrich. 1908 Houghton $2.50 92

8-27511

Mr Greenslet has brought to his work delicacy and reticence, together with a skill in words that reproduces something of the charm of one who made refinement the end of all his labor. He tells just enough of the child's surroundings at Portsmouth, of the clerk and youthful editor in New York; he follows the man sympathetically thru his Boston years of prosperous toil and golden ease, to the honored close. It is a happy life gracefully told. Condensed from Nation

"There is abundant proof of his pleasant humor in these pages. Aldrich's letters are full of it. He is not an artificial 'literary' letter-writer; his merit is that he is natural, spontaneous and always light of wit. 'I was fifty-nine yesterday,' he writes. 'It is unpleasant to be fifty-nine; but it would be unpleasanter not to be, having got started.'" Athenaeum

1 Macedonia—Hist. [32-21895]

"The two outstanding merits of this book are compactness and catholicity. Times (London) lit. sup.

Pell, John. Ethan Allen. 1929 Houghton $5; Constable 21s 92

"Based upon careful original research, this chronicle of the picturesque leader of the Green Mountain Boys touches with humorous understanding upon all the strange angles of Allen's character and career. Bibliography, chronology, notes, index. Photographs from old woodcuts, prints, manuscripts etc. Maps on end pages." N.Y. libraries

"Mr. Pell has written a book that may not be the 'last word' on the subject but that will hold first place for a considerable time. A sympathetic interest in his hero we concede him at every step; but he is not blind to the angles in Allen's rugged character, nor does he try to conceal or condone them. He touches them with a dry humor." Springfield Republican

Andersen, Hans Christian

12-30331

"The absolute candor with which Andersen lays bare his soul, the complete intentional or unintentional self-revelation, gives a psychological value to the book which no mere literary grace could bestow. . . . Andersen remained, until the day of his death, a child. His innocence was more than virginal; his unworldliness simply inconceivable. . . . He conceived of his life as a fairy-tale. . . . The feeling of the marvellous pervades the book from beginning to end." H. H. Boyesen

This edition brings the narrative down to 1869. An account of his later years will be found in Bain's "Hans Christian Andersen," published by Dodd and now, 1933, out of print

"The tale of an American writer's journey through his own imaginative world and through the world of facts, with many of his experiences and impressions among other writers—told in many notes—in four books—and an epilogue." Subtitle

"Mr Anderson's story of himself is not a conventional autobiography. . . . He does not impose a pattern, even a simple chronological order, on his material, but lets that material possess him in retrospect and tell itself in a form which is inherent in its substance and grows with its unfolding. The book is less notable as an account of physical than of mental activity." New republic

Anthony, Susan Brownell
Dorr, Mrs R. L. C. Susan B. Anthony, the woman who changed the mind of a nation. 1928 Stokes $5 92
1 Woman—Suffrage 28-22296

"Mrs. Dorr runs counter to current fashions by writing a warmly partisan biography. She is never impersonal; she is often dogmatic as to both people and events; and Susan B. Anthony is her idol. But her partisanship is leavened by wit and becomes companionable. Mrs. Dorr has a lively sense of drama. Out of her unfaltering judgments emerges a trenchant line-portrait which few readers with an interest in American types will care to miss." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Antin, Mary
‡ Promised land. 1912 Houghton $3 92
12-10316

"Autobiography of an immigrant who was born . . . in Polotzk, Russia . . . and spent her childhood there. Her family being driven by the pressure of poverty to immigrate, when she was twelve years old she was brought to America, where she made a brilliant progress thru the public schools of Boston and thru Barnard college. The story of her life is absorbing in its human significance, remarkable for its literary distinction and convincingly hopeful in its view of the immigrant problem in America." Pittsburgh

1 Rome—Hist.—Republic, B.C. 510-30
31-28241

A companion book to the author's "Life and times of Cleopatra"

"Mr Weigall has written a history, not only of Marc Antony, but of the Rome of his times, a narrative which explains the political battles of that violent period and the parts played by the chief party leaders. The author treats Antony as a man grossly maligned by contemporary writers and concludes that if he had not been upset by his lover's quarrel with Cleopatra at the time of the battle of Actium 'he would in all probability have become the sole sovereign lord of the earth.'" Arblay, Mme Frances (Burney) d'
Diary and letters; ed. and selected by Muriel Masefield. 1931 Dutton $3.75; Routledge 12s 6d 92

"Excerpts from the diary and letters of Mme D'Arblay, so arranged as to give a continuous picture of her life from 1778 until 1821. The excerpts were chosen with the view of forming a gallery of portraits of the great men and typical characters of her day. There is an introductory essay on Frances Burney in life and literature." Book rev. digest

"Mrs Masefield has kept all the best parts of the diary, and they give an almost uninterrupted story. The introduction and the occasional 'links' in the text are admirably done. Fanny Burney is the most readable of diarists and this edition should bring her to the notice of readers who have hitherto been wary of her prolixity." New statesman

"As a diarist Miss Burney is with Pepys and Evelyn, as a letter writer with Walpole and Chesterfield. And unlike all of these, except Horace, she is a novelist as well." George Saintsbury

Archer, William
Archer, Charles. William Archer; life, work and friendships. 1931 Yale univ. press $5; Allen, G. 16s 92
[31-30841]

"An intimate biography of the English dramatic critic and playwright, best known to the general public, perhaps, as the author of the successful melodrama The Green Goddess. In addition to the account of his life and work, this volume also contains much of his correspondence with other men of letters,—Bernard Shaw, Thomas Hardy, Gilbert Murray, and others." Book rev. digest

"Colonel Archer has been wise to let the story tell itself through the documents he has compiled. What was left he has told with a soldier's laconicism. The volume proves one of the most valuable contributions to the record of an age which, being so close to it, our contemporaries are inclined to overlook." Theatre arts monthly account of the experiences that went into the making of George Arliss as a character actor." Book rev. digest

"This must be accounted among the best of recent additions to the great mass of theatrical autobiographies, not only because it is entertaining from first to last, but because it is cleverly written and has the somewhat uncommon characteristics of modesty, sanity, shrewdness, and an informing spirit of kindly humor. It is noteworthy also as the work of a man who has solved and is eager to explain the true secrets of professional success." Sat. rev. of lit.

Arnold, Benedict

Sellers, C. C. Benedict Arnold, the proud warrior. 1930 Minton $1 92

1 U.S.—Hist.—Revolution 30-7384

"An interpretative biography of the brilliant and notorious American leader and traitor, unbiased and based upon historically accurate facts concerning the man and his career. Mr Sellers does not try to whitewash the character of his subject, but maintains that Arnold's treason was due to his honest belief that the cause of American patriotism was too weak, and that Britain could offer him higher rank and good money for his service in the vocation that was Arnold's heart and soul: war." Book rev. digest

"If Mr. Sellers does not sustain the dramatic action uniformly throughout his work, it may be said that this is too much to expect. He is not at his best in those passages in which a style approaching direct narrative is used, as in his accounts of Arnold's military campaigns, although those campaigns were as indicative of the fire-eater's personality as some of the detached incidents on which the author splashes color with a liberal hand." In his published writings there were at times a not unbecoming hauteur, a happy malice of the pen, and even something which, while really dexterity in saying things difficult to utter, might be mistaken for affectation. In these letters a more intimate side of his character is revealed to the public; they are absolutely simple and real; wholly free from strain; rich in the temper of enjoyment; unfailing in the spirit of genuine affection; and behind their kindness and their brightness we can discern strength, and even something of unostentatious heroism; loyalty to duty; loyalty to truth; loyalty to an ideal life." Warre Cornish, Francis. Jane Austen (English men of letters) 1913 Macmillan $1.50; 3s 6d 92

13-35971

The two biographical chapters are excellent, saying neatly and concisely all that need be said. The comments are to the point; those devoted to the novels are apt in description and criticism, and include some timely corrections of popular misconceptions. The last chapter is somewhat disappointing in that it gives no details of the style, which is surely a chief merit of the novels. Condensed from Athenaeum

Bacon, Francis, viscount St Albans

33-1501

"In this simple and rather condensed biography Miss Sturt sets herself the task of rehabilitating Bacon. She shows 'the real Bacon as vividly as the records allow,' in the environment of the later Elizabethan times, following the development of the sober precocious youth into the great lawyer and politician, writer and philosopher." Book rev. digest

"At first sight this seems a slight little volume to do all its work, which is to provide a simple and candid account of Bacon's life. Examination, however, reveals that Miss Sturt has written a very readable, sane and well-planned book in which the essentials are stated without undue emphasis." New statesman and Nation

Hammerton, Sir J. A. Barrie; the story of a genius. 1929 Dodd $5; Low 16s 92

"A devoted admirer of Barrie follows him from Kirriemuir to London, telling the story of his development into the most popular dramatist of his time, largely thru the medium of his correspondents and reporters and the memories and anecdotes of his friends. The history of the plays and their production is told in detail, especially the fortunes of 'Peter Pan.'" Book rev. digest

"It proceeds with stolid, industrious tread from one magazine article to another, from playlet to playlet, from speech to speech. It reads sometimes like a gigantic and discreet obituary notice written by a man who was determined to drag in somehow every press-cutting in the pile before him. . . But a reader who rewards Mr. Hammerton's industry with his own and who brings to this compilation a hunger and thirst for knowledge of Barrie will find much to please him." Times (London) lit. sup.

"First as sealer, then as first-class skipper, then as captain of Peary's vessel and also of Stefansson's later, Captain Robert A. Bartlett has a thrilling career to recall here. It is not exactly a vivid narrative that he gives us, but just a sincere, unembellished one is readable when one has had such a career as his. It is the story of a man who loves the sea and hardy adventure." Providence

"Captain Robert A. Bartlett's story of his life will cast its spell over all who find in true tales of daring that thrill which comes from contact with brave men and stalwart deeds. . . The 'Log' is a book without embellishments, and some few may feel that it lacks a little in color. "A fascinating and delightful book which will be welcomed by the reader who enjoys a really fine biography. The book gives us a living portrait with the Victorian age as a background; we see 'Dizzy' as an author, as a statesman, and as a man. Born a Jew, reared as a Christian, he retains the Jewish characteristics of determination of purpose, accepting or ignoring rebuffs and prejudices when so doing eventually means the accomplishment of his wishes. We see him, hear him, and live with him in these pages." Wis. bul.

Sykes, James. Mary Anne Disraeli; the story of Viscountess Beaconsfield. 1928 Appleton-Century $2.50; Benn 10s 6d 92

28-24109

"The book is readable and interesting, and most people will agree with Mr. A. G. Gardiner, who has contributed a foreword to it, that 'in restoring the picture of Mary Anne Disraeli and clearing it of the accretions of the gossip-monger, the author has incidentally thrown a new and agreeable light on the most baffling and enigmatic figure in the annals of British statesmanship.' But no less true is another remark of his, viz., that 'in spite of the not unattractive presentment that Mr. Sykes offers of [Mrs. Disraeli] the mystery of Disraeli's marriage to her remains unsolved.'" "Mr Benson follows his recollections of the Victorian era contained in As We Were with a picture of British post-war society, showing the changes which the war has brought about in manners, morals and literature and especially in the outlook of the younger generation. . . In a chapter entitled Grub street, Benson discusses post-war literature." Book rev. digest

1 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 2 England—Soc. life & cust. 30-29656

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"There were few men of real eminence in the last glittering decades of the Victorian era whom the author, son of the Archbishop of Canterbury and one of a well-known literary family, did not meet on terms of intimacy. They are all to be seen in this human 'peep show'—Gladstone and Queen Victoria, Tennyson, Browning, Swinburne, Oscar Wilde and the great ladies of the Victorian pageant, endowed by their memorist with a certain grandeur, yet treated with a sense of humor." Book rev. digest

"The Victorian era is proving a pie into which one has but to put in a thumb and out comes a plum; and here is Mr. Benson trying his luck and handing out a fist full. Mr. Benson has his likes and dislikes which he does not disguise, but he is a good showman, and although he calls his show a peep-show, it is really a show on the grand scale. His fat ladies are prodigious, his living skeletons rattle, and his fun is all the fun of the fair." Saturday rev.

"Mr Benson's task is unusual, for he is dealing throughout this story with notable persons. One is likely to miss the tact which mingles with his frank intimacy, just as one might neglect to realize the deep personal tenderness which plays so large a part in his power to make of this intimate biography a revealing tribute worthy his mother. Beveridge, Albert Jeremiah

* Bowers, C. G. Beveridge and the progressive era. 1932 Houghton $5 92

1 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 32-22530

"'Beveridge and the Progressive Era' is, as the publishers rightly describe it, 'a political history of the United States from the Spanish War to the years following the World War.' The life of Senator Beveridge is the thread along which the story is developed, but, although the attention is focussed upon him, his portrait becomes merely a part of the picture. Scores of other figures are depicted on that grand canvas which, besides, is devoted as much to the events as to the personalities who played a role in them. . . Mr. Bowers's work, the record of a whole epoch, deserves all praise. Like a huge river, his narrative flows. It is by its powerful, slow motion and by its comprehensiveness that such a book should be judged, not by the artistry of style and the phrasing of sentences." Boston

"One does not often find so admirable a piece of political biography as Mr. Bowers has given us in his life of Beveridge. The high quality of the work is the more notable because Mr. Bowers himself is far from sympathetic with some of the things for which Beveridge stood, but while he does not wholly conceal his own divergence, he holds a steady hand in controversial matters and refrains from pressing criticism where it would be essentially partisan." "An excellent biography on a hazardous subject, one that is surrounded by mysteries and enigmas. It is an account of the tragic life of a writer who is significant in that he helped American literature to come of age." Providence

"Mr. McWilliams, in a sound and scholarly book, sheds bright light on Bierce's eccentric personality and on his hectic literary career, tracing the record down to Bierce's still unexplained disappearance somewhere in war-torn Mexico. He shows sound critical judgment in depicting Bierce as primarily a super-journalist, not a literary creator in any sense." Current history

"Dr Ludwig's study of the Iron Chancellor is a full-length portrait of 'a victorious and errant warrior,' the history of a spirit which was a blend of pride, courage and hatred. The author's power of dramatic presentation is shown at its best and surest in this building up from infinite detail the character of a man whose inner development, according to his biographer, was finished when he had reached thirty. The fifty years that followed served only to deepen the lines already graved." Book rev. digest

"Bismarck's inner history is told with fascinating insight. The colouring is as brilliant and the mastery of dramatic presentation is as sure as formerly. Only it must be confessed, in one or two places, one is conscious of slight touches which to a critical historian seem perhaps questionable, if not certainly misleading. These occasions, however, are few. As a full-length portrait of Bismarck this book may certainly challenge comparison with any other." Saturday rev.

My diaries; being a personal narrative of events, 1888-1914. 2v 1921 Knopf $4; Secker 60s, 2v in 1 12s 6d 92

1 Gt. Brit.—Pol. & govt. 21-22305

"The author is an English traveler and poet, who for many years has championed the cause of small nations against European, and especially British, imperialism." Pittsburgh

"The extraordinary interest of these diaries lies in their twofold character. Not only do they tell the secret political history of our time, but they constitute a social document of the highest importance. Rarely has the world seen such a procession of poets, painters, playwrights and politicians as come and go in Blunt's pages." Cleveland

Vaucaire, Michel. Bolivar the Liberator; tr. from the French by Margaret Reed. (Riverside lib.) Houghton $1 92

A satisfactory cheap reprint of a book first published 1929 by Houghton

"A terse, dramatic account of the adventures and achievements of Simon Bolivar, the young Spanish noble who dedicated his life to freeing Colombia from Spanish rule. One of the greatest of South American heroes, his funeral expenses were paid with money borrowed from his neighbors, 'who gave it with very ill grace.'" Cleveland

"It must be admitted that the translator, Miss Margaret Baines Reed, has done her work very well indeed, and in her capable hands the graphic style of M. Vaucaire had lost none of its native vigour." Saturday rev.

"Dauntless liberator" by Phyllis Marschall and John Crane (1933 Appleton-Century $2.50; 12s 6d) is another interesting life of Bolívar, which will be enjoyed by adults as well as by the young people for whom it is written

Journal of Gamaliel Bradford, 1883-1932; ed by Van Wyck Brooks. 1933 Houghton $5 92

1 Authors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 33-27386

"A work of unusual interest. For some fifty years, from the age of 19 when ill health forced his withdrawal from Harvard, up to his death in 1932, Gamaliel Bradford kept a daily journal in which he recorded his reading, his thinking, his writing and mental development. Readers who knew him only in the later years of his life when success came to him, will find here a picture of his whole life as revealing as one of his own psychographs. 6-34030

"Dr Brandes . . . gives here a frank and intimate revelation of the unfolding of his intellectual life, to his thirtieth year and the shaping of his ideas about modern literature which he has enforced with so much impressiveness in his books. The vigor and vitality which characterize his treatment of other writers are equally characteristic of this account of his own career. His reminiscent pages throw interesting light on contemporary happenings in the sixties as well as on famous men, among them Ibsen, Björnson, Taine, Renan and Mill, with whose friendship the young critic was honored." Brontë, Charlotte

32-16754

"Benson's whole treatment of Branwell is not only the best but the only adequate one that we have had. And his efforts to fathom the secret of Emily are sound and valuable. Charlotte, because she revealed herself so completely, must always remain the central figure, and Benson has given her a splendid piece of interpretative biography. But he has left out something—the seasoning. We find here the slightly acrid and self-righteous Charlotte, the capable and executive Charlotte, the timid and self-conscious Charlotte, the pride, courage and sensitiveness of the woman; but we miss the brilliant girl who, in her own circle, could be so animated, satirical and witty." New republic

"Mr. Benson is out to steer a middle course between the faith of Mrs. Gaskell and the fanaticism of a host of other writers. His manner is cool and unemotional, and his matter convincing. Charlotte does not emerge too well from the ordeal, but we feel at last we know the facts about her." New statesman and Nation

* Dimnet, Ernest. Brontë sisters; tr. from the French by Louise Morgan Sill. 1928 Harcourt $2.50; Cape, J. 7s 6d 92

1 Brontë family 29-11398

The first English translation of a charming French work published in 1910 which some critics consider the best book on the Brontës. The appendix contains Charlotte Brontë's four letters to M. Héger which were discovered in 1913

Brontë, Charlotte—Continued

"He is sympathetic, at times enthusiastic, but he is detached, and in his dealings with the personalities of the sisters can be cool to the point of chilliness. After so much gush from other pens we are glad enough to find a writer on the Brontës who does not sob over every biographical page. M. Dimnet is of those who are happiest with Charlotte. He understood both her gifts and her limitations, her literary ambitions and her shrinking from the consequences of success in them, and his criticism of her several works and of her writings as a whole, offered with great simplicity, is fresh, sound and stimulating." First published 1857

Also available in the Haworth edition, with notes by C. K. Shorter, published by John Murray at 7s 6d. Best edition of the standard biography

"In the whole of English biographical literature there is no book that can compare in widespread interest with the 'Life of Charlotte Brontë' by Mrs Gaskell. . . . As far as mere readers are concerned, it may indeed claim its hundreds as against the tens of intrinsically more important rivals. Mrs Gaskell was herself a popular novelist, who commanded a very wide audience. She brought to bear upon the biography of Charlotte Brontë all those literary gifts which had made the charm of her seven volumes of romance. And these gifts were employed upon a romance of real life, not less fascinating than anything which imagination could have furnished. . . . It is quite certain that Charlotte Brontë would not stand on so splendid a pedestal today but for the single-minded devotion of her accomplished biographer." Clement K. Shorter

C. K. Shorter's "Charlotte Brontë and her sisters" (1905 Scribner o.p. 1933) supplements Mrs Gaskell's life by including later material. His larger work "The Brontës" (2v 1908 Scribner o.p. 1933) adds 700 letters to his earlier work thus making a very comprehensive biography

Satisfactory cheap reprint of a book first published 1932 by Vanguard press. The original edition is carried in England by S. Paul at 10s 6d

"Written by a man who was caught in the net of Georgia's penal system, worked in a chain gang for several months, escaped, lived an honorable, hardworking and successful life for seven years, was betrayed, but went back voluntarily under the official promise of a pardon in a very short time. The promise was not kept and after a year in the chain gang he escaped again, came North, obtained work, has written this book. . . It is a breath-taking and heart-wrenching book, but its real importance lies in its baring of Georgia's incredible penal system and of the many and devious ways by which it manages to defeat essential justice and outrage humanity." Burr, Aaron

25-21895

"The first really competent biography of one who was a great American, despite the dark cloud that hung over his declining years." Brooklyn

Burr, Aaron—Continued

"In these two finely illustrated, and at times very well-written, volumes, the authors have handled a vast deal of material, much of it new, with great intelligence. The authors have presented their well-documented biography with a spontaneity and freshness which is engaging. At times their book is finely written, at times it is almost too youthful for so spacious and dignified a setting." Independent

Burroughs, John

Heart of Burrough's journals; ed. by Clara Barrus. 1928 Houghton $3 92

28-23950

Selections from the journals and notebooks of Burroughs from 1854 to 1921

"Dr. Barrus worshiped the man whose biographer she became; but she has been honest in her selections from his journals; they reveal the man, as she puts it herself, 'warts and all.'" Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Life and letters of John Burroughs" (2v 1925 Houghton $12.50) also the work of his literary executor, Clara Barrus, is an exhaustive biography derived from his journals, letters and miscellaneous material

22-7305

"Contains two sketches, 'My boyhood,' written by John Burroughs in the last year of his life, and 'My father,' written by his son, Julian Burroughs. The first is simply written and is full of the mellow philosophy of the naturalist's later years. It appeared in 'Harper's magazine.' Many letters written to his son are quoted in the second sketch." Burton, Sir Richard Francis

Downey, F. D. Burton, Arabian nights adventurer. 1931 Scribner $3 92

31-11477

"A new biography of Sir Richard Burton, the translator of The Arabian Nights whose eventful and adventurous life came to a close in 1890. Burton was one of the first Christians to enter the holy city of Mecca; he explored Africa before Stanley did; he was acquainted with twenty-eight languages and dialects; was one of the leading literary figures of the Victorian era; and yet he remains much of a mystery to this day. This biography is based on former biographies; the only new facts being some details about Burton's journey to Salt Lake City." Book rev. digest

"The book is not merely an indispensable work of future reference for all students of Byron literature, but it provides the general reader with a detailed and reliable guide-book to the highways and byways of that vast and most delectable country." Nation and Athenaeum

Maurois, André. Byron; tr. from the French by Hamish Miles. 1930 Appleton-Century $5; Cape, J. 12s 6d 92

30-7022

"A well-rounded modern biography portraying Byron as a personality, against a carefully depicted social and geographical background." Chicago

"M. Maurois has worked out his technique to a new and right conclusion. The mass of material—the bewildering evidence and conflict of opinion and record—is shaped fact by fact, and cemented with concealed artifice, until at last emerges a coherent and beautifully proportioned portrait. But it is more than a portrait. It is an heroic painting filled with living figures set in a scene of so triumphant a romanticism that the book stands out as another sign of the revival of enthusiasm and belief." Spectator

John Drinkwater's "Pilgrim of eternity" (1923 Doran o.p. 1933) does not offer new source material but is a sympathetic analysis of Byron's personality

Laut, A. C. Cadillac. 1931 Bobbs $3.75 92

1 Detroit—Hist. 2 Canada—Hist.—To 1763 (New France) 3 Louisiana—Hist. 31-5316

"It is surprising to know that this is the first biography of Antoine de la Mothe Cadillac, who was second only to Frontenac in the French advance toward what is now our Northwestern territory, long commander at Mackinac, and founder of Detroit. There are reasons, however, for this lack of recognition: the French power in America dwindled; Cadillac's latter life was turgid and not fortunate; the records bearing on his adventures and services were so fragmentary that Parkman threw up his hands and gave up the task of disentangling. Fortunately in our day much new material has been found in Paris, Quebec, New Orleans, Moscow and elsewhere. Out of this Miss Laut, a practised writer and long a student of our midwestern and western history, has made a clear and picturesque account of Cadillac's fights with Indians and English, his brilliant explorations, his romantic adventures, and his misfortunes." "Mr. Buchan tells his famous story tersely and well. He makes no parade of high scholarship or pedantic erudition. 'It seemed to me better,' he says, 'to set down my own views without arguing about the evidence.' He was well inspired; he has given us, within a brief compass and in language which—if at times a trifle over-loaded with clichés—is always vigorous and effective, an admirable bird's-eye view of a truly amazing career." Jane Welsh Carlyle: letters to her family, 1839-1863; ed. by Leonard Huxley. 1924 Murray, J. 21s 92

24-13714

Formerly carried also by Doubleday, Page

A collection of 220 letters of Mrs Carlyle, most of them written to her cousins, Helen and Jeannie Welsh. Portraits and index

"When we come to consider the actual contents of this last contribution to Mrs Carlyle's correspondence, there is happily no need to say anything more than that they are as good, as witty, as wicked, as heart-rending as we well knew beforehand they were bound to be. Happily this volume ends before Mrs Carlyle's really 'dark days' began, when ill-health, sleeplessness and the morphia habit clouded her mind, and upset the balance of her piercing intelligence. The whole book swims in life." Augustine Birrell in New statesman

"Letters and memorials" of Mrs Carlyle was prepared for publication by her husband, and edited by J. A. Froude (2v 1883 Scribner o.p. 1933)

Drew, E. A. Jane Welsh and Jane Carlyle. 1928 Harcourt $2.50; Cape, J. 7s 6d 92

28-6005

"Mrs Drew's book is not a formal biography, but a character study; in effect, a brief for Jane, though not an indictment of Carlyle. It is a pretty irony that Scotch jurisprudence alone admits of a verdict which covers the Carlyle case: Not Proven." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"It is a human picture, vivid, colorful and immensely real. Perhaps it was because Jane Welsh Carlyle impressed her contemporaries as so very real that she is so today in biography; and perhaps it is Miss Drew's art. But again, whatever the cause, both the book and the reader profit." N.Y. Times

Burdett, Osbert. Two Carlyles. 1931 Houghton $4; Faber 15s 92

1 Carlyle, Mrs Jane Baillie (Welsh) 31-7365

"It is a close, a skilful, and sympathetic study of these two kindred yet combative souls that Mr. Burdett gives us. Above all, Mr. Burdett deserves praise for sustaining so objective, so sensible a view throughout, and for avoiding the temptation to take sides." Spectator

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"As fascinating as a novel is this story of a German princess who rose to the throne of Russia and by her own efforts became a power in world politics." Chicago

"One expects a new biography of a famous historical figure either to present fresh material, the result of research, or to revise conventional interpretations of character in the light of the more modern psychology. Miss Anthony's study amply justifies itself on both counts. Furthermore, Miss Anthony portrays the Empress with a keen eye for dramatic moments, with a convincing effect of continuity, and with a respect refreshingly tempered by humorous perception. The humor is casual and dry and effortless." Nation

Within its own limits, however, the book is a capable and sympathetic piece of work; and it is after all true, as Miss Goldsmith says, that Christina has puzzled historians principally 'because, despite her unusual talents, her inherited opportunity of becoming one of the great statesmen of her age, she accomplished nothing at all.'" "An extremely readable volume, based upon a remarkably complete and highly intelligent study of the evidence, and has presented the facts with a laudable impartiality, without in any way impairing the interest of the narrative . . . It is the special merit of Mrs. Mackenzie's book that it devotes so large a proportion of its space to the later phases of Christina's career, and the work gains much from being written by one whose sympathies and approach to the subject are Italian rather than Swedish." Vandercook, J. W. Black majesty, the life of Christophe, king of Haiti. 1928 Harper $2.50; 5s 92

1 Haiti—Hist. 28-7779

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. 75c)

"A highly romanticized life of Henry Christophe, the slave who became king of Haiti. The rise and fall of the negro empire, derived from the French revolution, guided by Toussaint L'Ouverture, and brought to a moment's dignity and grandeur by king Henry I, Black Majesty, is dramatically sketched." "Mark Twain's own idea of writing autobiography, 'start at no particular time of your life; wander at your free will all over your life, talk only about the things which interest you for the moment,' accounts for the haphazard, casual nature of these memories and opinions, some fine and of consequence, some trivial. "The letters have all the extravagant humor, energy and imagination of his books and are besides revelations of a generous personality —irreverent, yet given to hero worship, frank, ingenious, shrewd in his judgments of people except where his material interests were involved, irascible in small things and of heroic fortitude under tragic circumstances. Constitutes a revelation of many aspects of American civilization which Mark Twain so broadly and many-sidedly represented." Archibald Henderson in Bookman

In spite of the mass of data, drawn largely from newspapers and personal testimony, the book is never dull reading, partly because it gives many anecdotes. No psychological analysis is attempted but from the matter-of-fact account Cleveland appears as a blunt, uncompromising, and honest fighter in a period of widespread political corruption." Bkl.

"Talbot Clifton was an English big game hunter, explorer and tireless traveler. He was an unusual man who has been likened to the Elizabethan adventurers, and he had unusual and thrilling experiences. In this biography his widow, to whom he was a superman, describes them in a vivid, almost rhapsodical style which evokes conflicting opinions among critics." Cincinnati

"There are adventures enough, and excitements enough in this book, to stir even the most hardened reader. . . The personality of its hero, in spite of much hero-worship, emerges vividly from Mrs. Clifton's pages, for she was wholly in sympathy with him; and, as a corrective, there is among the notes, almost on the last page, an excellent summing-up by an acquaintance of Talbot Clifton's dynamic, larger-than-life-size character." Conrad, Joseph

Personal record. 1912 Doubleday, Doran $2; Dent 6s 6d 92

[12-2743]

Joseph Conrad's autobiography is quite unlike any other that was ever written. Its discursiveness and its chronological chaos are hardly to be described. It is not less full of charm than the rest of his beautiful, cleanly modeled prose; it is richer than some of his work in humor. Above all, it compels us to see and feel things as an intensely recipient and richly gifted spirit has seen them. Condensed from Outlook [London]

He was brought up in Mississippi; became university instructor, gave up teaching for farming, and finally lived among the shepherds in Greece." Boston

"The external details of Mr. Cook's life-story are commonplace enough, and we could not have endured their narrative in a book. All the drama, all the interest of the man was within himself. Obviously this makes his biographer's task immensely more difficult. She has to convince us that in spite of appearances her subject really was the remarkable man she claims him to have been. "Following closely the career of the greatest Spanish conquistador in his conquest of Mexico in the 16th century, this entertaining narrative makes excellent use of the letters of Cortes and the chronicles of his followers. Against the background so skilfully portrayed is etched the character of the man 'the gallant, reckless, deep-revolving, gentleman adventurer.' Maps and illustrations." N.Y. libraries

* Marriage to India. 1930 Vanguard press $3 92

1 India—Soc. life & cust. 30-29428

"A Swiss woman, educated in America and married to a Hindu, took up her life in India with high ideals of service and friendship, only to experience to the full the social ostracism that is the lot of a white woman married to a native. She was in close touch with members of all classes. . . . The book is an intensively earnest revelation of the personal difficulties involved in inter-social marriage, and of the hopeless position of Eurasians. Mrs. Das knew Tagore, Gandhi and other prominent Indian leaders who appear in her pages." Bkl.

"Her book is, as far as it goes, one of the most fair-minded and clear-sighted accounts and discussion of India to be found among all the many volumes that have been written about that unhappy country in recent years, as it is also one of the most vivid and interesting." N.Y. Times

Davies, William Henry

Autobiography of a super-tramp; with a preface by Bernard Shaw. 1917 Knopf $1; Cape, J. 4s 6d 92

17-13447

"It is, as Mr Shaw says, 'a placid narrative, unexciting in matter and unvarnished in manner, of the commonplaces of a tramp's life.' The author as a young man came to America from Bristol to make his fortune and, having quickly spent his small savings set out on a career of tramping and begging, varied by brief intervals of work, which only ended when he tired of it and settled down, on a legacy of eight shillings a week, to write and publish verse." Davis, Jefferson

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 29-20277

"Well written and sympathetic study of Jefferson Davis's public career. His early life . . . is not treated here. An acquisition to historical biography." Wis. bul.

"Mr. Allen Tate's portrait—it can scarcely be called a biography—is a strikingly thoughtful and artistic work. It is a study of Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, for with the earlier Davis Tate is not concerned. His study then becomes to a large extent a re-interpretation of the Civil War and the role Davis played in that tragedy. It is a study that must excite the admiration and the wonder of the more professional historian." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Tells, with colorful detail, of the author's girlhood as the child of Lord Yu Keng, a Manchu, who surprisingly believed in educating his daughters according to European ideas. Adoration of her father permeates the narrative from the first moment the little princess is seen, as a spoiled child upsetting her tutor's dignity without punishment on through the years the family spent in Japan and France where Yu Keng was ambassador, with a final glimpse of the author, as lady-in-waiting to the Empress. Illustrations in green and black by S. Pinkus have atmosphere and humor." N.Y. libraries

Dickinson, Emily

Life and letters of Emily Dickinson, by her niece M. D. Bianchi. 1924 Houghton $5 92

24-7241

"An admirable, but reticent record of the life of a New England poet, recluse and mystic, with an accompanying selection from her letters. Emily Dickinson's shy charm, the audacity of her wit and the sensitive acuteness of her feeling are revealed in these notes to her family and to such friends as Dr and Mrs J. G. Holland, and Thomas Wentworth Higginson." N.Y. state lib.

The correspondence contained in this book is partly reprinted from the early edition of the letters published by Mrs M. L. Todd in 1894 altho Mrs Bianchi has added other material. Mrs Todd's collection has now been revised (1931 Harper $4; 15s) to include many letters suppressed in her earlier edition

"These letters do not completely outline the great Russian novelist's life, but they mirror both his weakness and greatness, his physical frailty and the hardships which increased it; above all, they record the experiences of his Siberian exile which produced so profound a spiritual change in the man that the message of his works is 'as disturbing as that of any Hebrew prophet or Christian saint.' Several letters show his relation to Turgenieff, and one chapter gives the youthful impressions of Sophia Kovalevsky, the mathematician, of Dostoevskii, the man." Cleveland

"A dignified and restrained biography of a fine type of western peace officer. Wyatt Earp went west with his parents in 1864 when he was 16. He came of good family and was slated to study law, but the freedom of the west was too tempting to one of his age, and he ultimately became a law enforcement officer instead. Benson's literary activities are more than admirable, they are amazing, and his agile pen has perhaps never been more happily, or more usefully, employed than in drawing for us his 'speaking' likeness of the Monarch who, in nine short years, stamped himself indelibly on English, and European, history. Mr. Benson's admiration for Edward VII is born of intimate knowledge of that King's character and career; he gives many a subtle story, many an important sidelight, many a stinging detail not to be found in Mr. Sidney Lee's 1,600 closely written pages." "What Sir Sidney has given us will be read with great interest by all students of the period and much of it will be enjoyed by the general reader; but it is somewhat bare of flowers. His book should have gained in interest for most people if its breathless and unending procession of occurrences had been occasionally suspended in favour of a chapter or two giving the biographer's views of the possibilities which lie open to a prince of Wales, and a discussion of the opposed conceptions of those possibilities entertained by the Prince and his mother." Parkes, H. B. Jonathan Edwards, the fiery Puritan. 1930 Minton $3.50 92

"A biography done in the modern manner, dealing with Jonathan Edwards' life as student, parish minister, and 'exile.' As interesting for its picture of colonial New England as for its account of the great Puritan's beliefs and activities. Bibliography." Cleveland

"It does not go too intricately into the doctrinal points involved. It does as much as could well be done to bring the man out of his cloud of thought and to make him appear an actual person." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

A. V. G. Allen's "Jonathan Edwards" (1889 Houghton o.p. 1933) is another good study of the famous preacher

Egan, Maurice Franci

24-28257

"Recollections crowded with personalities encountered through a varied career which included experiences in Philadelphia in the fifties, Washington in the Civil war, New York in the eighties and Denmark where the author served as minister during three administrations." Pratt quarterly

"Few American autobiographers have the urbanity, breadth of viewpoint, nice sense of what gossip to tell and what to omit that one finds in Maurice Egan's. It is from first to last stimulating, graceful and genuinely amusing." Literary rev.

Einstein, Albert

Reiser, Anton. Albert Einstein; a biographical portrait. 1930 Boni $2.50; Butterworth, T. 8s 6d 92

30-30300

"A biographical portrait, and not a discussion of the scientist's theories. One gains an intimate picture of Einstein's childhood at Munich, of his early years at Milan and Bern, and of his rise to fame through the first formulation in 1905 of the special theory of relativity." Boston

Ekrem, Selma

* Unveiled; the autobiography of a Turkish girl. 1930 Washburn $3; Bles 5s 92

1 Turkey—Soc. life & cust. 31-26044

"The autobiography of a Turkish girl who grew up in old Stamboul, Jerusalem, and Rhodes. Her father, one-time palace secretary, was later Governor of Jerusalem and Governor-General of the Aegean Islands. A charming picture of Turkish family life before the War, together with an account of the author's determination not to wear the tcharshaf, or black veil, mark of women's subjection and seclusion, a rebellion which later brought her to America. Older girls will enjoy." Cleveland

Eliot, Charles William

James, Henry. Charles W. Eliot, president of Harvard university 1869-1909. 2v 1930 Houghton $10 92

1 Harvard university 30-29682

"The purpose of the author, he tells us, has been 'to delineate Eliot's character, not to hallow his memory or to chronicle all his achievements.' And in this he has succeeded well. The portrait which he has painted is life-like. It may not be a masterpiece, but it is certainly a work of solid craftsmanship." Boston

[27-10219]

"The purpose . . . has not been so much to concentrate attention upon the actual events of George Eliot's life, as to consider how the relations of her work to the general aim and effort of her epoch appear after the lapse of nearly half a century." Prefatory note

"Miss Haldane comes to her task of love and justice with a large understanding that has been disciplined by her profound studies in Hegel and Descartes, and humanized by like studies in English literature. She knows thoroughly the Victorian period, and she sees clearly what were the adventitious elements in George Eliot's fame . . . Miss Haldane draws George Eliot out of the artificial atmosphere that her adorers created, and a very real person emerges; we see her in relation to our time, and are left assured of her immortality." Stephen, Sir Leslie. George Eliot. (English men of letters) 1902 Macmillan $1.50; 3s 6d 92

2-21912

"In his account of George Eliot Sir Leslie Stephen supplies an interesting specimen of that art of biographical criticism of which he must always remain an acknowledged master. . . . He writes of George Eliot in no spirit of adulation. He is keenly alive to her defects. . . . But his tribute to her intellectual power of observation and to the richness of her emotional nature is ample enough to satisfy all reasonable admirers of her achievements." Athenaeum

Elizabeth, queen of England

* Anthony, K. S. Queen Elizabeth. 1929 Knopf $4; Allen, G. 12s 6d 92

29-21116

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"A character study of Queen Elizabeth dealing only with the episodes in her life that reveal the woman she was. As a portrait the book is outstanding. Well illustrated." Ontario library review

"Miss Anthony's work stands firmly on accepted fact, dismisses rumor, and leaves the great and enigmatic personality as great, and in some necessary ways, as enigmatic as before. Her book is delightful reading. Miss Anthony's style is brilliant, forceful and pure, a suitable vehicle for the expression of her clear and concise thought." Outlook

Neale, J. E. Queen Elizabeth. 1934 Harcourt $3.75; Cape, J. 9s 6d 92

"This book is more than honest history, it is an interesting narrative well told, and hard to turn away from. It moves along. The reader is likely to forget the delightful style in following the story. It is a style not only delightful but with distinction and restraint. Behind those careful, terse, and sometimes amusing phrases is more than the author has time to stop and tell us, and we are not displeased at that." Sat. rev. of lit.

Milton Waldman's "England's Elizabeth" (1933 Houghton $3.50; Longmans 12s 6d) is another fine study of Elizabeth the queen which emphasizes her qualities of statesmanship. The title of the book was chosen to prove that England was the overpowering love of Elizabeth's life. Published in England under title: Elizabeth, queen of England

‡ Strachey, G. L. Elizabeth and Essex; a tragic history. 1928 Harcourt $3.75, text ed $2; Chatto 15s 92

1 Essex, Robert Devereux, earl of 28-26937

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"If here and there he chips away a fragment to shape his story, he achieves his purpose completely. He infects the reader with his own sympathy for the passions he describes. We execrate the treacherous Bacon, we burn with Essex to commit resounding follies, and with Elizabeth we answer actively to his exciting presence. History has fallen into the hands of dull scientists and epigrammatic charlatans. But if Mr. Strachey ever omits the facts, he always knows them. To our continual solace and delight, he keeps history an art." Nation and Athenaeum

"Easier to read than any of the 'easy' books turned out by lazy authors for a lazy public, it achieves that ease not by vulgarity, but by means of a concision and perspicacity entirely classical in their simplicity and it discards because it does not need every cheap device by which popularity is bid for." Thane, Elswyth. Tudor wench. 1932 Harcourt $3.50 92

"A romanticized biography of Queen Elizabeth covering the first twenty-five years of her life, tracing the difficulties which she met and conquered while she was a girl, and ending with her coronation." Book rev. digest

"As a whole, the volume is well documented. For five years the author has spent her summers in England, working at the British museum and visiting the actual scenes of the many events she describes. The narrative, if somewhat romanticized, is a vital and essentially authentic portrait of the girl who was to be England's most celebrated queen." Springfield Republican

Wilson, Mona. Queen Elizabeth. (Appleton biographies) 1933 Appleton-Century $1.50; Davies 5s 92

33-1867

"The great Queen is an excellent subject for a popular biography that makes no pretence of being more, and Miss Wilson has written a bright and well-planned narrative. . . Miss Wilson's purpose was not to rewrite the history of the reign, but to recall the high purpose and vivid personality of the great Queen; that she has done admirably." Times (London) lit.

Two additional books which portray the character of Elizabeth are Mandell Creighton's impartial and painstaking "Queen Elizabeth" (new ed 1899 Longmans $2; 6s 6d) and F. C. Chamberlin's "Private character of Queen Elizabeth" (1921 Dodd $5; Lane 18s) A defense of the morality of Elizabeth based on contemporary evidence

Elliott, Mrs Maud (Howe)

Three generations. 1923 Little $4 92

23-15949

"In a vivacious manner, and with a kaleidoscopic shifting of scene, Mrs Eliott recounts her experiences from the Civil war to the World war. Reminiscences of travel abroad, politics at home and artist life in Rome are interspersed with anecdotes of famous people. Of special interest is all that pertains to her mother, Julia Ward Howe. Portraits." N.Y. state lib.

Ellis, Mrs Anne

* Life of an ordinary woman. 1929 Houghton $3.50 92

29-18110

"The story of a life spent in and around western mining camps. A story of poverty and hardship and courage and an uncomplaining picture of life as it is lived. Good for any library." Wis. bul.

"Mrs. Ellis's story of her girlhood and young womanhood in the mining camps of Colorado is interesting from the first word to the last. It throws a vivid light on the boom towns of the West of thirty, forty and fifty years ago. This is no labored narrative, but a succession of lively anecdotes about vividly realized people." "Mr Bliss Perry has performed his editorial task with great skill and discrimination, and it is now possible to read in a convenient form the intellectual log book of the Concord philosopher." Independent

* Brooks, Van Wyck. Life of Emerson. 1932 Dutton $3 92

32-26336

"Mr. Brooks's volume has the virtues of the 'new' biography and escapes its leading vices. There is no apparatus of scholarship—no footnotes, citation of authorities, hints of the biographer's own difficulties or research . . . Mr. Brooks has produced one of the notable biographies of the last few years. No one can question the success with which he has conveyed the nobility and serenity of the man himself, and the essence of all that was most inspiriting in his thought." Nation

If one could do so before, one cannot after reading Mr. Russell's biography imagine Emerson without Concord, or Concord without Emerson." Bookman

Eugénie, empress consort of Napoleon III

* George, R. E. G. Life of the Empress Eugénie; by Robert Sencourt [pseud.] 1931 Scribner $5; Benn 21s 92

1 France—Court and courtiers 31-27006

"An authoritative biography of the woman whose youth and beauty added lustre to the court of Napoleon III, who outlived her throne, her husband and son, and who died at ninety-three, the most romantic figure in Europe. The author has had access to many letters, the papers of the Duke of Alba and the Viennese archives, and with these in addition to ordinary sources he has succeeded in writing a biography of exceptional interest." Ontario library review

"Mr. Sencourt does not help the historical student by his very loose system of reference . . . It would be easy to remedy such small defects in a work that contains many brilliant passages of narrative and analysis, and which excels especially in its minor portraits, as those of Napoleon III., of the Princess Mathilde and the egregious General Trochu." 28-28378

Formerly carried also by Harper

"In 1901 M. Paléologue first met the Empress Eugénie. Tho she was then seventy-five years old, her faculties were unimpaired, and in interviews recorded by M. Paléologue which continued at intervals up to her death in 1920, the Empress confided freely to him her story of the issues of the Second Empire. The illustrations are from portraits." Book rev. digest

"The sentimental title does injustice to M. Maurice Paléologue's conversations with the Empress Eugénie, which make a document of keen interest to all students of the Second Empire and of general European politics between the year of the 'coup d'Etat' and the Great War. He knew the right questions to put to the Empress, and he knew how to record the ensuing discussions without confusion or redundancy." Times (London) lit. sup.

Finger, Charles Joseph

Seven horizons. 1930 Doubleday, Doran $5 92

30-11604

"A romantic autobiography in which the author describes his adventures, actual and spiritual, in the seven most important phases of his amazing life and career. These seven horizons are as follows: his boyhood in Victorian Mayfair, in which he tells of his early school days and the development of his love for reading; his odd jobs earning a living in London as a young man and his friends there; his contact with some of the leading socialists and radicals of the time, such as William Morris and Bernard Shaw; a thirst for adventure that leads him to ship aboard a sailing vessel in search of self-reliance; the fifth horizon, which finds him in Patagonia, where he sees life in its most uncivilized aspects; his coming to America, where he eventually gets control of a southwestern railroad, but the unethical behavior of men in business makes him turn from this type of civilized livelihood; so the final horizon emerges when he buys a ranch in the Ozarks, settles down to live leisurely, and to write from his past experiences." Foch, Ferdinand

Liddell Hart, B. H. Foch, the man of Orléans. 1931 Little $4; Eyre 21s 92

[31-33767]

"It is the first serious attempt made in English (and perhaps the most penetrating in any language) to get at the facts of Foch's career from first to last and to estimate them critically . . . Everywhere one finds evidence of long, deep persistent thought, testing and revaluing the old generalisations, and never balking the facts where they point to new ones. Conceived and executed on a large scale, the study seems singularly mature throughout. Nor does it lack vivid and intimate personal touches." New statesman and Nation

"This literary gem relates the life of Francis, his companions and disciples, as it appeared to the popular imagination at the beginning of the fourteenth century. . . . That which gives these stories an inestimable worth is what for want of a better term we might call their atmosphere. They are legendary, worked over, exaggerated, false even, if you please, but they give us with a vivacity and intensity of coloring something that we shall search for in vain elsewhere—the surroundings in which St Francis lived. More than any other biography the Fioretti transport us to Umbria, to the mountains of the March of Ancona; they make us visit the hermitages, and mingle with the life, half childlike, half angelic, which was that of their inhabitants. . . . In default of accuracy of detail, the incidents which are related here contain a higher truth—their tone is true. Here are words that were never uttered, acts that never took place, but the soul and the heart of the early Franciscans were surely what they are depicted here." Paul Sabatier

"Conscientious study of sources and sympathetic narration, giving an impression of the real man, consistent with himself and his surroundings." N.Y. state lib.

"The popular imagination of Italy retains his image, while grave historians, unfamiliar with childlike genius touched with heavenly radiance, have fumbled over their records and missed the meaning of such gracious, guileless sainthood. "This life story of St Francis of Assisi is related with fidelity and reverent sympathy by a fellow country-man whose mother was a native of Assisi. The historical background of St Francis's life is fully drawn." Book rev. digest

"A history of St. Francis and the Franciscan Order which, though scholarly, is never dull; and, though it takes a completely non-Catholic view of both the Saint and his miracles, is itself a little miracle of non-partisanship." Bookman

"A sympathetic and revealing study of the 'last monarch of the "Old School" of European sovereigns,' who himself said of the repeated tragedies of his life, 'nothing in this world has been spared me.'" Book rev. digest

"A great theme and a competent writer. The personal parts suffer a trifle from scholarly restraint; the chapters on general history are good; those on constitutional history excellent. There the author is in his element, and he lets himself go with delightful gusto. The book, which is not advertised as a translation, is written in solid, serviceable Austrian English; unidiomatic, but neither incorrect nor dull; ponderous, but not crushingly so." Books (N.Y. Francis, Xavier, Saint

Yeo, Mrs Margaret. St Francis Xavier, apostle of the East. 1932 Macmillan $2.25; Sheed 7s 6d, cheaper ed 3s 6d 92

32-6884

"An appreciative, sober biography of this Basque nobleman who became one of the early followers of St Ignatius Loyola and a great missionary priest in the Far East. [Bibliography]." Book rev. digest

"Mrs. Yeo's work is not a scholarly dissection of legends about the saint, nor is it a piece of pietistic romancing. Steering an even course between the critical and the hagiographical, she has produced a study of Francis that the reader must find in nearly all its details 'just right.'" Times (London) lit. sup.

Franklin, Benjamin

* Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin; the unmutilated and correct version, comp. and ed. with notes by John Bigelow. 1912 Putnam $2.50 92

27-27800

This Autobiography is available in many editions. The following editions are recommended: Star series, edited by F. W. Pine (Garden City pub. co. $1); Riverside bookshelf (Houghton $2); and World's classics (Oxford 80c; 2s)

"'The style of this work is inimitable; it is as simple, direct, idiomatic as Bunyan's.' It is the straightforward life-story of a typically American character endowed with the great powers developed by self-education, who exerted vast influence as a citizen and statesman for his own day and for the future of his country." Pratt alcove

"Franklin's 'Autobiography' ends at the beginning of his career as a diplomatist. In the 'Life of Benjamin Franklin' edited by John Bigelow (3v 1905 Lippincott o.p. 1933) the 'Autobiography' is continued, from Franklin's correspondence and other writings, to the time of his death." Pittsburgh

Bruce, W. C. Benjamin Franklin self-revealed. 2v 1917 Putnam $10 92

17-29818

"A biography which characterizes Franklin, his moral standing, as philanthropist, his family relations, his European friends, as a man of business, a man of science, statesman and writer. It is critical and accurate, citing much from Franklin's own writings. It received the thousand dollar Pulitzer prize offered by Columbia university for the best biography of the year [1917] teaching patriotic and unselfish service to the people." A. L. A. bkl.

‡ Faÿ, Bernard. Franklin, the apostle of modern times. 1929 Little $4 92

"A fresh study of Franklin's interests and activities written by a French scholar and based upon the discovery of a great number of previously unknown letters." Pratt quarterly

"It is safe to say that no biographer of Franklin has approached his task with a wider or profounder scholarship. The result is a biography that is well proportioned and balanced, that interprets Franklin from the background of Colonial factional politics as well as from the perspective of international diplomacy, and appreciates at once the magnificent contributions and the grave inadequacies of Poor Richard." 1 Bache, Benjamin Franklin 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 3 Federal party 4 Democratic party

33-29190

"The hero of this biography is Benjamin Franklin Bache, son of Benjamin Franklin's only daughter, who as a boy accompanied his grandfather to Paris, grew up under his tutelage and imbibed his political philosophy. Bache became a journalist and in his polemical writings bitterly attacked George Washington. Mr Faÿ's book is not only a biography of Bache and of Benjamin Franklin as his life was connected with that of his grandson, but a picture, as well, of the political party fights in the United States from 1785 to 1798." Book rev. digest

Franklin, Benjamin—Continued

"It is splendidly written, authentic and reliable. The pictures of life in Philadelphia when it was the seething capital of the young country, of the Paris and Geneva when young Bache was at school, are excellent. There is a reality, a sense of life about all the characters great and small that makes the book read like a romance." Boston Transcript

Ford, P. L. Many-sided Franklin. 1899 Appleton-Century $4 92

"Emphasizes the many-sidedness of Franklin's genius by treating in each chapter a separate phase of his varied activity. The printer, the journalist, the scientist, the diplomat, the administrator, the family man, the lover, and the friend are in turn set before the reader, and the effect produced is more lifelike than that of the usual chronological narrative." "Delightful, chatty reminiscences of a childhood in Washington in the days just after the Civil War. Later girlhood visits to cousins in Concord afford us glimpses of the interesting circle of which the Emersons, Alcotts, and Henry D. Thoreau were so large a part. After her marriage to her cousin, Daniel Chester French, the circle of friends includes artists, authors and other people of note." Wis. bul.

Frobisher, Sir Martin

McFee, William. Life of Sir Martin Frobisher. (Golden hind ser.) 1928 Harper $4; Lane 12s 6d 92

28-21410

"The life of one of the most eminent of the Elizabethan sea-dogs, who led three expeditioins to Greenland in his search for gold, fought in the battle with the Spanish Armada, and died as the result of a wound received in another sea battle." Book rev. digest

"Not intended as a contribution to history, but as a popularization. As such, it has the double interest of an adventurous tale and a seaman's interpretation of a great sea-going period. Except for a somewhat tiresome resentment against the arrogance of Spain—which seems to have been natural enough in the first half of the sixteenth century—Mr. McFee writes with an open mind and a plain, vigorous style. His language never rises to the vividness of great prose that the deeds he chronicles invite; but his book is soundly and interestingly written." New republic

It is written for young people but will give most adults a fund of information about the great inventor and engineer which they could hardly find elsewhere in the same compass. Galton, Sir Francis
Memories of my life. 1908 Methuen o. p. 1933 92
9-35586

"Francis Galton is what may be called a good 'all-around' man of science. He has been an able statistician, a meteorologist, a 'finger-print' classifier, a founder of anthropometrical and psychological laboratories, an explorer, a pedagogue, an authority on heredity, and the founder of 'eugenics.' These pleasantly written memoirs tell the story of his manifold activities in a simple, unaffected way, and give one many a rare glimpse of the great scientists who made the closing half of the nineteenth century one of the most remarkable periods in the history of the world." ‡ Mahatma Gandhi; his own story; ed. by C. F. Andrews. 1930 Macmillan $2.50; Allen, G. 12s 6d 92
30-25632

"Mainly an abridgement of Gandhi's autobiography, 'The story of my experiments with Truth,' the book is more the history of the development of the convictions of the saint and reformer than of the economic and political actions to which they led. This book and 'Mahatma Gandhi's ideas,' also edited by C. F. Andrews, a devoted English friend of the Mahatma, together give a complete picture of Gandhi, the mystic." Cleveland

"C. F. Andrews has done the work of abridgment and editing admirably; perhaps no one else could have done it so well; and the book should have a very eager reception. It contains just what the West needs to understand this grand figure." Sat. rev. of lit.

* Mahatma Gandhi at work; his own story continued; ed. by C. F. Andrews. 1931 Macmillan $2.50; Allen, G. 12s 6d 92
[31-29655]

"The third volume of Gandhi's story, telling in his own words of his work in the Transvaal for the Indian community, where he put into operation for the first time his method of non-resistance." Pittsburgh

"When reading this book one has a vivid sense of the imperishable reality of ideals and principles, and the conviction that the actions of people are only symbols of the strength or weakness of their understanding of those ideals . . . The story reveals the unique combination of qualities in Gandhi's character." World tomorrow

Garibaldi, Giuseppe
Memoirs; ed. by Alexandre Dumas; tr. and with an introd. by R. S. Garnett. 1931 Appleton-Century $5; Benn 21s 92
1 Italy—Hist.—1815- 31-15606

Contains Garibaldi's memoirs to the end of the Defence of Rome in 1849, as they were first published with notes by Dumas; Dumas's account of Garibaldi's Sicilian expedition and the conquest of Naples; essays by Dumas, and George Sand, and a speech by Victor Hugo, all relating to Garibaldi; and three letters from Dumas to Garibaldi

"The most valuable part of this book is certainly that which comes from Garibaldi's own pen, and which brings before our eyes the wild adventures of his youth in South America, his glorious love-story, and the great Defence of Rome. Garibaldi as an author is self-revealing, and that self is without spot, entirely noble." Spectator

Garland, Hamlin
Back-trailers from the middle border. 1928 Macmillan $2.50 92
28-25969

"Hamlin Garland completes with this book the chronicle of his pioneer ancestors and his own life to date. The other volumes, 'A son of the middle border,' 'A daughter of the middle border,' and 'Trail makers of the middle border,' followed the saga of Garlands and McClintocks from the East to the Middle West. 'Back-trailers' brings their descendant once more to the East." Book rev. digest

"The quartet (his four books on the Middle Border) constitute a singular and quite original record of the development of the northwest as bound up with the members of a single representative family. It is all a work of decided merit and significance. It is history in blood and life." Boston Transcript

Also issued in the Modern readers' series (Macmillan 80c) and by Grosset at $1

"A narrative of a youth spent in toil among the hard, homely pioneer conditions in Wisconsin and Iowa after the Civil war and of later struggles in Boston to become a professional man of letters. Mr Garland is unusually successful in his portraits of his father and mother. . . . A notable memorial of a bygone phase of American life." Cleveland

"In all the region of autobiography, so far as I know it, I do not know quite the like of Mr Garland's story of his life, and I should rank it with the very greatest of that kind in literature. . . . As you read it you realize it the memorial of a generation, of a whole order of American experience; as you review it you perceive it an epic of such mood and make as has not been imagined before." "This latest of the many studies of Mary Wollstonecraft's character and career, while it pays attention to her intellectual achievements, is especially concerned with her personality. Its distinctive value is due to the author's attempt to make Mary Wollstonecraft a real person to the present generation, to re-create from her own writings and from the things written about her by those who knew her some vision of the woman she was, to realize the quality of her nature and the power of the charm she undoubtedly possessed in high degree." "Has become the standard work on the subject. . . . Lewes's general prepossession against German style and dislike of the mystic and allegorical may disqualify him for adequate appreciation of some aspects of Goethe's genius. The book, however, has merits which have seldom been equalled in similar work, and it retains its position in our literature." Dictionary of national biography

Contents: Goethe and Beethoven; Goethe's silence; Goethe the musician; Bettina

"It is not the new and more sympathetic view of Bettina, nor the keener appreciation of Beethoven's force of mind and character that makes this book so interesting. It is the fresh realization of the complexity of Goethe and the new light into which M. Rolland leads him, rather than merely casts upon him. . . To revivify one's image of Goethe is no ordinary achievement. That, on a small scale, and for one small part of that great life, is what M. Rolland has done." Bookman

1 Anarchism and anarchists 31-28325

Reprint of a book published 1931 in two volumes

"An intense, crowded autobiography of a woman who has been for many years a leader of the anarchists in America and Europe. Volume one and the first part of volume two cover her thirty years of struggle against capitalism in the United States ending in her deportation in 1919; the last half of volume two tells of her visit to Soviet Russia and her disappointment in what she found there, and of the years of lecturing and writing since." Book rev. digest

"For an understanding of thirty critical years in the United States, Emma Goldman contributes a document which could be written by no other man or woman . . . But far more gripping than this revelation of American life or of her later search for freedom in Russia are her revelations of the inner workings of the most challenging rebel spirit of our times in these United States, and of her philosophy of life." Gompers, Samuel

Seventy years of life and labor; an autobiography. 2v 1925 Dutton $10 92

"A history of the labor movement in the United States as well as an autobiography, since Mr Gompers was one of the founders of the American federation of labor and its president from 1882 to his death." Pittsburgh

"All who wish to understand the working forces in American political and social life during the last half-century cannot afford to neglect this book. It is a moving chronicle of great events told by a forceful personality who helped to shape them." Amer. pol. sci. rev.

Wortham, H. E. Chinese Gordon. 1933 Little $3.50; Harrap 12s 6d 92

Published in England under title: Gordon; an intimate portrait

"Relates in detail and with admirable judgment the whole story of Gordon's life—the Crimea, China, Gravesend, Central Africa, the Soudan, Mauritius and the Cape. The author is fortunate in that he has been able to make use of new material in Gordon's letters to his sister Augusta. It is of quite exceptional interest and throws fresh light on his character. It will satisfy also the modern demand for brevity combined with accuracy and a readable style." Ontario library review

Gorgas, William Crawford

* Gorgas, Mrs M. C. D., and Hendrick, B. J. William Crawford Gorgas; his life and work. 1924 Doubleday, Doran $5 92

24-32079

"The story of the conquest of yellow fever is inextricably interwoven with the career of General Gorgas. Not only does this record of his life trace with simple dignity all the phases of his elimination of this scourge, but it gives an admirable picture of the man, his resolute determination in face of all obstacles, his tireless devotion and his fine achievement in Havana, in the Canal zone and as surgeon-general in the World war." N.Y. state lib.

Gorky, Maxim, pseud.

My childhood. 1915 Appleton-Century $3 92

15-26651

"An unsparing record of the Russian writer's home life from earliest childhood until his grandfather turned him out to shift for himself at eight. A picture of Russian peasant life at once charming and revolting and full of remarkable character sketches, notably the wonderful old grandmother, a snuff-taking, vodka-drinking saint, of whom he says, 'her influence connected all my impressions by a single thread and wove them into a pattern of many colors, and her love enriched me and built up the strength needful for a hard life.'" Cleveland

Appeared in the English review

The autobiography begun in "My childhood" is continued by "In the world" (1917 Appleton-Century $3) covering Gorky's adventurous youth thru the next few years and by "My university days" (1923 Boni pa 50c)

Kaun, A. S. Maxim Gorky and his Russia. 1931 Ballou, R. O. $3.50; Cape, J. 15s 92

"A biography of the great Russian writer, told against the background of life in Russia, with its change from czarism to Soviet Russia. . . In his account of Gorky's childhood and youth, which occupy nearly half of the volume, the biographer follows rather closely Gorky's own reminiscences. Among the later chapters the story of Gorky's relationship with Lenin and the record of his unwearying efforts to save cultural values in Soviet Russia are the most interesting. . . But there is little in the book about the works of the great Russian writer." Boston

"On the whole, Professor Kaun has written a creditable work. His book is informative, warm, and scholarly." Nation

Gosse, Sir Edmund William

‡ Father and son; biographical recollections. 1907 Scribner $2.50; Heinemann 3s 6d 92

7-36407

"Record of the author's childhood and youth in a home where the most austere Puritanism prevailed; of his father, a scientist of distinction, devoted first of all to the religious bringing up of his son. Tells of the development of the boy's individuality, and the final break between father and son, between the rigid religion of the past and the liberality of the present, which sacrificed neither the love of the father nor the respect of the son. Written with great charm, with delicacy of feeling, poetic insight, and not a little humor." A. L. A. bkl.

"Life and letters of Sir Edmund Gosse" by E. E. Charteris (1931 Heinemann 25s) consists largely of letters from the great critic to his wide circle of friends among whom were Stevenson, Hardy, Moore, James, Swinburne and Rossetti

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war—Campaigns and battles 2 U.S.—Hist.—War with Mexico, 1845-1848 4-17020

"Covers the course of the author's life down to the close of the Civil war. When one considers that the writer was a man of action, altogether without experience in literary work, one is surprised at the remarkable skill with which the narrative is written. The sentences often have the same pithy directness and brevity that marked his despatches from the field of battle. As a general he mastered details but was not overwhelmed by them: so here, he sees the whole field and leads the reader easily along from one principal event to another. The native simplicity and lack of affectation so characteristic of the author are noticeable features of the work." Larned's Literature of American history

"Grant's grandly simple record of his own life is a true classic." Theodore Roosevelt

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war—Campaigns and battles A23-1157

A reprint of the volume first published 1917 in the American statesmen series

"The biography, while it embodies in quotation or paraphrase all that is most significant in Grant's narrative, has abundant freshness and vitality of its own: it is written with more than a touch of eloquence. Not merely because of its fullness and accuracy, but also through its literary qualities—its virility and incisiveness—it is not unworthy to stand beside the 'Memoirs' as a companion piece." Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"This is a history of the Civil War almost more than a biography. But thru it there moves the figure of Grant, strange, shy, sensitive, with an abhorrence of war and of all killing, but steady, tenacious and in the end indomitable. His administration as president is also treated, but the Civil War looms largest in the book." Wis. bul.

"The historian will accept this volume as it deserves to be accepted; as one more popular biography. Mr. Woodward's story of the man Grant is as well done as it can be without looking into other than secondary accounts." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Robert Graves calls his book an autobiography, and sets his war experiences in between descriptions of his school-days (just before the war) and of his subsequent adventures since 1918 in the literary world." New statesman

"It is an extraordinarily honest book; and if his attempted detachment is not carried far enough to make it a work of art, it has produced a book devoid of hate. It is the sort of book that is needed, for though it makes strongly for peace, it does not lose sight of the dangerous possibility of war, apart from political folly." Nation and Athenaeum

"Of his purpose he says: 'I have written it primarily that I might realize how every item of my psychology and philosophy grew out of my life and my basal and innate traits.' On account of this detailed self-analysis, the book is not a well rounded biography. It is valuable as a psychological document rather than a piece of literature, but for the general reader, skilled in sifting, there is much material of interest." Cleveland

"Mark Hanna, who lives in the memory of the American people as a fat, pudgy man who wore an oversize suit covered with dollar signs, stands forth as a human being in . . . 'Hanna.' Here he stands squarely upon his feet with his heavy figure, his loose fitting clothes, his quiet, appraising look. He stands against a background of tobacco smoke from countless political meetings, against the flare of light from countless torchlight processions and the whirling arms of orators on unnumbered flag draped platforms. [This is] a portrait—neither eulogy nor condemnation, neither whitewashing nor indictment." N.Y. World

"A study of the Phoenician military leader and organizer, a Napoleonic genius—his relation to the world in which he lived and his significance for history. Mr. Baker writes of Hannibal not only as a warrior but as the representative of a Semitic power in the Mediterranean, trying to break through the economic barrier interposed by Rome and to enlarge the trading area of Carthage. The book is an excellent example of historical biography which, although based on scant data, is vivified by sound knowledge and a delightful style." Cleveland

"John Hay, the subject of this full-length biography, first entered public life as Lincoln's secretary; forty years later he again became a political figure of importance as Secretary of State in the McKinley and Roosevelt cabinets. In the years between he followed a career of poet, novelist, and observer of Washington life and politics, and, with his friend Nicolay, wrote a life of Abraham Lincoln. This biography, by the professor of international relations at Princeton, is based on family papers and other documents. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"More interesting, perhaps, than the achievements which Professor Dennett records with learning and richness is the character which he analyzes with sympathy and understanding. In no way a representative figure, Hay was, nevertheless, a symbolic one in the years that stretched from Lincoln to Roosevelt. . . Professor Dennett's volume is a triumph of condensation, balance, scholarly accuracy, discriminating criticism, philosophical interpretation, and pleasing presentation, one of the most satisfactory contributions to the American Political Leaders Series." Browne, Lewis, and Weihl, Elsa. That man Heine; a biography. 1927 Macmillan $3 92

"What Mr. Browne has accomplished is a clean-cut, semi-analytical retelling of Heine's rather woeful career, sympathetic in its tendencies and yet free from any sentimental glossing over of that febrile delight in living that brought the poet to his death." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Mr. Browne's picture of Heine is by no means complete. We get, so to speak, only one side of his face. Still, Mr. Browne's book is important for Heine lovers. That anyone should go so deeply into Heine lore is something to be grateful for." Nation

"Heinrich Heine; a critical examination of the poet and his works" by Hermann Walter (1930 Bloch $4.25; Dent 12s 6d) is another well recommended work of a scholarly character which devotes about equal space to biography and to criticism

"Years of work there must be in this book, but happily work that did not destroy an extraordinary quality of imagination but rather fostered it. The author has more skill in seeing a particular past time than many professional historians; he has a feeling of the climates and geography of opinion; he has an uncanny understanding of the English squirearchy—he is Irish born—and of its implications. Nor is that skill only exercised about classes; he sees individuals so vividly in his own mind's eye that we cannot forget his pictures, even if sometimes the colors seem too bright." "This careful historical study depicts the German leader, in war and peace 'not as an ideal figure and superman, but as a far-seeing, hard-working statesman animated solely by a sense of duty.' The first two chapters build up the background of family and tradition which determined Hindenburg's character, an account of his military career follows, and the last half of the book is devoted to his peace-time services of the Republic." Book rev. digest

"Herr Schultze-Pfaelzer in his pleasantly biased and panoramic portrait (but with only one photograph) exposes for good the figurehead fallacy, and incidentally provides an easy guide to the post-war decade of German politics, which must shortly come to be studied for the origins of the new German nation." "Here is a unique book, full of astounding revelations. It reads like a romance written by an historical society. It is well-nigh incredible, yet it seems to be composed of the truth and nothing but the truth. More than any memoir that I have read since 1914 it perturbs my conceptions of history. "Dr. Howard spent fifty-three years in the entomological government service, most of them as chief of the Bureau of Entomology. He retired in 1931. Evidently he has thoroughly enjoyed the writing of this story of his life, since it has made him live over again its happy years. Many other things come into it that have slight connection with his central theme, his work as an entomologist. There is, for instance, a delightful chapter about the Cosmos Club of Washington and of his own enjoyment of its privileges, the people he has met there and its importance as an institution." N.Y. Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"In the world of literature where nothing may be as it seems it is like a breath of fresh air to read Ed Howe's autobiography. "A thrilling narration of Hudson's voyages on and exploration of the Hudson river and Hudson's Bay. The author describes how Hudson's last voyage ended tragically in mutiny and publishes for the first time a document, that he discovered, giving a report of the verdict at the trial of the mutineers." St Louis

"Mr. Powys is a little prone to underline the picturesque, and to pad his narrative with moralizing; but he has passages of admirable description, and is at his best, as he should be, in telling of the final tragedy of mutiny and desertion in Hudson's Bay. He has achieved a distinct 'scoop' in unearthing the verdict on the mutineers, part of which is reproduced. A word of thanks must be added for the clear sketch maps and the full bibliography." Autobiography of Leigh Hunt, with an introduction by Edmund Blunden. (World's classics) Oxford 80c; 2s 92

"It is the book of an old man, ripe, tender, sensitive, human,—an old man striving, with an honesty sometimes pathetic, always convincing and engaging, to tell the truth, to correct his first impressions, to pay a tribute of love and admiration to his friends, to do justice to those who called themselves his enemies. . . . The story of his connection with Shelley and Keats . . . is a story which can never fail of its appeal. . . . The book is a human book; it neither dogmatizes over life nor plays with it." Academy

"I have just finished your 'Autobiography' which has been most pleasantly occupying my leisure these three days. . . . Thru the pages move also Hunt's acquaintances and famous friends—Lamb and Shelley, Byron, Keats and Hazlitt." Book. rev. digest

"Mr. Blunden has spared no pains in research, and his new data, if not of capital importance, at least shows how thoroughly he has explored the ground. "Starting avowedly with the purpose of placing together some particulars of the early life of William James, the writer soon found his own boyish figure so unavoidably in the foreground that he gave up the attempt to sketch his brother's life and confines himself chiefly to the memories and impressions of his own boyhood viewed thru an intervening medium of fifty years and more. The most vital part of the world he reconstructs is a New York now vanished. Later the background is changed to London and then to France, which he sees with the glamor of childhood. The book is written in his best and most characteristic manner." Pittsburgh

A second volume of autobiographical reminiscences which continues "A small boy and others" is "Notes of a son and brother" (1914 Scribner o.p. 1933). In the same characteristic and delightful manner it pictures the family life in Geneva, Newport and Cambridge. "Middle years" (1917 Scribner o.p. 1933) is the third volume of this series. This is an unrevised fragment giving the author's recollections of the London of 1870

Additional revelations of the life and thought of this distinguished author may be found in his "Letters" selected and edited by Percy Lubbock (2v 1920 Scribner $10; 15s) and in "Theatre and friendship" (1932 Putnam $3.50; Cape, J. 10s 6d) letters written to Elizabeth Robins

"In this autobiography the novelist, Storm Jameson, tells very little about her life beyond her childhood in Whitby, Yorkshire, and student experiences in London, but much about her thoughts and beliefs. 'The story of my life ends,' she writes, 'with the end of 1914.' The later chapters of the book are a bitter indictment of war and a civilization that permits it." Book rev. digest

"A writer of a perfectly original type, and at the same time intensely English . . . he is unparalleled, unless by Shelley, for the eloquent expression of the mere rapture of living, of the joy of existence in fresh air and clear light amid lovely landscape. . . . 'The story of my heart' . . . idealizes the feelings and yearnings of his youth; it is hardly what the lad really thought, but embodies all he was to think when he should have intellectually come to man's estate. The one fixed point in it is its intense pantheism." Dictionary of national biography

1 Actors—Correspondence, reminiscences, etc. 4-17107

As we follow the adventures of the actor, we meet with quaint characters, we hear good stories, we learn much about the art of acting, we have many portraits of prominent actors and actresses of the past, and we find ourselves drawn more and more to the author as he stands revealed to us in his own pages. . . . Mr Jefferson's style is easy and flowing; it is that of a man who has kept good company all his life, who has spoken every night the chosen words of the dramatists from Shakespeare to Sheridan. It has the cadence and the color of good dramatic writing, with a charm which seems to be his own. Condensed from Nation

"Thoroughness is the chief characteristic of this book, not any boldness of imagination or novelty of style. But perhaps just because of this, it appears even more enjoyable. With its simple, pedestrian narrative it gives a welcome change from the prevalent fashion." Boston

"Though temperate and even-handed to an extreme, M. Chinard never hesitates to take issue with other students of Jefferson's career where he thinks they have gone astray. Such independence would be temerity were it not that M. Chinard supports his interpretations with an overwhelming wealth of documentary evidence. On only one side is M. Chinard's biography disappointing. We look in vain through these compellingly interesting pages for any appreciation of that amazing versatility, catholicity

He served his apprenticeship in the biographical art under Lord Morley. . . . In writing his able and comprehensive life, Mr Hirst has performed for Anglo-American understanding a service similar to that performed in the war time by Lord Charnwood's timely and admirable 'Abraham Lincoln,' but, I think, even more fundamental and more difficult." 26-13101

"The author says of his book that it 'is not meant to be a biography of Mr Jefferson or to take the place of one. It is a mere study—a study in conduct and character.' This conduct and character emerge singularly blameless from Mr Nock's wholly detached and searching study which succeeds also in showing the extraordinary variety of Jefferson's interests and attainments." Book rev. digest

"Jefferson as a philosopher and man of culture—rich in experience, rich in curiosity, of an intellectual and moral symmetry and a social vision far beyond the apprehension of the age in which he flourished. That, as it seems to me, is Mr Nock's true thesis; and the originality of his book results from his altogether charming and convincing development of it." Stuart Sherman in Books (N.Y. "Mr Lang's book is not written in the soothing spirit of leisurely research. It has a vivacity inspired by the two master passions of literature, love of the subject as a vital issue, and a strong objection, both temperamental and reasoned, to the author who has most lately treated it (Anatole France) . . . Mr Lang's own conception of Jeanne is very simple and uncompromising: she was gifted with 'genius which should be the marvel of the world while the world stands'; she was not only brave,

"Civilized in temper, ironical, urbane, deft and reflective. Mr. Johnson speaks plainly when plain speech is demanded by his theme, but he knows that the facts are louder than any outcry about them. And if fate has made him seldom able to forget that he is a Negro, nature has made him always able to remember that he is a man. He has had a great deal of pleasure in his life which he is as willing to recount as his pains and frustrations. His story is full-bodied, with plenty of poetry and comedy. [23-14048]

First published in 1791

This edition is reprinted from that prepared by Mr Mowbray Morris for Macmillan's Globe series in 1893

"One of the best books in the world. Many of the greatest men that have ever lived have written biography; Boswell was one of the smallest men that ever lived, and he has beaten them all." T. B. Macaulay

"The most famous biography in the English language. It is an intimate and minute delineation of the great lexicographer's life, character and person, enlivened with small talk, gossip and bits of familiar correspondence. It is also an admirable portrayal of the society of which Johnson was the outstanding figure." Pratt alcove

Sir Leslie Stephen says "The edition by G. Birkbeck Hill in six volumes is by far the best." This edition which includes the "Journal of a tour to the Hebrides" and "Johnson's diary of a journey into North Wales" was published by Oxford in 1887. It is unfortunately out of print, 1933, but the publisher reports a new edition is in preparation

"The worst that can be said of Mrs Piozzi's volume is that it is utterly formless; a mere clutter of unrelated materials held together by nothing better than incessant apologies for the lack of order. She was, as Mr Roberts admits, sadly like Poll Carmichael: she was 'wiggle waggle.' Yet if the 'Anecdotes' from the day of their publication had not been placed in the hopeless position of competing with Boswell, I do not know what volume of memoirs would receive more praise for its vivid and life-like quality." Reminiscences of M. Jusserand who was French ambassador at Washington from 1903 to 1924. These memoirs, unfinished at his death, cover his early career in Europe, and offer interesting sidelights on the events of Theodore Roosevelt's administration

"The memoirs are of value for the picture they give of a great French gentleman, scholar, diplomatist and patriot, and for their portrayal of social life in Denmark, England and America. They reveal no secrets and betray no indiscretions. Their writer was evidently a happy man who found the world a kindly place. Of personal vanity there is not the slightest trace, and M. "This scholarly life brings to public notice an amount of new material never before published, gives a revaluation of Keats' character and a new interpretation of Fanny Brawne. Well worth having in every library that can possibly buy it, even at the sacrifice of several less important books." Wis. bul.

"Miss Lowell's interpretation of Keats's character is clear cut, subtle and convincing. A few of Miss Lowell's opinions are challenging. "The years since the author's 'Story of my life' was written pass in review in this new volume, with many a glance back into the earlier years as well. Miss Keller dwells upon her perplexities in finding a 'special niche' in life, upon pecuniary difficulties, her ventures in lecturing, in vaudeville and the movies, upon a love affair and her many friendships, upon her ways of contact with the world about her. The fortitude and unwavering faith here displayed arouse sympathy and admiration. Photographs, index." N.Y. libraries

Also obtainable in the Riverside literature series (Houghton 56c)

The book is indeed unique. The story itself and the years of effort which have made its telling possible, the personality which it reveals, and the creation of that personality,—these are things which seem little short of miraculous. The narrative of a young woman who has been deaf and blind from infancy is written in a style which is not only idiomatic, but individual and rhythmical. As one reads, one forgets to make allowances for limitations which are apt to slip out of sight, until a chance phrase recalls one with a start to the realization that the mind which deals so freely and normally with the ordinary factors of human life dwells forever in silence and the dark. "Mr. Whitlock set himself the task of covering the entire span of the Marquis's life, and also of reviewing contemporary events and leading figures from Lafayette's own point of view. In this the author has succeeded. The first volume gives the aristocratic setting of the Frenchman's youth, with the cult of family and military renown; his participation in the American Revolution; his popularity and glory on his return to Paris; then the part of La Fayette—no longer the Marquis—in the French Revolution till his proscription in the reign of terror. The second volume covers his exile; his relations with Napoleon; his visit to America in 1824; his support of Louis-Phillipe, the 'citizen-king,' and his still idealistic old age to his death in 1834." "Because it is more personal, 'Memories of My Childhood' is an even more touching and captivating book than 'Mårbacka. . . This autobiography is not only a record but a recapturing of childhood itself—creation of the same order as the author's stories of others. It has the mingling of fact and fantasy that is the essence of her writings—the eagerness, sensitiveness and wise naiveté that the child never lost. It is, in short, a wholly delightful book." "At 33 Miss Le Gallienne pauses and looks back over her life so far. The first part of the book tells charmingly of early childhood years in England, of girlhood and school days in Paris and the first years of struggle for success in America. The last half of the book is the story of her career as actress and director-manager, and of her great venture as head of the Civic Repertory Theater in New York." Book rev. digest

"Miss Le Gallienne's chapters are written with an unction that proves contagious. They are modest, humorous, and honest. They bespeak the cultivation of her mind, the bravery of her spirit, and succeed in capturing vividly the excitement of the long series of theatrical events in which she has played a part and the quality of the various people (Duse, Bernhardt, Constance Collier, Elsie Janis, and the rest) who have figured in her career." Of particular value are the necessarily summarized but most useful accounts of the Russian setting in which Lenin lived and worked. And the author here, as well as in his interpretations of Lenin's role as it developed from the Nineties on, is able to maintain an unusually objective attitude. "An account of his personal life, especially of its springs of action as revealed and deepened by the ordeal of war." Subtitle

"Here is a volume quite without parallel in the long list of Lincolniana. The author has attempted not a mere biography, but what is more difficult, a progressive character study of one of the most complex figures of history. In dealing with motives, with the well-springs of thought and action, he has undertaken probably the most difficult kind of task in historical criticism. It is a pleasure to be able to state that he has discharged the task with quite conspicuous success. The result is a picture more nearly like the original than any so far offered by biographers of Lincoln." Amer. hist. rev.

Tarbell, I. M. In the footsteps of the Lincolns. 1924 Harper $4 92

1 Lincoln family 24-3279

Traces the history of seven generations of Lincolns from the year 1637 when Samuel Lincoln began the line in Hingham, Mass. to Abraham Lincoln's departure from Springfield, Ill., in 1860. It is a story of vigorous, independent pioneering, of self-help and self-rule, which goes far to account for Abraham Lincoln, not as an accident, but as the product of those who lived before him. Condensed from Preface

A 1930 reprint of a book first published 1916 by Small

"A sketch written with a sympathy, which while it does not idealize Lincoln, makes his real greatness stand out. Too condensed to give a detailed account of events, but presents a picture of the social and political life of the period." Bkl.

"Painstaking research has gone into this work, which is more than a typical biography—as the sub-title indicates. Dr. Evans has performed a service that would have benefited even the most noted of the Lincoln biographers." Pittsburgh

Morrow, Mrs. H. M. W. Mary Todd Lincoln; an appreciation of the wife of Abraham Lincoln. 1928 Morrow $2.50 92

28-8617

"Directly to the class of biographies that set out deliberately to rehabilitate misunderstood figures in history belongs Honoré Willsie Morrow's 'Mary Todd Lincoln,' which Mrs Morrow calls 'An Appreciation,' and which is a biographical narrative concerning one whom the author considers 'The most defamed woman in American history.'" North American review

"Mrs. Morrow has added a useful book to the literature upon Lincoln. Its form is not happy, for it alternates plain essays in biography with bits of fiction in a disconcerting way. . . But the book fully achieves the author's intention of vindicating Mary Lincoln against baseless slanders, and of presenting a full, accurate, vivacious portrait of her." Sat. rev. of lit.

32-34498

"Part one tells the story of the twenty-two years of married life of that oddly-assorted couple—Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd, and the years following Lincoln's death during which his widow lived on alone, a broken and embittered woman. Part two consists of the documents that went into the making of the biography, contemporary letters and newspaper accounts, edited by Paul M. Angle. Index." Book rev. digest

"This volume has much to commend it, even if it is given over to a single premise, around which the authors collect and unify all of their facts—the premise that Mary Lincoln was from childhood suffering from cerebral disease, and consequently never to be held responsible for her acts. . . Both parts of the volume are valuable, though somewhat limited contributions to a more complete understanding of Mrs. Lincoln." Boston Transcript

1 Aeronautics—Voyages 28-22408

"Here is a picture of Lindbergh by one who accompanied him in his flight across the forty eight states and seems really to know him. Mr. Keyhoe confirms our opinion of him as a national hero and also shows us his very human side. In style and structure, the admirable simplicity of this biography is worthy of such a person as Lindbergh." Providence

Livingstone, David

Campbell, R. J. Livingstone. 1930 Dodd $3; Benn 21s 92

30-4500

"A new biography of the great explorer and missionary whose life work was consummated in Central Africa. Dr Campbell, in the light of modern times, has attempted to present a new perspective of Livingstone's motives and career." Book rev. digest

"Dr. Campbell has attempted to portray him as a man with a vocation, to show the slow crystalization of purpose which drove him to his ultimate death with the inevitability of a Greek tragedy. If the author has not entirely succeeded, it is, perhaps, because too much emphasis is laid on the predestined character of Livingstone's choice. Dr. Campbell does show us, however, what sort of a man Livingstone really was, austere and precipitate, endowed with moral and physical courage to an exceptional degree, reputed quarrelsome because he refused to suffer fools gladly, obstinate because he refused to compromise his convictions, presumptuous because he refused to accept the shibboleths of his predecessors." "A brilliant portrait of one of the outstanding figures of modern times. 1 Gt. Brit.—For. rel. 2 Russia—For. rel. 3 European war, 1914-1918—Russia 4 Bolshevism 33-4369

Published in England under title: Memoirs of a British agent

"The World War found Lockhart, once a rubber planter in Malaya, located in Moscow in the British consular service, and he was later made head of a special mission to establish unofficial relations with the Bolsheviks. The record is permeated with the greatest frankness and a certain detached humor in regard to his own activities. The chief interest centers in his dealings with the Bolsheviks, in the incidents of the 'chronic crises,' and in the pen portraits of such leaders as Trotsky and Lenin. Index." N.Y. libraries

"The theme of the whole book is a humorous and intelligent confrontation of his own character with the many ordeals and temptations which it has been called upon to meet. 29-29534

"Believing that other biographers have faithfully recorded the life of Louis XI in detail, Lewis has written, not a chronological narrative, but a series of interpretive sketches. These deal with chosen phases of the king's life, with three of his associates, three ecclesiastics, and three artists, and with social and political conditions. The author is an enthusiastic medievalist, constantly on the defensive for his favorite epoch, yet his interpretation is scholarly, and in most respects impartial." Bkl.

Journal; ed. by J. M. Murry. 1927 Knopf $3.50; Constable 7s 6d 92

27-20237

"Covers the period from 1914 to 1922, and contains a fragment written in 1910. It records facts, sketches, scenes and characters, notes, fragmentary incidents and descriptions that might be used in future stories, and sets down her impressions and introspective reflections. The introduction and inserted notes by her husband supply biographical information." Pittsburgh

"Here is a book which is beyond the art and science of a critic. It is a heart-searing document, written in heightened moments by a rare creature inspired by genius and disease to acute vision. Flash after flash the lightning scenes come from her tortured mind, in each minutiae of time created whole and perfect." Spectator

Ségur, P. M. M. H., marquis de. Marie Antoinette, [tr. from the French by M. C. Watt]. 1928 Routledge o.p. 1933 92

[29-2920]

"With ease, urbanity, competence and feeling M. de Ségur has produced a touching image of the unhappy Queen of France, which, while awaking sympathy for the ill-fated woman, reveals the causes of her tragic adventures as Queen." Times (London) lit. sup.

"Ségur's thesis is that Marie Antoinette made her own bed, but that she took her place in it with such unflinching and unselfish courage that she is worthy of all admiration. . . Few historical writers have surpassed Ségur in the ability to paint a vivid portrait." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

* Zweig, Stefan. Marie Antoinette; the portrait of an average woman; tr. by Eden and Cedar Paul. 1933 Viking press $3.50 92

33-8087

"Unlike the more romantic life by Katherine Anthony, this is a cool, unsparing analysis of the queen, rising in its later chapters to heights of respect and admiration for this average woman who met her tragic destiny with greatness. The realistic treatment of the marital relations of the royal pair may be offensive to some readers." Wis. bul.

"The book presents us with a well-chosen and well-knit series of pictures, succeeding one another like scenes in some great drama. But, further, it gives us a psychological study full of penetration and delicate sympathy. . . Herr Zweig has succeeded admirably in realizing his purpose, which was, not to produce an apotheosis of the Queen, but to emphasize her human qualities." Times (London) lit. sup.

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

English edition has title: Things I remember

"Aware that she has 'stepped through the ages,' the author, cousin of the last emperor of Russia, has etched, in a narrative of historic and human interest, the story of her life from the time of her christening when she was taken to the Winter Palace 'in a golden coach drawn by three pairs of white horses' to her flight, in terror and anguish, from revolutionary Russia. Incidents of a childhood passed under the old regime are revealed with the same excellent choice of detail that marks the later, more dramatic episodes. Photographs." N.Y. libraries

A continuation of "The education of a princess"

"A record of the author's successful attempt to build a new life for herself in unfamiliar surroundings in the years since the Great War. It presents not only a picture of her own life, but gives interesting sidelights on many other royal personages in Europe. The story lacks some of the dramatic quality of her former book, but nevertheless is very interesting and entertaining reading." Ontario library review

"Nobody who cares about history and its great men but will rejoice to have at last Mr. Churchill's vindication of his ancestor. A vindication it is from end to end of this its first volume: whole-hearted, hard hitting, now ironic and now positively vicious, but characteristic, thorough and candid: dealing in minute detail with the crucial points of its case, but placing the whole story against the full broad background of the history of the times." Contents: v1, Frontiersman, soldier, lawmaker, 1755-1788; v2, Politician, diplomatist, statesman, 1789-1801; v3, Conflict and construction, 1800-1815; v4, The building of the nation, 1815-1835

Because of its importance, included here even tho it is in four volumes and is expensive for small libraries. It is based on contemporary documents and is equally important as biography and as history

"It is because Senator Beveridge not merely stresses the importance of constitutional doctrines from the point of view of an able lawyer and an enlightened historian, but also supplies for them a rich interpretative setting that his accounts of Marshall's great cases are so impressive and so convincing. He combines, indeed, the broad, impersonal view of the historian with the penetration of an astute politician. Few writers of American history or biography have been qualified thus as both scholars and men of public experience." North American review

"The real Mary is to be seen plainly enough in Mrs Maccunn's 'Mary Stuart.' The author, tho full of sympathy for a queen who was set a hopeless task, and placed in a position where success was impossible, is perfectly impartial. Her attitude toward her heroine is candidly historical and perfectly womanly: two qualities not often combined where Mary Stuart is in question." Andrew Lang in Academy

"Mr. Sencourt has written the first 'authoritative' biography of Meredith. He has had access to private papers, and he has tried to make his work worthy of his subject. Mr. Sencourt has really given labour and intelligence to understanding Meredith's own writings—he has soaked himself in them, and he can often clear up obscurities merely by adducing the interior crisis of Meredith's private life. On the whole, however, Mr. Sencourt's biography is peculiarly irritating. The narrative is never clear. Mr. Sencourt has no gift for order and proportion, or for leaving a tale to tell itself. His own English is quite monstrous: overcoloured and hysterical. None the less this 'Life' is indispensable to those who wish to study and understand Meredith; and out of the confusion of his story a real figure emerges." Spectator

"Memoir of Lady Montagu by W. M. Thomas, v1, p1-48; Anecdotes of Lady Montagu by Lady Louisa Stuart, v1, p49-121.

"From 1718 to 1739, Lady Montagu was one of the leaders in English society, well known to all the wits of the time. She accompanied her husband on his embassy to Turkey, and the letters written during this time are her best. Her sprightliness and the easy elegance of her style, her pungent wit and shrewd observations make the letters justly famous. 'She lacks, perhaps, some of the finer graces of style; but her letters have that one supreme charm . . . they are herself. Take up her volumes and you see not only—or chiefly—the chameleon world she portrayed, but the woman who portrays it. There she is with her stout, shrewd, wise old face, looking at you thru the pages.'" Pittsburgh of Lady Mary Wortley Montagu, who introduced vaccination into England, by tactics bold and commonsensical should give a great many American women a new notion of social method. Miss Barry is best when she is writing of the younger and simpler Mary." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Many pitfalls lie in wait for the writer of fact who employs in large measure the method of fiction. But Miss Barry has avoided them all, and presents us with an historical study that is more vital and charming than nine-tenths of even the best novels. Not only does Lady Montagu emerge from these pages clothed with real flesh and blood, but the whole background of her age glows with convincing life and colour." Nation and Athenaeum

"Mr. Bradford's task . . . was to build up a personality from the fragmentary data which Dwight L. Moody left behind him, and he has done it carefully and with extraordinary analytical skill, dividing his book not into chronological divisions, but into chapters that exhaust aspects of Moody. Thus we have the growth of a soul, Moody's attitude on heaven and hell, Moody the preacher, Moody in his relationship to Ira D. "A popular biography of the elder Morgan and the story of his rise to virtual dictatorship in the financial world, written in rather sensational style." Pittsburgh

"The outstanding merit of this volume . . . is its readability; its outstanding defect is its lack of expertness. If a masterly life of Morgan is ever written, it will be by a man who combines the role of economist and historian, and Mr. Winkler understands neither too well. But he does understand how to give a quick, vivid impression of a social scene, how to tell a story with vigor and interest, and how to render a portrait of his hero." Sat. rev. of lit.

Morley, John Morley, viscount

Recollections. 2v 1917 Macmillan 30s 92

1 Gt. Brit.—Pol. & govt. 17-29196

A happy combination of autobiography, philosophical comment, literary appreciation and personal character-sketching. Viscount Morley had an extraordinary talent for friendship. Mill, Meredith, Joseph Chamberlain, Parnell Sir Alfred Lyall and Frederic Harrison—these are but samples to show his range of association. Good stories are not taboo, and piquant sayings star many a page. Writing with entire freedom of the political events of England of thirty years past, in which he played so worthy a part as chief secretary for Ireland and as secretary of state for India, Morley betrays no secrets, records no bitter verdicts. No one can lay down these 'Recollections' without feeling that he has been in contact with something large and fine. Condensed from Nation

‡ Story of my boyhood and youth. 1913 Houghton $3.50 92

1 Frontier and pioneer life 13-5573

A notable piece of autobiographic writing—the story of an unusually interesting boyhood and youth told with an energy and an eye for the diverting and significant that distinguish it at once from the slipshod garrulity of most books of the kind. The first fifty pages are devoted to the author's boyhood in Dunbar, beside the North sea. At the age of eleven he accompanied his family to Wisconsin, and the chapters that form the bulk of the volume describe the joys of those early days in a new land. Condensed from Nation

Talks with Mussolini, by Emil Ludwig; tr. from the German by Eden and Cedar Paul. 1933 Little $2.75; Allen, G. 7s 6d 92

An account of eighteen conversations with Mussolini, each showing the dictator's views and personality

"Mr. Ludwig seems to have approached his subject with both reverence and trepidation, and neither mental attitude conduces to a successful exploration of the mentality which it is sought to interpret. Despite the fact that owing to this attitude Mussolini delivered himself largely of a string of platitudes, there is enough of concrete and definite information relative to Fascist plans and theories to make this a very valuable book to anyone interested in what is in progress in Italy." "This conception of Napoleon, by a German writer, is a brilliant and dramatic study, 700 pages in length, for the most part sympathetic and admiring. It is a discussion of his character and genius, rather than of his military exploits. Few of the biographers who have gone before have given so complete a portrait of the man Napoleon." Book rev. digest

"The most brilliant exposition of the Napoleonic legend should rightfully be noteworthy and popular. Such an attempt to enliven history is praiseworthy, and two factors have contributed to its success. The first is the author's style, perhaps the foremost example of the way the historical present should and should not

25-17836

"Mr Newman—who states in his prefaces that he is not related to the great Cardinal—calls his work 'a biographical and literary study.' It is primarily biographical and secondarily literary, for Mr Newman recounts the story of the Cardinal's life, pausing now and then to discuss or appraise his most important literary work of a given period. The final chapter is devoted to a discussion of 'Newman as a man of letters.'" Catholic world

"He stands more aloof from his subject than Dr Reilly and lacks the impressive enthusiasm of the latter. His book differs from the other in being mainly biographical. It ought to be useful as an introduction to the study of a great personality. In the matter of literary appreciation Mr Newman's remarks lack both novelty and zest." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Bishop, M. G. Odyssey of Cabeza de Vaca. 1933 Appleton-Century $3; 15s 92

1 America—Disc. & explor.—Spanish 33-27160

"Cabeza de Vaca is noted in history as the first European to cross the North American continent, his journey from Florida across the Gulf of Mexico and thence across Mexico to the Gulf of California occupying the nine years —most of them spent in captivity—from 1527 to 1536. Later he was made governor of a vast stretch of land in South America but his humane policy toward the Indians roused the hatred of his fellows and he was sent back in chains to Spain where after years of litigation he died in poverty and disgrace. Bib'iography. [Illustrations and maps]." Book rev. digest

"Professor Bishop, contributing this well documented history for the use of the general reader, has stepped aside from the routinary work of a professor of romance languages and made a mark for himself by combining an appreciation of the physical tragedy with that of the spiritual man undone by a purpose beyond his generation to appreciate. . . . The narrative is smoothly written, the selection for emphasis is good." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Physician to the criminal courts of Baltimore; practical psychiatrist; warden of the Alumni Memorial Hall of the University; priest: these are the four squares of John Rathbone Oliver's life, and at least one of them should be appealing to each reader of this very human book. The stories of the people with whom Oliver came in contact in his work are particularly entertaining and moving." Providence

First published 1926. Now enlarged by over 100 pages

"This book is largely bibliographical and critical, about one-third of the pages being devoted to O'Neill's life and the rest to a consideration of his plays. The book is said by O'Neill himself to be a somewhat premature appraisal, but it is nevertheless interesting as a piece of contemporary criticism." Bkl.

Osler, Sir William, bart.

25-11250

"Sir William Osler (1849-1919) was an English physician. The first volume of this biography follows his career as a student in Toronto and Montreal and as a professor in McGill medical school, in the University of Pennsylvania, and in Johns Hopkins university. The second volume is devoted to his work at Oxford, his activities during the World war, and his final illness. Osler's broad interests and the detail with which Dr Cushing writes make the work almost a history of medical science during the period." Pittsburgh

The theme is noble, the book is worthy of its subject; there is little to criticize . . . the matter is all pure gold and the book should rank as one of the classical biographies." Nature

Palmerston, Henry John Temple, 3d viscount

* Guedalla, Philip. Palmerston, 1784-1865. 1927 Putnam $5; Benn 25s 92

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist.—19th cent. 27-2671

"The biography narrates an immense number of events—for Palmerston lived a long life, was Minister of War at twenty-six and died as Prime Minister at eighty. Moreover, 'the life of Palmerston was the life of England and, to a large extent, of Europe' in those years. Indeed, the book is so packed with information, drawn from all sorts of published and unpublished sources, that sometimes one loses perspective and the relative importance of events becomes obscured . . . Yet, on the whole, the book is a brilliant and important achievement. The writer's uncommon insight makes the whole narrative vital. Further, his peculiar gift for pointed sentences is here used with more moderation than in previous books; thus the personal flavor remains, without the touch of flippancy." Boston

"Mr. Guedalla has written a very entertaining book, and though, as he says, he has used the full apparatus of research and documents, he never allows his learning to suppress his liveliness. The portrait of Palmerston which he paints does not perhaps differ as much as one might have expected from that which his admirers have long taken as the true likeness." New statesman

The standard edition, first published in 1893-1899 in nine volumes (later divided into ten volumes). The volume of "Pepysiana" originally included is omitted in the three volume reprint

An intimate narrative of the writer's own life covering nine and a half years from January 1660 to May 1669

"No work of the kind in the world's literature can be compared to Pepys' 'Diary' . . . It paints the official and private circles in which the author moved, the course of public affairs, the humours of social life, with no less truth and frankness than it reveals the author himself. It is by far the most valuable document extant for the understanding of the times; better than all the histories and all the comedies. It seems an unequalled piece of irony that the supreme piece of workmanship in its way and the most lucid mirror of its age should be the performance of an ordinary citizen who had not the least idea that he was doing anything remarkable, who expected celebrity, if he expected it at all, from his official tasks and scientific recreations; who shrouded his work in shorthand lest the world should profit by it; and who would have been dismayed beyond measure if he had foreseen that it would be published after his death." Williams, Basil. Life of William Pitt. 2v 1913 Longmans 12s 92

1 Gt. Brit.—Pol. & govt. 13-26021

A more complete and adequate biography than Lord Rosebery's admirable work which ended before Pitt's first ministry

"Mr Williams has equipped himself for his task by years of study, with the result that we have at last a really worthy biography of an English writer . . . The most original work in the book is that which throws light on Pitt's actual methods as the greatest of war ministers, on the general conditions of public offices in the eighteenth century, and on the private and home life of Chatham. . . . Mr Williams is in fact a better biographer than historian, and when Pitt's life becomes a part of world politics, the narrative occasionally loses itself in details. The net effect . . . is not to . . . paint a new picture of Chatham, but rather to fill in the details of the outline which Macaulay drew for all time." Saturday rev.

"The memoirs of Daisy Cornwallis-West, an Irish-Englishwoman, brought up in all the freedom of an English country house, who married at eighteen the Prince of Pless and went to live in a German castle, where she was hedged in by etiquette and stiff formality of every kind. Her book proves that no amount of court etiquette could quench her charming vivacity." Book rev. digest

A study of Poe in the light of the new psychology

"Mr Krutch has written a brilliantly illuminating study of Poe . . . The book marks the definite arrival of a fresh and candid mind, with modern psychological equipment, lively curiosity, critical objectivity and singularly lucid, persuasive exposition. Furthermore (which is not always true of brilliant books), this study is thoroughly stimulating with regard to its subject. So far as I am concerned, it has had the effect of raising Poe from the dead." Stuart Sherman in Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Part of the story of this American woman who was the wife of a Russian diplomat and cared for her invalid husband on the family estate during the Revolution, is familiar through magazine publication of some of her letters to her family. This intimate record of her experiences in Russia and her escape is not only of intense interest but of value in correcting the mistaken impression of the attitude of the intelligentsia toward the peasants." Pittsburgh

"The largest and by far the most important part of the book deals with the revolution. It was on their estate that the Ponafidines weathered the revolutionary storms up to the end of 1920. And it is here that the almost unique documentary value of the book lies." N.Y. Times

"The industry and sympathy of Mr. Davis and Mr. Maurice have let a good deal of light into the manner of O. Henry's life during the years in New York, particularly from 1903 to 1907 when he was at his peak. While he cannot be said to have had any friend who knew his whole existence, he had many friends who knew parts of it. These parts, as displayed in numerous anecdotes, have been fitted as well as they allow into a general pattern. Thanks to this book, he is now more visible, more comprehensible, than he has been before. It would, however, be too much to say that he emerges as a clear-cut or well-rounded personality. He seems still an anthology of anecdotes, not quite a solid body of substantial fact." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"This interesting book is written in a way that O. Henry would have liked. It is journalistic in style and forthright in manner. It tells without theorizing the already familiar story. It is a very human story, like all such tragi-comedies, and it is a story such as O. Henry might have written even to the twist at the end." Outlook

23-13553

The autobiography of an eminent electrical scientist who came to America as a poor young Serbian immigrant

"I have never met so good and complete an account of the Americanization of an immigrant, and I have never read so plain a story of the growth of modern science told for those who have no knowledge of the subject. But it has in my eyes a merit far greater. The account of life in his native village as a herd boy is written with a simple and vivid style which approaches the highest literary art, and this simple and direct method, even in his most romantic outbursts of feeling, persists through the book." 25-21682

"Readers of 'Vandermark's folly' and its sequels will enjoy this more direct account of pioneer life in Iowa. Will take a permanent place among American biographies. . . . Appeared in Saturday evening post." Wis. bul.

"Herbert Quick had recounted only the first twenty-nine years of his rich and varied life when death—rarely more unkind to us—cut short the record. Even in its unfinished form, however, it stands as [a] piece of recent American autobiography comparable with 'The education of Henry Adams.' Written in a simple yet imaginative style, without a trace of affectation, it concerns far more than the modest title would indicate." Sat. rev. of lit.

Rabelais, François
30-959

"Rabelais as peasant, priest, and author of Pantagruel and Gargantua, the sources of and contributions to the products of his genius, constitute this biographical study. The relationship of the man and his work to the modern mind is especially emphasized." Book rev. digest

"Because of omissions which are apparently quite intentional, this biography of Rabelais will probably appeal far less to lovers of historical recreations than to serious students of literature already deeply imbued with the enthusiasm for Rabelais which has so evidently motivated the authors. As pure criticism, this competent and careful study must command serious consideration and will probably take high rank among appreciations of the genius of Rabelais." Outlook

"Mr Mott's book is the first adequate estimate in English letters of Renan's career and work. Such an estimate has been long overdue. . . . Mr Mott's study is not a picture of Renan seen through a corner of the painter's temperament. It is not a product of clever journalism, concentrating with partisan passion on a selected angle of the subject. It is a work of gifted scholarship. . . . "A constructively critical biography, concerned only with events of Rolland's life as they influenced his work and ideals." Cleveland

"Exactly what have been the purposes which have inspired Rolland from the days of his youth onward are described in this biography by Stefan Zweig, who is himself well known as dramatist, novelist and poet and who throughout a brilliantly written book gives expression to the same idealism as the author of 'Jean-Christophe.'" Roosevelt, Franklin Delano

Looker, Earle. American way: Franklin Roosevelt in action. 1933 Day $2.50 92

33-31722

"Mr. Looker has drawn President Roosevelt against a Washington background, beginning with the inaugural address and the bank holiday and ending with the NRA in its earlier strides. But the interest of the book is biographical rather than political and two-thirds of it is concerned with the years before the Presidency. Pages from an earlier book, 'This Man Roosevelt,' have been embodied. . . . The general effect is one of balance, moderation, fairness." N.Y. Times

"Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the minute man of '33" by Belle Moses (1933 Appleton-Century $1.75; 6s) is another readable biography of the President which was written for young people

Roosevelt, Quentin

* Looker, Earle. White House gang. 1929 Revell $3, popular ed $1 92

1 Roosevelt, Theodore, pres. U.S. 30-3664

"Interesting recollections of the escapades of a group of seven small boys by one of its members. Quentin Roosevelt, being the leader, and the White House and its grounds the scene of their pranks." Pratt quarterly

"Incidentally, the book gives a view of Theodore Roosevelt from a new and interesting angle, that from which this group of mischievous small boys who were wholly without respect for place or understanding of power, viewed him as the father of one of their number. It is no small matter to his credit that he merged from the ruthless 'sizing up' of these small semi-barbarians with the affection, the loyalty, the complete trust of every one of them." N.Y. Times

Roosevelt, Theodore

* Theodore Roosevelt, an autobiography. Scribner $2.50 92

1 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 21-3741

Originally published by Macmillan in 1913

"With the exceptions of a few chapters of a personal character, the narrative deals chiefly with politics and policies as exemplified in the writer's public life and more or less connected with his administrative acts." Dial

The chapters on the "Vigor of life" and "Cowboy land" appeared in his "Ranch life"

Theodore Roosevelt's diaries of boyhood and youth. 1928 Scribner $2.50; 10s 6d 92

28-23979

"Very detailed account of a boy's life from the age of nine to early college days. Trips abroad, days on the farm or at Oyster Bay, social times by the fire with his parents, pranks of all sorts, are all described with equal accuracy. Quite as delightful as his 'Letters to his Children.' The spelling adds much to the book's entertaining qualities." Wis. bul.

"Not only devoted admirers of Roosevelt will delight in its frank, ingenious illusions, but more impersonally, students of child-psychology will find it extremely instructive as to how an American child of high type looks at life, and re-acts to his environment." Boston Transcript

Theodore Roosevelt's letters to his children; ed. by J. B. Bishop. 1919 Scribner $2, popular ed $1 92

Charnwood, G. R. B., baron. Theodore Roosevelt. 1923 Little $2.50 92

23-26925

"In this study by the well-known English biographer, Roosevelt is sympathetically portrayed from boyhood to the days of the World war, against the background of the times, and in the various aspects of his career. Marked by penetrating insight, a 'boyish hero-worship,' and smoothness of style. Includes a chronology by Hermann Hagedorn, and a notable facsimile letter published for the first time." * Pringle, H. F. Theodore Roosevelt. 1931 Harcourt $3.50; Cape, J. 18s 92

31-31893

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"A long, fully documented and impartial consideration of the many facets of Roosevelt's character and career. The narrative is interwoven continuously with quotations which add tang and flavor to the text. Photographs, cartoons, bibliography." N.Y. libraries

"Mr. Pringle's biography of Roosevelt is an honest and intelligent attempt—whether conscious or not, one may not say—to segregate Roosevelt, the man, from the Roosevelt crowd, the Rooseveltians, the middle class mob . . . This is the most comprehensive story, the most illuminating, convincing, and reasonable picture of Roosevelt that has been made since his death. With fairness that is often painful and so, by its very conscious effort to be fair may be indeed a bit unfair, Mr. Pringle has built up a theory of Roosevelt, the man." Sat rev. of lit.

"'A sister's interpretation of a world-wide personality' written in an intimate and chatty style and illustrated with reproduction of numerous photographs and facsimiles of some of Roosevelt's letters with his own droll illustrations. The chapter on home life in the White House contains an interesting list of his favorite books comprising the famous 'pig skin library' which he carried with him on his travels. Appeared in part in Scribner's magazine." Cleveland

Thayer, W. R. Theodore Roosevelt; an intimate biography. 1919 Houghton $5; Constable 24s 92

19-15513

"This biography is written by an intimate and life-long friend of Mr Roosevelt's. . . . Although the author protests that he did not plan to write a deliberate eulogy, his keen admiration for the great qualities of his subject is the outstanding characteristic of the book. . . . The book is illustrated and has an index." Book rev. digest

"The men who disliked Roosevelt and the men who distrusted him can find little to criticize in Mr Thayer's treatment of the debatable incidents in his career. They may disagree with the biographer's inferences, but they can seldom dispute his facts or disapprove his manner of stating them. Mr Thayer modestly styles his work a 'sketch.' It is more than that. It is a discriminating biography, well planned and delightfully written." Boston Transcript

Wister, Owen. Roosevelt; the story of a friendship. 1930 Macmillan $4; 18s 92

30-18641

"Follows intimately Wister's friendship with Roosevelt from Harvard days to a last visit at Sagamore Hill during the World War. Through Roosevelt's letters, but more particularly through personal contacts in which even gesture and intonation of voice are vividly recalled, the portrait of Roosevelt emerges, the first of a long and brilliant gallery of pen pictures which includes the 'Familiars,' a group of distinguished men: Oliver Wendell Holmes, Henry Adams, Henry Cabot Lodge, Winthrop Chanler and others. Photographs and facsimile of handwriting." N.Y. libraries

It is to be regretted that the author has not devoted more space to Rousseau's works . . . However, Mr. Josephson's primary purpose was to write a biography, and this he has achieved well." Boston

"Mr. Josephson's new volume [is] by far the best of all recent studies of Rousseau: a veritable quarry for miners in search of the facts. Mr. Josephson has given us, not a portrait, but something infinitely better—ample materials for a judgement." Spectator

"There is special value and distinction in this intimate account of a journey to California in the gold rush days, written years ago at the request of the author's son, Professor Josiah Royce. Against the experiences of the dangerous overland trek, and the difficulties of moving from one mining camp to another with a young family, stands forth the figure of a sensitive, educated woman, staunch in courage, loyal to her faith and her family, 'caught in a swirl of strange circumstances.'" [29-1091]

A 1933 reprint of a book first published 1928 by Doubleday, Doran under title: "Exquisite tragedy, an intimate life of John Ruskin" without the seven illustrations now included

"If Mrs. Williams-Ellis's style were equal to her understanding this might remain as the standard life of Ruskin. But she is inclined to relapse for stretches into a fatal pedestrian ease; she does not rise always with the theme; and the title of the book is, indeed, too ambitious for the story as she sets it out. . . The book, however, is sincere and moving; it is a sustained effort of sympathetic insight." Nation and Athenaeum

1 Reformers 2 Corruption (in politics) 3 Socialism 4 Revolutions 33-29774

"Subtitled 'Some recollections of a sideline reformer,' this book is interesting for the light it throws on some of the political lost causes of the last half century, Populism, Free trade, Single tax, 'Greenbackism,' and others, and on the reform eras of muck-raking and trust-busting as well. Covers the war and comes down to the present time, ending with the heartening conclusion that in spite of all discouragements and failure there has been progress." Wis. bul.

"Lee Sage, as revealed in his picturesque autobiography, outdistances the heroes of most western fiction thrillers. Born at Robber's Roost, the Utah headquarters of a gang of cattle rustlers, he lived with Indians and outlaws, and was bandit, cattle thief, bronco buster, and moonshiner before settling down to respectability. A vivid, idiomatic narrative, reminiscent of campfire tales. Edited by Harvey Fergusson." Bkl.

"The sub-title indicates the line taken in Mr Roeder's interpretation. This study in conscience shows the great friar as a man of unwavering conservatism at odds with the extravagance and corruption of his age, a man, moreover, whose pride was the controlling factor in his life and whose belief in himself and his leadership was traceable to the need of compensation for his early years of isolation and humiliation." Book rev. digest

"This volume has the supreme quality of excitement. One tingles reading it. In addition it is sound, if not exhaustive history; with deft selection, with assured understanding, it recreates the strange, turbulent life of Florence at the end of the fifteenth century." N.Y. World

Because of its picture of colonial life at the beginning of the American revolution, some libraries may prefer to class this attractive book with other books of travel

"To the wholly detached reader the pleasure of the 'Journal' itself is in three things: in its lively, quick sketching of people and places; in the slightly acid candor which casts across so many pages a shadow, evidently exact, of the author's mind, so nimble, so prejudiced, so entertaining in its frank advocacy of a partisan view of a great event." "This book is a modified version of Miss Zimmern's earlier work of the same title, which was published many years ago. Its main aim is to give a brief connected account of Schopenhauer's life and a defence, so far as defence is practicable, of the asperities of his character, the analysis of his philosophy being reserved for the last quarter of the book and being necessarily of a cursory nature." "A frank and appreciative account of an ardent, brilliant, lovable and, according to her husband, extremely difficult woman, and of a genius, not largely productive but not the less real. The author married Olive Schreiner when she was thirty-nine, ten years after the publication of 'The story of an African farm,' and took her name in addition to his own." Cleveland

Fuess, C. M. Carl Schurz, reformer (1829-1906). (Am. political leaders) 1932 Dodd $3.75 92

32-26442

"This biography of the great German-American liberal and reformer is to a large extent a study of political ideas and leaders from Lincoln to Roosevelt. Professor Fuess describes Carl Schurz as the 'self-constituted incarnation of the national conscience' during these years, as he was also the earliest and most consistent practitioner of non-partisanship and independence in American politics, and the animating spirit of the Mugwumps." Book rev. digest

"Professor Fuess has produced a compact and much needed life of the only foreign-born American who served in the army as a brigade, division, and corps commander, represented one of our States for a term as United States Senator, and also occupied the position of minister in the diplomatic service. It is an excellent study, showing thoroughness of research, and is distinguished by being neither an attempt at sensationalizing nor mere adulation." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Autobiography of the Alsatian medical missionary who renounced the rewards of his great gifts as philosopher, theologian, organist and writer, to minister to the sick natives of Equatorial Africa, alternating his service there with trips to Europe to earn money thru lectures and organ recitals to carry on the work of his hospital at Lambarene." Book rev. digest

"Rarely does a man who writes an autobiography succeed in giving so much of himself as Schweitzer has here. The simplicity of the writing reflects the simplicity of the man; the range of the topics treated reflects the range of his mind; the record of events reflects his incredible vigor and his capacity to accomplish the seemingly impossible." 1 Missions—California 2 Franciscans 3 California—Hist. 33-32578

"The biography is written with tenderness; the days of the friar are interpreted with complete understanding of their significance to the man himself. Serra's simple faith, his perfect realization of the character of the Indians in his country, his naively superstitious and yet stubbornly logical mind, his saint-like endurance of hardship, the triumph in him always of the spirit over the very frail and diseased flesh, are all, for Miss Repplier, the stuff of which great religious pioneers are made. . . Miss Repplier's biography is a character study rather than a biography. She has very beautifully interpreted the Franciscan and those like him." Nation

"The Diary of Samuel Sewall, of which the present volume is an abridgement, was first published in three volumes by the Massachusetts

Historical Society (1878-1882). It is the most intimate record now available of life in New England during the important period which it covers, and the genius of the author for self-revelation has frequently won him the compliment of a comparison with Samuel Pepys, his English contemporary . . . The Diary is valuable not only for its picture of public life between 1680 and 1730 but for its picture of the author himself in the privacy of his confessional." Editor's note

"There was need of an edition to make it more generally available, and this careful reprint of perhaps a quarter of the whole, retaining the dramatic and illuminating passages, is more than welcome. Mr. Van Doren has done his work with loving care. He has given us an authentic text that carries one back pleasantly into the days that a later generation has too carelessly forgotten. The great diary is still worth any one's time to read." Nation

"Lord Shaftsbury was an English statesman who fought all his life—that is to say, the greater part of the nineteenth century—for certain concrete expressions of social justice. In his youth he saw children of seven working in mills and mines from five in the morning to eight at night. Striving at first almost alone, he had to overcome, in the first place, the mass inertia of British public opinion. In the long run, he succeeded in this, and more than any other British statesman of his time he deserved and won the gratitude of England's poor. This biography is confined chiefly to the more obvious aspects of Shaftesbury's public life." Review of reviews

Preface

"Nearly every page bears evidence of the fact that it is the product of painstaking and exhaustive research, mature thought, and an expert understanding of the subject in hand. There is no attempt to jazz up the narrative, no withholding of criticism, no effusive laudation. Frankness is as characteristic of the author's presentation as it was of Sherman himself. Stephen, Sir Leslie

Maitland, F. W. Life and letters of Leslie Stephen. 1906 Duckworth 18s 92
7-15902

Formerly carried also by Putnam
"Sir Leslie Stephen (1832-1904) was preeminent as a critic, thinker and philosopher and as editor of the 'Dictionary of national biography.' Mr Maitland, who was Stephen's intimate friend for many years and his kinsman by marriage, tells with much detail the story of his life and brings together many of his letters. One of the most interesting chapters is devoted to Stephen's first visit to the United States, as some of the best letters are written to his American friends, notably Charles Eliot Norton, James Russell Lowell and Oliver Wendell Holmes." Sterling (1806-1844) was an English author, a personal friend of Carlyle
"What Carlyle with wonderful art has done is to . . . lead us to believe that we are reading a life of Sterling, while Sterling is really 'vanished' and we are actually reading an extraordinarily interesting history of the places that he lived in, the men he knew . . . and the personality of his redoubtable and admirable friend and biographer, all thrown up on a background of the shortcomings of church and state of England in the nineteenth century." Stern, Mrs Elizabeth Gertrude (Levin)

I am a woman—and a Jew, by Leah Morton [pseud]. 1926 Sears $1 92
26-20742

An interesting autobiography of a Jewish woman who left the Jewish faith and married a Gentile
"As Leah Morton tells her story, she grew up, in the home atmosphere of strict, austere, uncompromising Jewish faith, and in the atmosphere outside the home of the American public school and small college. And in the conflict between them the Jewish faith was the loser. She married a Gentile of serene, devoted heart and exalted spirit. Almost the whole of the book deals with her life from her marriage on to the present time, about twenty years. Its importance and value lie in its frank and sincere depiction of Jewish-Gentile relations." N.Y. Times

My mother and I. 1917 Macmillan $1.50 92

"One of America's foster children, now the head of a cultured American home, writes to tell of what she was and what she has become thru the courage and devotion of the little Jewish mother who has retained thru years of life in an American city her alien speech and customs. The remarkable charm of the book lies in the daughter's faithful picture of the mother and in her appreciation of what the Americanization of the foreign-born means in pain and separation, a gap bridged in this case by love and gratitude." Osbourne, Lloyd. Intimate portrait of R. L. S. 1924 Scribner $1.50 92

24-4068

"This short but delightful personal picture of Robert Louis Stevenson, done by his stepson, appeared in Scribner's magazine Nov. '23-Feb. '24. Covers his life from his 26th year when he first met Osbourne's mother until his early death at Vailima. The portrait brings out all the charm of Stevenson's imaginative mind, and gives a fresh understanding of his colossal literary achievement, the incredible product of a dauntless spirit continually hampered by a frail body." "A biography of the picturesque and dashing J. E. B. Stuart, southern cavalry leader, who was a major general at twenty-eight and whose meteoric career ended when he was killed in action in 1864." Book rev. digest

"Given a professional soldier of Confederate lineage and loyalty, wielding a sprightly, romantic pen on the career of the most alert and high-hearted of cavalry commanders, Captain Thomason's 'Jeb Stuart' results. It is here set forth with engaging phrase and infectious gusto which carry the reader without fatigue except where the tale of campaigns is overladen with names of places, officers, and unit, or with excess of statistics." 1 China—Pol. & govt. 31-31953

"There has been as yet no authoritative biography of Sun Yat-sen. Although he is already a legendary figure to the Chinese, little is known of his life, and there are as many versions of his youth as there are books and magazine articles. Bishop Restarick does not essay a full-length biography. The last few years are given sketchily. But he has done considerable research on Sun's earlier life and all in all this is the best biography extant of the founder of the Chinese republic." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"In 1867 Zack Sutley, a Pennsylvania boy, went to Kansas City for his summer vacation, intending to return to school in the fall. Instead he became a buffalo hunter, a trapper, a stagecoach driver, and finally settled in the Black Hills section of South Dakota. Now a man over eighty he writes his reminiscences of those stirring days when he knew Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson and Jim Bridger." Book rev. digest

"The book is full of adventure, of dangerous encounters with Indians, road agents, deputy sheriffs, and bad men, and all presented with a detail and intimacy that are entirely convincing. If there is a criticism to be offered, it is that the author is too modest, and too often retires his personal adventures behind a curtain of regional history." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 California—Gold discoveries 26-16117

"An extremely picturesque account of Johann August Sutter, who lived on his 'nerve' in the Old World; then went to California and developed some land where gold was finally discovered. Neither for the gold nor for the land did Sutter ever receive any compensation, and he died a poor man, still claiming redress from the government. Besides being a narrative of an unusual career, the book very vividly reproduces the backgrounds of the Old World, and of early California." Providence

"Trobridge's is a 'different' biography of Swedenborg from any of its many predecessors. It is not written as a special plea, either to those definitely inside or outside the body of Swedenborg's followers. It is based on all the painstaking research which appears so plainly in some others' work, but in his is all tucked away. . . . The present book is an American issue of the second English (most popular) paper edition, omitting some few topical and other illusions of interest only to British readers." C. W. Harvey in Foreword

"In this biographical study of Swift Mr Van Doren is chiefly concerned with an interpretation of the man's character and temperament. To this end he recounts Swift's varied experiences, his bitter friendships, his curious associations with Stella and Vanessa. Mr Van Doren makes no attempt to analyze Swift's work except in so far as it throws particular light on some aspect of the great satirist's extraordinary personality." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Van Doren's study of this great but unhappy man is marked by sound information and a great prudence. He arranges his facts in an orderly and seemly manner and makes his narrative interesting from first to last. There is no vain show of learning. The tedious labors that must have gone into more than one passage and the dilligent weighing of conflicting testimony that lies behind the whole are carefully concealed. One gets a smooth-running, extremely readable account of the man. It is a fascinating piece of writing, and it is probably the best biography of Swift ever written." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

S. L. Gwynn's "Life and friendships of Dean Swift" (1933 Holt $3.75; Butterworth, T. 18s) is a longer biography which adds no new material but is accurate and readable

"The publication of the definitive Bonchurch edition of Swinburne's works is made the occasion for a critical biography by Samuel C. Chew, professor of English literature at Bryn Mawr college. This new estimate, while putting its emphasis on Swinburne's lyric poetry, devotes more than the usual amount of space to his tragedies and prose writings." Book rev. digest

In his 'La Jeunesse de Swinburne' he had already published some of the results of his long studies. "His aim is to create a living portrait of the man and the poet 'to disengage the man's reality from his appearance, his spiritual significance from the sentimental picture before which for so long men and women prostrated themselves.' From his long and intimate study of the man he judges the poet and searches the poems for their revelations of the man. "The correspondence of Ellen Terry and Bernard Shaw covered more than a quarter century of their lives and reveals a devoted attachment. They seldom saw each other but their letters were intimate, affectionate, and richly expressive of themselves. Their correspondence also throws an interesting light on the inner history of the London stage at the end of the last century." Book rev. digest

"It is [her] quality of constant sweetness and lightness of touch that irradiates the whole book, and makes her seem in the end a better letter-writer than Shaw himself. G. B. Formerly carried also by Harper under title: Thackeray and his daughter

"This selection covers the period 1837-1919 and includes letters of Lady Ritchie, many hitherto unpublished letters of her father, W. M. Thackeray, and some letters of her mother, Isabella Thackeray. Besides the letters there are extracts from Lady Ritchie's journals and many notes by her on Thackeray family history, including a definite statement about the frequently mentioned request of her father's that no biography of him should ever be written. The whole not only forms a valuable contribution to our knowledge of Thackeray and his talented daughter but also gives much interesting information about people in the literary and artistic circle—the Tennysons, Brownings, Oliphants, Trollopes, etc.—with which the Thackerays were associated." Book rev. digest

"The forty-two letters from Thackeray himself are a most valuable addition to this book both as a fragment of the biography which can never be written, and as stressing the close affinity of temperament existing between father and daughter." Spectator

In the absence of a satisfactory biography of Thackeray, libraries having the Biographical edition of Thackeray's works with the biographical introductions by his daughter, Lady Ritchie, will find these the best substitute for a formal biography

"Biographical sketch of a recently canonized saint. Therese Martin was born in 1873, entered the Carmelite order at the age of 15, died at the age of 24, and some thirty years later, in 1925, was canonized. The author, a non-Catholic, writes with ardent belief in the young girl's spiritual power and Catholic approval of the book is expressed in a long introduction by Michael Williams. Will appeal to mystics of any faith." Wis. bul.

"'A poet writing of a poet,' the son of Wilfrid Meynell, who rescued Francis Thompson from the depths to which drugs and failure had brought him, gives this first clear and wonderfully sympathetic account of that strange and hidden career." Cleveland

Thoreau, Henry David

Familiar letters; ed. with an introd. and notes by F. B. Sanborn. Riverside ed 1896 Houghton $2.50; Constable 92

"Includes apparently all the letters in Emerson's edition of 1865. . . . Mr Sanborn's additional matter is of two kinds—letters of Thoreau's not hitherto published in a book, and a good deal of editorial matter, rich in personal recollection and the fruit of much research. . . . Moreover Mr Sanborn has made good his purpose in undertaking a new collection, namely, to show Thoreau in a less aloof and stoical aspect than Emerson deliberately singled out." Nation

"Mr Sanborn, who died in 1917, was the last surviving member of the Concord group; his friendship with Thoreau covers the ten years before the poet naturalist's death in 1862 and he was for many years thereafter an intimate in the Emerson and Thoreau families." Cleveland

* Heart of Thoreau's journals; ed. by Odell Shepard. 1927 Houghton $3; Allen, G. 12s 6d 92

27-23170

"The 'journals,' covering a period of twenty-four years, proved peculiarly suited to excerpting, and Mr. Shepard has shown excellent judgment in his selections. The result is very satisfying and representative of Thoreau's best work. The selections are arranged chronologically with a short biographical summary prefacing each." Chicago

"In the present form, the journals have the aptitude and pungency of 'Walden' itself, and must soon rival it for those lovers of Thoreau who like to have him always conveniently within reach." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"The biographer has made use of all possible sources of information, has included all the remaining unpublished Thoreau literary material, notably some early essays and has added to the interest of the volume by securing as illustrations about 20 old drawings, prints and family photographs, most of them here used for the first time. The volume is not well arranged and coherent, however, and the author's style is stilted even in his lapses into familiar anecdote. 'The result is therefore, an excellent Thoreau biography in substance but not in form.'" Cleveland

"This absorbing narrative is the most illuminating and valuable contribution we have yet had to the accumulating data of the marital unhappiness which darkened the last years of the great man's life. . . The author seems to have taken a leaf out of her father's book. Her narrative has that eloquent simplicity which carries conviction. It has a wealth of intimate detail, accurately and sympathetically observed, yet it has also that detachment which only great art or great truth alone can provide." Yale review

"Description of court life in China during the rule of the Dowager Empress Tzu-hsi. . . Princess Der Ling describes the elaborate preparation for Her Majesty's trip to Mukden, her wardrobe, the imperial chariot, the meals requiring the work of hundreds of cooks, and other ceremonial details of the journey and the return to Peking." Book rev. digest

"As chief Lady in Waiting to the Empress, the Princess was a part of all the colorful ceremony and endless etiquette with which the throne was enveloped. She tells the story with a simplicity that indicates how matter-of-fact and commonplace to her were customs which to the westerner would seem almost unbelievable." Christian science monitor

"The aim is not new knowledge, but a new interpretation of facts already known. . . . His method is more that of a novelist than of a biographer. . . . Nothing is admitted that might appear dull; nothing is excluded that can add piquancy to the narrative. In temper, Mr Strachey's art is not so much English as French. There is doubtless another Victoria. It yet remains for a finer if less brilliant mind to trace the Queen in all her subtle influences on her age." W. L. Cross's Outline of biography

'whose fame has waxed and waned and waxed again thru the centuries.' A selection of English renderings of Villon's verse by Rossetti, Swinburne, Henley and J. M. Synge is included." Book rev. digest

"D. B. Wyndham Lewis's book on Villon is a brilliant piece of work, superior to most of the same kind in French, and easily, in English, the best and completest biography of the vagabond poet yet written. The book contains very little new information, but it is a fairly complete compilation, of most of the leading facts of the old. "A carefully studied and only slightly biased biography in which the admirable drawing of the political, economic and social background is as valuable as the placing of Webster in true relation to it. Excellent testimony in disproof of traditional beliefs concerning Webster's private life and habits is adduced, and the view of his position on abolition differs from that of Lodge. Illustrations chiefly from portraits and satisfactory index." A. L. A. bkl.

Fuess, C. M. Daniel Webster. 2v 1930 Little $8 92

30-29651

"Without much question Fuess's Daniel Webster becomes for the time being the standard life of this New England son and may put a stop to the flood of superficial, sensational biographies which have clogged the market in the last few years. For it is a sane life which succeeds in portraying Daniel Webster as he was, a hero of the ante-bellum America. . . With all its wealth of scholarship the biography has escaped the curse of being 'dry as dust'; it is intensely readable." Current history

Fortescue, Sir J. W. Wellington. 1925 Williams & Norgate 10s 6d 92

1 Gt. Brit.—History, Military [25-25865]

Formerly carried also by Dodd

"Written by the King's librarian this biography of the Duke of Wellington is devoted almost entirely to his military career and gives little attention to the events of his life after Waterloo. There is a chapter on his work as an administrator and the closing chapter sums up his character and personality." Book rev. digest

"To a great man who has, so to speak, long been buried beneath his own greatness, Mr Fortescue's book brings a new, a different and a better evaluation, and Wellington emerges an even greater man." N.Y. Times

* Guedalla, Philip. Wellington. 1931 Harper $4; Hodder 25s 92

1 Gt. Brit.—History, Military 31-28145

English edition has title: The duke

"A well-proportioned life of Wellington both as soldier and statesman. The hero of Waterloo had nearly forty years to live after that battle and about half the book is devoted to these years of his political life and old age." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Guedalla has made a living character of his Duke. It is not a mere military hero that he presents, or a mere subject for pithy anecdotes; it is a man—and a man whom the reader gradually knows to be great by virtue of his intense normality combined with his success in clearing his mind of cant . . . The one serious defect for many readers in Mr. Guedalla's admirable book is a fault of style." New statesman and Nation

Sir Herbert Maxwell's "Life of Wellington" (2v 1899 Low 21s) is a readable and scholarly work. W. H. Fitchett's "Great duke" (2v 1911 Murray, J. 12s) is a more popular treatment dealing chiefly with the early life of Wellington to the end of the Waterloo campaign

"Lately a new interest has arisen in John Wesley as a man, not as an ecclesiastic, theologian or preacher. Not simply as a religious genius, but as a leader of English people in the perspective of his own times—this is the purpose of this . . . biography of the founder of Methodism. . . . Mr. Lee has shown the great leader's facilities, his human qualities as well as his strong points. It is 'A Book About John Wesley,' not really a thoroughgoing biography." Boston Transcript

"A biography which 'reads like a novel.' . . . The story begins with the marriage of Whitman's parents and dwells long on the significant childhood and boyhood of the poet, showing especially the influence of his much loved mother." Boston
"Mr Rogers has given us another life of Whitman, a vigorous, homespun life, in the main told with a directness and simplicity of which Walt himself would have approved. The best parts are the purely narrative ones; the poorest, the analytical. When Mr Rogers allows the tale to tell itself it achieves distinction of a rugged sort; when he interrupts the flow of events for side comments of his own it is smart and entertaining—all of that but nothing more." 1 William IV, king of Great Britain 2 Gt. Brit.—Hist.—1714-1837 33-2423

"William IV has been called the 'forgotten king of England.' He was sixty-five when he came to the throne and his reign of seven years left little impress. Miss Thompson believes that he deserved more credit than historians and biographers have given him. She champions him as the patriot king, and shows his character and services against the background of his times—a period of English history which included the passage of the Reform bill." Book rev. digest

"It would be impossible to make a hero out of King William IV, but he emerges from Miss Thompson's study as a bluff engaging figure, with a sailor's vigour of language and a sailor's good humour. It is a large canvas crowded with picturesque figures, and Miss Thompson has sketched them in with a skilful hand. In her bibliography she has hit on the admirable notion of distinguishing her authorities, especially memoirs, by their political bias. Her summing up is a model of penetration and fairness." Spectator amount of source material, both official and personal. Volume one covers 1856 to 1890, volume 2, Princeton, 1890-1910, volume 3, Governor, 1910-13, volume 4, President, 1913-14

"Mr. Baker's story will give any scholar who desires to study Wilson and his ways, his time and the thing he tried to do, an honest illumination, a fair survey of Wilson's purpose, of his plans and aims, of his visions and of his own estimate of his achievements. Mr. Baker makes no serious attempt to carp, to criticize, to put in restrictions, qualifications and negations. But neither is he fulsome, never does he flinch before the truth. And even though this is a friend's chronicle, it is still an honest, intelligent story of a great man in great times." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

J. P. Tumulty's "Woodrow Wilson as I know him" (1921 Doubleday, Page o.p. 1933) is another biography using personal data and official reports. The author was Mr. Wilson's private secretary during his years as governor and as president. David Lawrence's "True story of Woodrow Wilson" (1924 Doran o.p. 1933) while more unpartisan than Tumulty is also a readable account by one who knew Wilson for many years from student days at Princeton thru years as press representative at Washington and at the Peace conference

"Mr Kerney . . . has made an interesting and in certain respects an important contribution. . . . He came into contact with his subject at the outset of Wilson's political career and the contact was never entirely broken. . . . The chapters dealing with the first two years of Wilson's political career in New Jersey . . . form the major and the most valuable portion of the book. Mr Kerney writes of Wilson in a friendly and sympathetic tone but also with great frankness." Sat. rev. of lit.

White, W. A. Woodrow Wilson, the man, his times and his task. 1924 Houghton $5, Riverside lib. $1; Benn 21s 92

24-27886

"Chiefly an interpretation of Woodrow Wilson in the light of the various influences of his early life. Written by [one] who, despite his love and admiration, could see Mr Wilson's shortcomings, the book offers a fair and judicious judgment, but does not replace the earlier work by Dodd which gives more attention to his achievements and his place in history." Cleveland

Libraries having the Chronicles of America series will find J. A. Seymour's "Woodrow Wilson and the World war" an interesting study. "The story of Wolsey's extraordinary rise to power and gradual decline. The Catholic author holds that Wolsey, who was in the height of his power when Luther's name was first heard, had it in his power to prevent the break-up of Christendom but failed through ambition and lack of vision—the test was the part he played in the divorce of Henry VIII from Katherine of Aragon. Written in Mr. Belloc's most lucid and brilliant controversial style." Cleveland

Wood, Leonard

Hagedorn, Hermann. Leonard Wood, a biography. 2v 1931 Harper $10; 42s 92

31-24003

"Despite the fact that Mr. Hagedorn looks at all the controversial points of General Wood's career from a prejudiced view-point, this is a distinguished work and will no doubt be considered the definitive biography. The stories of the early years and of the friendship with Roosevelt are especially happy." Pittsburgh

"Inevitably there are points in the narrative of so vigorous a career with which critics must differ. Time would have furnished a greater perspective and a greater possibility of self-detachment for the admiring author. But the story is told with a literary ability, a vividness and a sense of proportion such as to make the biography a notable one, which is likely, in spite of its partisan quality, to stand the test of time rather better than any other biography produced within less than three years of the death of any one of the outstanding figures of the World war." "Reveries over childhood and youth" first published 1916, consists of "fragmentary memories written down to please the author and appealing to those interested in the man or his work." "The trembling of the veil," first published 1922, deals with the author's later life in London, Paris and Dublin and contains much about his literary and artistic friends
"These chapters of a single symmetrical book compose one of the great poetic romances of the world. . . It is a beautiful intensification and heightening of the mental ecstasies and despairs of every artist. "Autobiography of unusual character which relates the author's experiences in war, in captivity in Turkish and other prisons, ending with his return to India and his devotion to the study of Yoga." Pratt quarterly

"Major Yeats-Brown is possessed of that extremely rare faculty of being able to decipher himself without self-consciousness. Quoting from one of his own note-books, he speaks of certain hours when the brain seems to be separate from the body, and it is in just some such mood of detachment that he has written this fascinating volume. He gives the impression of a very acute observer noting down and describing with great vividness in a style of excellent clarity a quantity of most interesting happenings external to himself, but all the time he is carving with deft and quiet strokes that image of himself which, long before the book is done, stands out complete." * Werner, M. R. Brigham Young. 1925 Harcourt $5 92

1 Mormons and Mormonism 25-11448

"A brilliant, authoritative, ironic and yet impartial study, not only of Brigham Young, that picturesque and amazing figure, but of Mormonism itself, and its founder, Joseph Smith. Well-documented with quotations from Brigham Young's 'Journal of discourses.' Portraits and other illustrations." N.Y. libraries

"Mr Werner has done a skillful and a scholarly piece of biographical writing. He has dealt with a vast amount of material and his handling of it is as judicious as it must have been thorough. . . . One may not always agree with Mr. Werner's conclusions or sympathize with his attitude; but it must be admitted that the book is profoundly interesting and gives a vivid picture of an important episode in American history." Gamaliel Bradford in Atlantic bookshelf

Young, Owen D.

Tarbell, I. M. Owen D. Young; a new type of industrial leader. 1932 Macmillan $3; 15s 92

32-26673

"An enthusiastic interpretation of the character and capacity of Owen D. Young and of his career as farmer, lawyer, business organizer, negotiator, and economic adviser." Book rev. digest

"The book will have an appeal for many readers in spite of the somewhat effusive character of her comment—which is not necessarily exaggerated, but conveys, from a literary point of view, a slight impression of redundance." Springfield Republican

Zeppelin, Ferdinand Adolf August Heinrich, graf von

Goldsmith, M. L. Zeppelin. 1931 Morrow $3.50; Cape, J. 7s 6d 92

31-5051

"A popular account of Zeppelin's life and work. His years of effort to perfect the zeppelin are described without technical detail." Providence

Zola, Émile

Josephson, Matthew. Zola and his time. 1928 Macaulay $5 92

28-24120

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1)

"The history of his martial career in letters: with an account of his circle of friends, his remarkable enemies, cyclopean labors, public campaigns, trials, and ultimate glorification." Subtitle

"An excellent biographical presentation of a man whose life was a long struggle, crowned by an enormous material success. The facts speak for themselves clearly and the biographer has permitted them to be their own spokesmen. Zola is not hidden in an undergrowth of speculation on the purpose and aims of the naturalistic novel; neither is he put forward as an example of theoretical phenomena. He is presented as an individual. He struggles, endures poverty, sets himself to an enormous program with the gusto of a giant, fights with time until he achieves his objective, outlives his particular movement and adumbrates another, ignores ridicule, faces danger with the calmness of a fanatic and dies by accident after a long career of prepared endeavors." N.Y. Times

Bibliography: p551-52

Henri Barbusse's "Zola" translated from the French by M. B. Green and F. C. Green (1933 Dutton $3; Dent 10s 6d) presents an impressionistic portrait of the man rather than a formal narrative of his life

92 Series

A few important series of biographies are entered below. These are given to call attention to additional material some of which was entered fully in former editions of the Catalog. No attempt has been made to give complete contents of these series

1 Emblems 2 Flags 34-27112

"A study based on historical documents giving the origin and significance of the state names, nicknames, mottoes, seals, flags, flowers, birds, songs, and descriptive comments on the capitol buildings and on some of the leading state histories, with facsimiles of the state flags and seals." Subtitle

"A useful reference book which brings together much information available heretofore only in scattered sources. Well indexed." Bkl.

929.1 Genealogies

As only fairly large libraries can maintain a genealogical department, it has not been considered necessary to include much material in this section

Two useful tools in libraries undertaking to do work in this field are:

American genealogist being a catalogue of family histories. 5th ed 1900 Munsell $5 A bibliography covering the years 1771-1900, arranged alphabetically

Munsell's genealogical index. 1933 Munsell $4 A guide to family histories in local histories, historical society publications, biographies and genealogies

Jordan, David Starr, and Kimball, Sarah Louise
Your family tree. 1929 Appleton-Century $3; 10s 6d 929.1

1 Royal descent, Families of 2 Gt. Brit.—Geneal. 3 U.S.—Geneal. 29-13692

"The introductory essay by Dr. Jordan discusses the scientific aspects of genealogy. The remainder of the book is devoted to a compilation of genealogic tables which show the descent of well known British and American families." Bkl.

United States. Library of Congress
American and English genealogies in the Library of Congress. 2d ed 1919 Supt. of doc. o.p. 1933 929.1

1 U.S.—Geneal.—Bibl. 2 Gt. Brit.—Geneal. —Bibl. 19-26004

"A list of nearly 7,000 titles, arranged alphabetically by family name, with author index. In the main includes only separately published genealogies, although a few articles in periodicals are included." Mudge

929.4 Names of persons and places

Books on local place names are not included in the main list because the demand for such books will vary in different libraries, according to locality. A comprehensive bibliography of the subject will be found in Paetow's "Guide to the study of medieval history" (listed in class 940.1). As an aid to libraries needing some of this material the following brief list is arranged by place:

California
Sanchez, Mrs N. van de G. Spanish and Indian place names of California. 3d ed 1930 Robertson $3

Canada
Armstrong, G. H. Origin and meaning of place names in Canada. 1930 Macmillan $3
Canada. Geographic board. 18th and 19th reports containing all decisions to July 1927. 2v 1924-1927 and supplements to 19th report 1-12. For price apply to the board. Contains decisions thru July 1930

New England
Douglas-Lithgow, R. A. Dictionary of American-Indian place and proper names in New England; with many interpretations. 1909 Salem press o.p. 1933

New York (State)
Beauchamp, W. M. Aboriginal place names of New York. (N.Y. state museum. Bulletin 108) 1907 N.Y. state museum o.p. 1933
Tooker, W. W. Indian place-names on Long Island and islands adjacent, ed by A. F. Chamberlain. 1911 Putnam o.p. 1933

Oklahoma
Gould, C. N. Oklahoma place names. 1933 Univ. of Okla. press $1

Pennsylvania
Espenshade, A. H. Pennsylvania place names. (Pennsylvania state college studies in history and political science no. 1) 1925 Pa. state college o.p. 1933

Scotland
Mackenzie, W. C. Scottish place-names. 1931 Routledge 15s

Washington (State)
Meany, E. S. Origin of Washington geographic names. 1923 Univ. of Wash. o.p. 1933

Libraries needing a book on English place names will find J. B. Johnston's "Place-names of England and Wales" (1915 Murray, J. 18s) a useful tool, including about 5000 names

Bardsley, Charles Wareing Endell
Dictionary of English and Welsh surnames, with special American instances 1901 Oxford $8.50; 25s 929.4

1 Names, Personal 2-4251

An alphabetical list which attempts to do little more than trace names back to their original forms and to place each in its own particular class

"History of surnames of the British isles" by C. H. L. Ewen (1931 Macmillan $7.50; Routledge 25s) is an account of the origin, evolution, and etymology of some 10,000 British surnames

Bowman, William Dodgson
Story of surnames. 1931 Knopf $2.60; Routledge 7s 6d 929.4

1 Names, Personal 31-19971

A good book in a field which does not interest all small libraries

"The Story of Surnames is a popularly written and somewhat discursive book, with an index of about 2,500 surnames whose origins appear in it. . . Mr. Bowman describes seven classes of surnames:—(1) Place names, as Lincoln. (2) Occupation names, as Smith. (3) Font names, as Johnson. (4) Nicknames, as Brown. (5) Miracle-play names, as Prince, Pope, Priest, Angel, Barron, Fryer. (6) Irish names, of which the three commonest are Murphy, Kelly, and Sullivan. (7) Foreign names, as Toogood (Thungut), Darling (D'Orleans), Diprose (des preaux), Mullins (moulins)." Times (London) lit. sup.

Engeln, Oscar Diedrich von, and Urquhart, Mrs Jane Dalziel (McKelway)
Story key to geographic names. 1924 Appleton-Century $2; 6s 929.4

1 Names, Geographical 24-12394

"A survey of most frequently encountered geographical names giving pronunciation, location, meaning, and the story attached to each. Will satisfy adult curiosity and interest a child in his geographical studies." Chicago

Arranged by countries. Bibliography and source material: pref. p11-12

Loughead, Mrs Flora (Haines) Apponyi
* Dictionary of given names, with their origins and means. 1933 Clark, A. H. $5 929.4

1 Names, Personal 33-32751

"An extensive study of the origins and meanings of given names. About 11,000 forenames are covered, masculine and feminine names being grouped separately. The information given includes language derivation, cross-references to allied forms and spellings in other languages, meanings, historical associations and appropriate literary references and quotations. A special section on names for twins is added and a bibliography of both English and foreign works on names." Book. rev. digest

United States. Geographic board
* Sixth report, 1890 to 1932. 1933 Supt. of doc. 80c 929.4

1 Names, Geographical

Contains all the decisions rendered by the board from 1890 thru June 1932. For this edition several thousand earlier decisions for features and places in the United States, Alaska and the Philippine islands have been amplified and brought up to date. Under each entry is given the approved form of name, location and form not approved. Pronunciation is indicated where necessary. There are ample cross references

A list of some 2,500 names published by the board in 1932 under title "First report on foreign geographic names" is now incorporated with the domestic names in the Sixth report in one alphabetical arrangement but may also be purchased separately (Supt. of doc. pa 10c)

Weekley, Ernest
Romance of names. 4th ed 1928 Dutton $2.10; Murray, J. 6s 929.4

1 Names, Personal [14-30266]

"In successive editions small alterations have been made . . . This new edition represents a further careful revision of the text." Preface to 4th edition

An inquiry into the origin of our surnames. The author seeks "to steer a middle course between a too learned and a too superficial treatment and to show how surnames have been formed and developed during the progress of the centuries. . . Professor Weekly divides surnames into four classes: first, those derived from a sire or an ancestor, as Richards; second, those from places or residence, as Moore; third, those from occupation, as Taylor; fourth, those from bodily attributes or characteristics, as Long." Boston Transcript

"He presents this information in a scholarly and attractive way, so that his book is extremely diverting as well as instructive." N.Y. Times

Surnames. 2d ed 1917 Dutton $2.10; Murray, J. 6s 929.4

1 Names, Personal 27-21736

In the second edition and 1927 reprint only minor corrections and additions have been made. Bibliography

"The present volume treats much more completely, and hence more ponderously, of certain groups of surnames which I have investigated with some approach to thoroughness. . . . Its relation to the 'Romance of names' is that of a more or less erudite treatise to a primer, matter which in the former book was dismissed in a paragraph or two being here expanded into a chapter . . . The index contains some six thousand existing surnames, including a certain proportion of French and German names and a sprinkling from other countries." Preface

Sabine Baring-Gould's "Family names and their stories" (1910 Lippincott o.p. 1933) is another interesting account of Anglo-Saxon, French, Scotch and Irish surnames

Yonge, Charlotte Mary

History of Christian names. new ed rev 1884 Macmillan o.p. 1933 929.4

1 Names, Personal 4-22496

A useful book of reference. It contains a glossary of Christian names, pref. p19-143, which gives the meaning and refers to the body of the book for a full description

929.6 Heraldry

Fox-Davies, Arthur Charles

Heraldry. 1927 Hitchcock o.p. 1933 929.6

1 Heraldry 26-6538

"A complete explanation of how to obtain a coat of arms, of how to use one correctly, and of the heraldic rules as they are being observed at the present time." Subtitle

Hope, William Henry St John

Grammar of English heraldry. (Cambridge manuals of science and literature) 1913 Macmillan $1; Cambridge univ. press 3s 6d 929.6

1 Heraldry 14-138

"This little book begins with the origin and grammar of heraldry, and proceeds with its subsequent history. It includes explanations of heraldic language, which was clear enough in early rolls and records, but became obscure and elaborate during the decadence of heraldry in the Tudor period. . . . The volume is well illustrated, and should prove most valuable to beginners in the subject." Athenaeum

The author's "Heraldry for craftsmen and designers," an excellent book with beautiful illustrations, is entered in class 745, alphabet 1

Scott-Giles, Charles Wilfrid

* Romance of heraldry. 1929 Dutton $3.50; Dent 10s 929.6

1 Heraldry 30-26267

"In this popular study of heraldry, the author traces the origin of heraldic emblems, and shows how historic events have left their record in the arms and devices of various families. Some of these coats-of-arms are collected here, arranged in rough chronological order and explained in non-technical language." Book rev. digest

"The author has an advantage over many writers upon history and heraldry in that he has been able to illustrate his own pages with vigorous draughtsmanship. . . There is a pleasantly imaginative touch, and a welcome freshness of treatment in Mr. Scott-Giles's handling of his subject; his book should not only afford an admirable introduction to a knowledge of heraldry, but prove an illuminating companion to a more formal history book, and should appeal both to students and masters of the craft armorial." Times (London) lit. sup.

929.7 Decorations of honor

Armiger, pseud.

Titles and forms of address; a guide to their correct use. 2d ed 1929 Macmillan $1.25 929.7

1 Gt. Brit.—Peerage 2 Titles of honor and nobility 3 Etiquet 4 Names—Pronunciation [A32-2546]

First edition 1918 published under title: Titles, being a guide to the right use of British titles and honours. Also obtainable in a slightly revised and enlarged edition in England (1932 Black, A. & C. 3s 6d)

Contains also pronunciation of some English proper names

Wyllie, Robert E.

Orders, decorations and insignia, military and civil. 1921 Putnam $6; 54s 929.7

1 Decorations of honor 2 U.S.—Army—Medals, badges, decorations, etc. 3 U.S.—Navy—Medals, badges, decorations, etc. 21-4556

Gives a brief history of medals and decorations, the nomenclature, classification and method of wearing them, then describes military orders, decoration, etc. of the United States, Great Britain, France, Belgium, Monaco, Portugal, Italy, Eastern Europe and Asia. Includes information on shoulder insignia, insignia of rank and the insignia and colors of various branches of American service, during the European war in particular. With 367 excellent illustrations in color and black and white

929.8 Coats of arms. Clans

Scottish clans and their tartans. 20th ed 1928 Johnston 3s 6d 929.8

1 Scotland—Geneal. 2 Clans and clan system 3 Tartans [1-16392]

Formerly carried also by Scribner

There are 96 colored plates giving the tartans of all the principal clans each accompanied by brief historical sketches on opposite pages. Unsatisfactory binding

Some libraries will prefer Frank Adam's "Clans, septs and regiments of the Scottish Highlands" (2d ed 1924 Johnston 25s) which is also reliable and is published in a more satisfactory make-up. It has 114 colored plates of tartans and coats of arms

Wilson, Leonard

Coat of arms, crest and great seal of the United States of America. 1928 The author o.p. 1933 929.8

1 U.S.—Seal 29-4486

"A description of the various details of the national insignia and a discussion of the symbolism of its design." Bkl.

With illustrations and a glossary

929.9 Flags

"Flags of the United States and other countries," published by the U. S. Hygrographic office (1928 The office pa 50c) is a useful little pamphlet made up of 12 colored plates containing special United States flags and flags of all the different countries

Gordon, William John

Manual of flags. rev by V. Wheeler-Holohan. 1933 Warne $8.50; 21s 929.9

1 Flags 34-13218

Incorporates and brings up to date the material formerly contained in "Flags of the world" first published 1915. Each country is now entered in alphabetic order with history and description of the flags. Full page color plates, line drawings of coats of arms, code letters and aircraft markings are given. Municipal flags, yacht flags, and signal flags are included

"Flags of the world" by Byron McCandless and G. H. Grosvenor (1917 Nat. geographic soc. o.p. 1933) contains full color illustrations of 1197 flags, and black and white illustrations of 300 more. First published as the flag number of the "National geographic magazine," October-November, 1917

Johnson, Willis Fletcher

National flag. 1930 Houghton $2 929.9

1 Flags 30-25716

"A chronological history of the American flag, including flags of the 'Lost Cause'—the Confederate Stars and Bars and the Confederate Battle Flag. Appendix I gives valuable information on the special American flags used for individual officials and branches of the public service. Appendix II contains the code of the flag, for observance by civilians. Colored illustrations." Cleveland

Robert Phillips' "American flag, its uses and abuses" (1930 Stratford $2) is another useful book

Kerrick, Harrison Summers

"Flag of the United States," your flag and mine. 1925 Humphries $2 929.9

1 Flags A26-326

"A contribution to the authentic knowledge concerning our national flag, its history, correct display, and recognition. Material compiled from study of varied sources. Profusely illustrated in color and from photographs and sketches." N.Y. state lib.

Breasted, James Henry
* Conquest of civilization. 1926 Harper $5; 18s 930

1 Civilization—Hist. 2 History, Ancient 26-27481

"A slightly revised and more attractive edition of the author's 'Ancient times' published in 1916 by Ginn and still available at $2. The format has been much improved and many new illustrations and maps added. Questions and bibliography, which appear in the 'Ancient times' edition are omitted. The book is issued with Robinson's 'The ordeal of civilization' as a two volume work with title 'The human adventure.' Libraries having 'Ancient times' will not need to replace it with this." Standard catalog for high school libraries

"From its astonishingly beautiful frontispiece to its last footnote, the book is of absorbing interest. . . The reader is not only enticed to read, but compelled to remember. Dr. Breasted has succeeded in saturating the whole volume with his own fascinating personality." School arts magazine

* Dawn of history. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 1911 Holt $1.25, student's ed $1; Butterworth, T. 2s 6d 930

1 History, Ancient 12-133

"The book is short, and brilliantly written. . . Here the reader will find in outline all the information he requires about the dawn of civilization in the Eastern Mediterranean, and in the great valleys of the Nile, the Tigris, and the Euphrates. The later chapters deal with the earliest authentic history of Italy and Central and Northern Europe. It is a book which cannot be rated too highly." W. W. Davies's How to read history

Contents: v1 The Orient, Greece, The Hellenistic period; v2 Rome

"Professor Rostovtzeff has always been more interested in the economic and social aspects of human life at various periods than in the narrative framework of history, and his generalizations on these topics always stimulate thought; he writes, too, of the history of art with intimate knowledge, and he is to be congratulated on finding in the Clarendon Press a publishing institution which gives him without stint the illustrations which he needs in order to bring the externals of ancient life before the reader's eyes. The selection is excellent; we miss little that we could expect to find." Times (London) lit. sup.

Also available in other one volume editions (Dutton $2.50; McKay $2.50). The desirable two volume edition, translated by Whiston and published by Scribner and in England by Chatto, is now, 1933, out of print. An edition to be completed in 8 volumes translated by H. St. J. Thackeray is being published in the Loeb classical library (v 1-4 Harvard univ. press ea $2.50; Heinemann ea 10s)

"The native Jewish historian Josephus wrote the history of his own nation in the closing years of the first century. He had many qualifications for the task. He was of both royal and sacerdotal lineage, had been educated in the strictest school of the Pharisees, and to this had united a thorough knowledge of the pagan wisdom of Greece and Rome. His style is easy, graceful, and refined, rising occasionally to a high pitch of eloquence. . . His 'History' must be read with caution, though on the whole he is sincere, well-informed, and veracious." W. W. Davies's How to read history

1 Jews—Hist. 33-10960

"The new work of Josef Kastein is not so much a history of the Jews as an eloquent, philosophic, and on the whole orthodox discourse on their history. The author has a gift for generalization, which means that even when his facts are weak, as they occasionally are, his power of persuasion is strong. He is always plausible, he is sometimes magnificent." Nation

1 Jews—Hist. [32-19383]

"The book begins long before the appearance of the Israelites, with a detailed study of the historical and topographical setting upon which the nation was soon to project itself; then gives an account of the people and civilization of Canaan, before its conquest by Israel, to indicate the racial and cultural merger that was to be effected; then takes up the history of the tribes before the settlement in Canaan; following with its historical career and the development of its religion and culture up to the eighth century when the Assyrian invasions began. . . . It is one of the more readable volumes in The History of Civilization Series." Nation

Margolis, Max Leopold, and Marx, Alexander

History of the Jewish people. 1927 Jewish pub. $4; Routledge 21s 933

1 Jews—Hist. 27-6890

In this history of the Jewish people "the method chosen is one of centres: Palestine, the eastern centre, the West-European, then Holland, Poland, Russia, and the rest, and finally the age of emancipation with its centres as far apart as America and Palestine again. The life of the Jew, moral, mental, and physical, is traced in relation to these centres, and the rise of Judaism apart from national implications is described up to the point where the Jew returned, at least in part, to his national home." Dial

"Of its kind this book is an excellent specimen, and to be commended. The facts are accurate, and the deductions justifiable. The maps, tables and bibliographies will prove of very great service. One criticism only need be made—namely that there is too much emphasis on Zionism as the consummation of the future hopes of the Jews." Times (London) lit. sup.

History of Palestine and Syria to the Macedonian conquest. 1931 Scribner $7.50; 36s 933

1 Palestine—Hist. 2 Syria—Hist. 31-32522

"This companion volume to Breasted's 'Egypt' and Olmstead's 'History of Assyria' is a closely packed, careful history that goes back to prehistoric times and carries the history of Palestine and Syria down to the Macedonian conquest. It has been composed directly from source material and incorporates many quotations from ancient writers. Excellent illustrations. [Maps]" Bkl.

"This book is beautifully bound, beautifully printed, and beautifully and appropriately illustrated. The intrinsic quality corresponds, for it is a work of sound scholarship, and yet planned for 'that wider public which desires to know how the Sacred Book has become a new Sacred Book in the light of the ancient near Eastern history.' ‡ History of the Jews. 1930 Knopf $4; Allen, G. 21s 933

"'A History of the Jews' gives the complete story from the emergence of the Jews into history down to the present day. Dr. Sachar retells the Old Testament story in the light of modern historical research, and separates with the skill of a scientist truth from fable. By this method it is possible to get a vital conception of the emergence of the Jewish nation out of the tribal movements, the development of its laws and the manner of its life, and its final absorption by its powerful neighbours." Olmstead, Albert Ten Eyck

History of Assyria. 1923 Scribner $7.50; 36s 935

1 Assyria—Hist. 2 Civilization, Assyro-Babylonian 23-17167

"To write such a history properly and aptly illustrate it is an immense labor, demanding a knowledge of the language, a familiarity with all that is published on the subject, and a personal acquaintance with the country. Professor A. T. Olmstead possesses these essentials in no small degree, and his history offers a good, solid presentation of the material to scholars." Times (London) lit. sup.

"It would be difficult to exaggerate the importance of this book. . . It is superbly printed, richly, appropriately, and even wisely illustrated. The book deserves all that has been lavishly spent upon it, nor can one think of more that might have been offered save for a map worthy of the rest of the equipment. . . The book is well written, in sound, workmanlike English." Amer. hist. rev.

Roman world. (History of civilization) 1928 Knopf $6.50; Routledge 16s 937

Translated by E. A. Parker

Concerns the Roman empire, as a whole, two-thirds of the book being devoted to the various provinces—their government, history, and social and economic conditions. Maps

"This is the fullest account of the Empire which has appeared in English since the translation of Mommsen's two volumes on the provinces, nearly fifty years ago. It is enriched by the discoveries that have been made in the meantime, and its excellent bibliography brings the sources up to date." Times (London) lit. sup.

Ferdinand Lot's "End of the ancient world and the beginnings of the middle ages" (1931 Knopf $5; Routledge 21s) is another scholarly volume in the History of civilization series treating of the decay of Rome from the accession of Diocletian to the fall of the Merovingian dynasty. Economic history of Rome. (Johns Hopkins univ. Semicentennial publications) 2d ed rev 1927 Johns Hopkins o.p. 1933 937

1 Rome—Econ. condit. 27-2332

In this edition seven new chapters have been added which carry the story into the fourth century of the Empire

"Among the best features of Professor Frank's book, which is characterized throughout by knowledge, precision of statement, and acuteness of observation, as well as by vigor of style and vitality of thought, is the skill with which he has utilized the archaeological sources of information." American economic review

"Social & economic history of the Roman empire," by M. I. Rostovtsev (1926 Oxford $13; 45s) is an important and brilliant study of a scholarly nature. Contains 140 pages of bibliographical notes

History of Rome. (American historical ser.) 1923 Holt $4.50, student's ed $3.50; Cape, J. 18s 937

1 Rome—Hist. 23-2349

"With an eye to the needs of college classes, the book is intended primarily for general readers who are interested in the political and cultural fortunes of the ancient republic, and therefore aims rather to tell a consecutive story than to compile a reference book of paragraphed facts. . . The period of Cicero is treated with greater detail than other periods because Cicero's correspondence furnishes material from which to picture accurately Rome's everyday political and social life. Maps, bibliography, index." Book rev. digest

"It is inevitable that in a comprehensive work of this type opinions will be found which are bound to meet with disagreement from other scholars, but these will not prevent its being welcomed as a thoughtful and scholarly, as well as a very readable, work." Amer. hist. rev.

A good American edition which is unfortunately out of print, 1933, is the one published in 6 volumes by Harper. It is also obtainable from Methuen in 7 volumes at 7s 6d each and in the Everyman's library (6v Dutton ea 70c, lib. binding ea $1; Dent ea 2s, lib. binding ea 3s) and in other editions

"What the Roman empire was, after it had attained to its full strength and maturity, and how its western division verged gradually to its decline and downfall, is only half the story; the other and much longer half shows how its fall was followed by long centuries of life in the eastern, and a revival, in new conditions, of its existence in the western, world. And more than this . . . Complete, lucid and accurate, Gibbon, finally, is one of the great masters of English prose. His power of narrative is at least equalled by his gift of argumentative statement, and, in all parts of his work, his style is one which holds the reader spellbound by its stately dignity, relieved by a curious subtlety of 'nuance,' and which, at the same time, is the writer's own." countries bordering on the Mediterranean, and the consolidation of the whole under the dictatorship of Julius Caesar. Religious, political, and social institutions are fully dealt with; and the causes of the marvellous success of the little City-State carefully analysed. The style is animated, vivid, and dignified, abounding in epigram and in passages of rare eloquence and beauty. . . In his use of authorities Mommsen was scrupulously careful. No stone was left unturned in the search after truth. Impartial and unbiased he certainly is not!" W. W. Davies's How to read history

The author's "Provinces of the Roman empire from Caesar to Diocletian; tr. by W. P. Dickson" (2v 1909 Macmillan 25s) is a scholarly and valuable work in its field

"If it is asked what this book achieves that is not achieved by such established textbooks as those of Professor Myres and the late Dr. Wells, the answer will be that it is chiefly a matter of adjustment. . . Mr. Robinson, by a careful adjusting and painting of the background, reduces events to their proper status; his instruction is never perfunctory or stale, and it naturally follows that his history is the more penetrative. . . Nor does he draw on his own imagination unduly; much of his colour is obtained by happy quotations from ancient authors." Times (London) lit. sup.

"For a long time the Etruscans have been invested with a false mystery, but the author's exposition of their origins and development blows away most of the mist without taking away from the strange dark interest of this remarkable people. He sweeps away the nebulous assumptions which bring the Etruscans over the Alps as Barbarians similiar to the Villanovans whom they civilised, and he accepts the account of Herodotus which tells us that the first townships were founded by an expedition from Lydia under the leadership of a king's son, who may have been the man whom the Egyptians called Turscha—in which case the Etruscans had racial affinities with the Achaeans." In this one volume edition the editors have omitted the Legendary period, the story of the Tyrants, and the Fourth century and Macedonian period and further compression has been made. The part dealing with the Athenian democracy is retained almost in full. Supplementary notes have been added. Over 800 pages of fine print. The unabridged work is obtainable in 12 volumes in Everyman's library (Dutton ea 70c, lib. binding ea $1; Dent ea 2s, lib. binding ea 3s)

"This great work still remains the best starting point for the serious study of Greek history in the classical period. Epigraphic evidence is of course neglected, for epigraphy was in its infancy in Grote's day. . . But after all ninety per cent of available information regarding fifth and fourth century Greece is derived from literary sources which

"This is an exceedingly good book, of inestimable value to student and history-lover . . . Full of minutiae as to social customs, character study of important individuals, legislative procedures, &c., it is at the same time generously conceived as a whole. In consequence, the many Mediterranean civilizations are made real to us, and we are shown, clearly and concisely, the ethnological and ethnographical interworkings which make a study of Classical history so complex and baffling when treated piecemeal." "An introduction to the history of western civilization from the dissolution of the Roman empire to the present time." Subtitle
In 1902 the author published "Introduction to the history of western Europe," a new brief edition of which appeared in 1931 (Ginn $3.40) Altho the author describes "Medieval and modern times" as "a very careful and thoroughgoing revision" of the "Introduction to the history of western Europe," a comparison of the two editions published in 1931 shows very few changes. Both cover the same period and contain many of the same illustrations and maps
In 1926 appeared "Ordeal of civilization" (Harper $5) which is vol. 2 of a set called "The human adventure." The "Booklist" says that this is practically the same text as "Medieval and modern times," with the addition of 8 pages at the beginning and a final chapter, "The present trend of human affairs." Thus it seems clear that a library would not need both. Issued as a companion volume to the "Conquest of civilization" by J. H. Breasted listed in class 930

"Professor Thompson's valuable study of the period from 300 to 1500 A. D., which appeared originally as two volumes, is here condensed into a single tome, not too bulky for practical use . . . The new volume includes all of the exceptionally fine maps made by the famous Leipzig cartographer, Brockhaus; a few black and white maps and new charts appear here which were not in the earlier edition. Chapters on Mediaeval England have also been added. The great merit of Prof. Thompson's study is its fine proportion between the various elements combining to produce the civilization which we call modern . . . Robinson, James Harvey, and Beard, Charles Austin

* History of Europe; our own times. rev ed 1932 Ginn $1.96 940.28

1 Europe—Hist.—1789-1900 2 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 27-14881

"The eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, the opening of the twentieth century, the World war, and recent events." Subtitle

A companion volume to Breasted and Robinson's "History of Europe, ancient and medieval" (class 940), the two volumes being based on the authors' "Outlines of European history," partly rewritten. In the present edition the text has been slightly revised. The second volume of the "Outlines of European history" from the seventeenth century to the present time is also issued in an enlarged and revised edition (1927 Ginn $2.12; 10s 6d). A small library will probably not need both sets since they are intended to serve the same purpose. Both sets received about equally high votes for inclusion here

Schapiro, Jacob Salwyn

‡ Modern and contemporary European history (1815-1928); under the editorship of J. T. Shotwell. rev ed 1931 Houghton $5, student's ed $3.75; Allen, G. 15s 940.28

1 Europe—Hist.—1789-1900 2 Europe—Civilization 3 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 31-9606

College text first published 1923. Enlarged in the revised edition, 1929, to give more space to the period after 1870. In 1931 a 10 page chapter on recent events thru 1930 was added and the table of rulers brought up to date

"Admirably suited for the general reader, who wishes an elementary knowledge of European affairs of the last century. It is an excellent introduction for the student." Boston Transcript

Sontag, Raymond James

European diplomatic history, 1871-1932. (Century hist. ser.) 1933 Appleton-Century $3.50 940.28

1 Europe—Politics 33-4046

"The purpose of the author is to sketch briefly the diplomatic background of the existing relations between the great European powers. The development of these relations from 1871 to today is clearly outlined, events being followed in their chronological order as they developed. Suggested readings are provided, maps, and an index." Book rev. digest

"Written by a competent scholar, this text gives a reliable survey of European diplomacy in the period covered. On the whole, one of the best introductory accounts." Foreign affairs

Swain, Joseph Ward
Beginning the twentieth century; a history of the generation that made the war. 1933 Norton $4.75; Allen, G. 18s 940.28

1 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 2 Europe—Politics 3 U.S.—Hist.—20th cent. 4 European war, 1914-1918 5 World politics 33-11240

"The first part of this book takes up the historical background of the Great War in each of the principal countries of Europe and America. Part two discusses the international relations of the period, and part three reviews the course of the war. Bibliography. Index." Book rev. digest

"Unusual in that, though a history, the author is no slave to chronology; unusual also in that the volume is written in a decidedly lucid and pleasing style." Amer. pol. sci. rev.

Turner, Edward Raymond
Europe since 1789. 1924 Doubleday, Doran $3.50 940.28

1 Europe—Hist.—1789-1900 2 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 24-6907

"This book is a revision and enlargement of the author's 'Europe: 1789-1920.' The author has brought the narrative down to the beginning of 1924, thus covering important developments in the field of international relations, and has also treated more extensively several topics included in the original work." Review of reviews

"As a whole, Professor Turner's work is stamped by scrupulous fairness and a capacity for seeing and lucidly presenting those vaster movements on which the separate incidents are as little surface waves above the measured swell of the ocean." Outlook

Europe since 1870. rev 1927 Doubleday, Doran $3.50 940.28

1 Europe—Hist.—1789-1900 2 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 27-3480

This volume is a revision adding nearly 200 pages to the original edition published in 1921. The added pages are mostly devoted to problems of post-war Europe

"On the whole the book is scholarly, impartial, and comprehensive, and is an excellent introduction to a course on the World War." Amer. hist. rev.

The author's "Europe since 1789" includes a study of the period covered by this book

940.3 European war

General history

"History of the Great war," by John Buchan (4v 1922 Houghton $20; Nelson 100s) will be useful when something more than the brief one-volume histories is wanted. It embraces all phases of the War but treats England's part with especial fullness. Contains many good maps. Another longer history which is now, 1933, out of print is the "History of the World war," by F. H. Simonds (5v 1917-20 Doubleday, Page). Partly written during the progress of the War by a leading commentator on military operations

Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer
* World crisis. [one volume ed] 1931 Scribner $5; Butterworth, T. 21s 940.3

1 European war, 1914-1918 2 European war, 1914-1918—Gt. Brit. 31-26572

The four volume set is still obtainable from Scribner (v1-2 ea $6.50, v3-4 set $10; Butterworth, T. v1-2 ea 30s, v3-4 set 42s) A fifth volume entitled "Aftermath" covering the years 1918-1928, issued 1929 (Scribner $5; Butterworth, T. 30s) is not contained in the one volume edition

Contains the main part of the author's four volume history of the war "The World crisis." The author has "recast the whole account so as to present a compendious form . . . The key documents are reprinted in their integrity. He has however pruned a mass of technical detail and some personal justifications which do not seem . . . so important now as they did ten years ago." Preface

Clemenceau, Georges Eugène Benjamin
Grandeur and misery of victory; tr. by F. M. Atkinson. 1930 Harrap 21s 940.3

1 European war, 1914-1918 2 Versailles, Treaty of, June 28, 1919 3 Foch, Ferdinand 30-10802

Formerly carried also by Harcourt

"In which Clemenceau answers some of the charges levelled against him by Foch, using letters and documents to prove his case. His comment on Foch is of interest, and he throws light on events of the war and of the treaty negotiations." Providence

"The Clemenceau of 1918, the Clemenceau of 1870, live again in these tense, fiery pages. Beyond Foch, he attacks Poincaré, Caillaux, Briand, Germany, England, America: Clemenceau contra mundum. It is war, but it is magnificent." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Gibbs, Sir Philip Hamilton
* Now it can be told. 1920 Harper $3 940.3

1 European war, 1914-1918—Gt. Brit. 2 European war, 1914-1918 20-5994

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint in the Star series (Garden City pub. co. $1). Formerly published in England under title: Realities of war

"The purpose of this book is to get deeper into the truth of this war and of all war—not by a more detailed narrative of events, but rather as the truth was revealed to the minds of men, in many aspects, out of their experience; and by a plain statement of realities, however painful, to add something to the world's knowledge out of which men of good-will may try to shape some new system of relationship between one people and another, some new code of international morality." Preface

"He has a keen eye for the telling detail that impresses a picture indelibly on the mind, and his quick sympathy with all who suffer helps him to keep the human side of the great tragedy foremost in our thoughts. His style is sufficient without being distinguished." Spectator

Hayes, Carlton Joseph Huntley
‡ Brief history of the Great war. 1920 Macmillan $2.75 940.3

1 European war, 1914-1918 20-8603

"After giving in due order the various events and phases of the war the last chapter—A new era begins—is devoted to the settlement, the losses and the landmarks of the new era. The three appendices contain: The covenant of the League of nations; American reservations to the treaty of Versailles; and Proposed agreement between the United States and France. The book contains a select bibliography, an index, ten maps in color and numerous sketch maps." Book rev. digest

An excellent single-volume history of the Great war. "It is one of the very few which deserve serious consideration by professional students of history. It is written with a high degree of scientific responsibility, and not for mere purposes of journalism or propaganda." Amer. hist. rev.

"Lloyd George remained continuously in the British cabinet thruout the War, as Chancellor of the Exchequer, Minister of Munitions, Secretary of State for War and Prime Minister. The highest office he held from 1916 to 1922. The first volume of his memoirs, which will be published in four volumes, deals with the causes of the storm and the crash, the financial crisis, the fight for munitions leading to the establishment of the Ministry of Munitions, and the early strategy of the war. In the second volume of his memoirs the author carries on his story from the time of the Serbian collapse to his premiership at the end of 1916." Book rev. digest

"Obviously Mr. Lloyd George is giving his own version of events, advancing his personal view of what is often dubious and controversial, and seeing himself as hero, saint, and martyr where critics have seen him as villain of the piece. Just as obviously he has intact his angers, prejudices, personal enmities and—more rarely—his enthusiasms. . . It is these qualities and these defects which make this in all the maze of war books the liveliest and most informative." Saturday rev.

Montague, Charles Edward

1 European war, 1914-1918 [22-9404]

A reprint of a book first published by Brentano's in 1929

"The author's theme is that the fine fervor of devotion, with which the rank and file of the British soldiery entered upon the 'great war,' was destroyed by the very ones they had trusted to share their 'faith and love and courage.' The processes of disenchantment are portrayed with an unflinching candor, a keenness of humor and vision, and a distinctive excellence of style." N.Y. state lib.

"His book is a book of passion that was not allowed to escape prematurely into print—of war-emotion recollected in as much tranquillity as is possible to a soldier who feels that his side 'won the fight and lost the prize.' . . . Mr. Montague has certainly a great gift of loathing. But he does not vituperate with adjectives but with evidence." New statesman

Henry Williamson's "Wet Flanders plain" (1929 Dutton $2; Faber 5s) is another post war book, grounded in disillusion, which becomes a poetical plea for peace

Genesis of the World war. new and rev ed 1929 Knopf $1; Allen, G. 21s 940.31

1 European war, 1914-1918—Causes [27-7393]

"Professor Barnes sets himself out to prove that of all the Great Powers engaged in the war Germany was in fact the least to blame. The main guilt—almost the sole guilt—he attributes to France and Russia as nations, and to M. Poincaré in France and Sazanov in Russia as the men chiefly implicated." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 European war, 1914-1918—Causes 2 Europe—Politics 3 World politics [26-7923]

"The author's thesis is that whenever and wherever the anarchy of armed states exists war becomes inevitable and that 'modern war, with all the resources of science at its disposal, has become incompatible with the continuance of civilization.' He analyzes the causes and motives of war and in particular the series of events and general situation which led up to the Great war. [Bibliography]" Book rev. digest

1 European war, 1914-1918—Causes 2 Europe—Politics 30-30528

Published in 1928 in two volumes and now issued in a cheaper one volume edition. The revision of the text, made necessary by the publication of hitherto unpublished documents, consists of rewritten passages, new bibliographical footnotes and supplementary notes at the end of the first volume

"In general the most authoritative work upon the origin of the World War. It is based upon an unrivaled knowledge of the diplomatic correspondence and the personal narratives of leading diplomatists, in method and in spirit it conforms closely to the highest standards of historical investigation and exposition. The style is direct, clear, and interesting." Guide to hist. lit.

* Recent revelations of European diplomacy. 1930 Longmans $3; 7s 6d 940.31

First published 1927. The 1930 edition contains a supplementary chapter on the revelations of 1928-29

"Valuable survey of the diplomatic revelations published from 1914 onwards . . . He devotes special attention to those produced in Germany and Austria, France and Italy, as well as Great Britain and America, but he does not overlook Belgium and the Balkans. His method is to describe the contents of a book briefly, to single out any statements of special interest and to give his own opinion." Spectator

Ludwig, Emil

July '14; tr. from the German by C. A. Macartney. 1929 Putnam $3.50; 10s 6d 940.31

1 European war, 1914-1918—Causes 29-28806

"An exposition of the origins of the World War, written without bias and backed up by documentary evidence. The author holds that the war-guilt belongs to all Europe, and the incompetent kings and statesmen who allowed themselves to be driven into war are shown up in brilliant pen-portraits. A distinctly readable and substantially accurate book. Illustrated [with photographs]." Ontario library review

Renouvin, Pierre
Immediate origins of the war (28th June—4th August 1914); tr. by T. C. Hume. 1928 Yale univ. press o.p. 1933 940.31

1 European war, 1914-1918—Causes 28-4513

The author "has made a thorough study of the voluminous German, Austrian, Russian, and British official documents as well as of the great mass of memoirs and unofficial material relating to the war collected at the Musée de la Guerre." Charles Seymour in Preface

"Whether one agrees or not completely in this identification of Germany and Austria, one can not fail to admire the clarity, grasp, and judiciousness with which M. Renouvin has sifted the mass of documentary evidence, punctured and discarded untenable legends and written what seems to the reviewer quite the best comprehensive treatment in any language which he has read on this difficult and thorny subject." Two additional narratives tracing the origins of the war, written by men who held positions of responsibility in the years preceding the war, are: "Heading for the abyss" by Karl Max fürst von Lichnowsky (1928 Payson & Clarke o.p. 1933) and "Genesis of the war" by H. H. Asquith, 1st earl of Oxford and Asquith (1923 Cassell o.p. 1933)

Scott, Jonathan French
Five weeks; the surge of public opinion on the eve of the Great war. 1927 Day $2.50 940.31

1 European war, 1914-1918—Public opinion 27-4652

"This covers the period in 1914 between the murder of the Archduke of Austria and the declaration of war. The author believes that public opinion was the important factor in precipitating the conflict." Cleveland

"His book is free from prejudice; it is the product of careful research. It offers no entirely new considerations in regard to respective guilt, but its novel treatment of the 1914 crisis is extremely interesting." Literary rev.

1 Paris. Peace conference, 1919 2 Wilson, Woodrow 22-23112

"Authoritative account, based upon Mr Wilson's papers, of the Versailles conference. A defense of his policies and action, it is by no means a panegyric. A third volume gives the text of 69 important documents illustrating and enforcing the narrative. While most valuable historical material, this volume is hardly needed by small libraries." N.Y. state lib.

1 Versailles, Treaty of, June 28, 1919 2 European war, 1914-1918—Territorial questions —Germany 3 Europe—Politics 4 Germany —Bound. 33-24861

"The author has long been one of the chief chroniclers and interpreters of Germany in Great Britain, and he has apparently devoted a number of years to digesting the vast amount of material dealing with the making of the treaty, with the historical grounds adduced for the decisions that were made by the Big Four and with the execution of the plebescite provisions. Everywhere he finds the grossest injustice, and believes that Germany is entitled to seize every opportunity to sabotage the treaty and eventually to redress her wrongs—by war if necessary." Current history

"It is frankly for the Germans that Mr. Dawson presents the case—a case prepared with that combination of clarity and documentation which has made him one of the outstanding English speaking authorities upon post-war Germany." Christian science monitor

1 Paris. Peace conference, 1919 2 Versailles, Treaty of, June 28, 1919 21-8012

"Based on a series of speeches given in 1920 at the public forum in Philadelphia by eighteen American delegates—legal, territorial, economic advisors, etc., each discussing the problem in which he was interested. Though the method prevents it from being exhaustive, the book is very readable . . . Includes stenographic reports of the discussions, maps and an index." N.Y. state lib.

Lansing, Robert
Peace negotiations, a personal narrative. 1921 Houghton $3 940.314

1 Paris. Peace conference, 1919 2 Wilson, Woodrow 3 League of nations 21-26234

"This narrative is a record of the relations between President Wilson and the author in connection with the peace negotiations. The author shows that the divergence in judgment between himself and the President dated from the latter's decision to be present at the Peace conference, and continued throughout the proceedings on matters of great importance." Book rev. digest

"Mr Lansing's book is of deep interest. Mr Lansing's manner of writing, especially in his official memoranda, follows the best traditions of American legal literature and these are the best traditions of our race and language as a whole." Spectator

Lloyd George, David

Truth about reparations and war-debts. 1932 Doubleday, Doran $1; Heinemann 3s 6d 940.314

1 European war, 1914-1918—Reparations 2 Debts, Public 3 Economic conditions—1918- 32-10855

"The former prime minister of England here gives a résumé of the rise of the question of reparations and war debts, the intentions of the framers of the Treaty of Versailles and the attitudes of the various nations since. In conclusion he advocates complete and immediate cancellation of the debts." Book rev. digest

"The book is important, though unequal, and here and there tending, as usually happens with the inclusion of a personal apologia, to loss of due balance and proportion. It will be very regrettable if attention is so far concentrated on the apologia that the other and very valuable features of the book receive inadequate consideration." 1 European war, 1914-1918—Peace 2 Paris. Paris conference, 1919 33-23055

The author, who was a member of the British delegation at Paris in 1919, says: "The purpose of this book is not so much to formulate a record of events, as to catch, before it evaporates, the unhealthy and unhappy atmosphere of the Peace Conference." The last half of the book consists of the author's diary from January 1 to June 28, 1919

"Mr. Nicolson's vivid book is admirable as a sketch of persons and events and as an analysis, made by an official deep in the problems of the Conference, of the several forces that destroyed the hope of a decent peace. . . Mainly concerned with questions of frontiers and the political redistribution of the world." New statesman and Nation

1 European war, 1914-1918—Reparations 31-17717

"A strong argument for ending the present regime of reparation payments set forth by a former head of the Reichsbank, chief of the German delegation which helped to draw up the Young Plan and a leader in other prominent political bodies in Germany." Pratt quarterly

"Herr Schacht's volume is, of course, highly partisan and not without political tinge. It has the merit that it does not hesitate to criticize the author's own country and its recent governments . . . While the controversy goes on, and the nations of Europe fight for their very existence, this book of Dr. Schacht's is an invaluable book of reference. It has indispensable facts and figures, some material not printed elsewhere, and a point of view that one must know to understand and judge the whole situation." Nation

1 Versailles, Treaty of, June 28, 1919 2 European war, 1914-1918—Peace 20-7755

"The book is an attempt at an altogether impartial statement of the causes leading to the war, and the treaties and peace conference resulting from it. The author states that he has no inside knowledge of what went on in Paris or of any unpublished documentary material, that he has relied largely on newspaper and magazine material." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Scott's book is an excellent illustration of the value of perspective combined with careful study of documents, as opposed to the impressions of first-hand observation. It seems to the reviewer that he has succeeded admirably in a difficult task." Amer. hist. rev.

1 Versailles, Treaty of, June 28, 1919 21-7504

"The right-hand man of Clemenceau briefly reviews European history before and during the war, gives the conditions of the treaty, describes the incidents and proceedings of the Peace Conference and, at greater length, discusses post-war conditions and problems as they effect France. An able and well informed but, naturally, impassioned brief for the Clemenceau ministry and for carrying out the treaty, especially in the sections relating to reparation. No index." Cleveland

"The Great war from the siege of Liege to the signing of the armistice as viewed from the Grand headquarters of the German army." Subtitle

"General Ludendorff has written a very able and interesting book on the war. It is not a good military history, though the summary accounts of the earlier Russian campaigns are instructive. The numerous plans and diagrams by the author are valuable also in their way. But the book throws a flood of light on the hopes and fears of the great general staff, and on the relations between the German army leaders and the politicians in Berlin." Spectator

"During the Italian campaign Mr Trevelyan was for three years in command of a British Red cross unit, and was decorated with the Italian Silver medal for valour. His book is less a war book than a political book. During the most dangerous and harassing moments of his work, he never seems to have lost sight of the impersonal issues of the war. His thoughts are not of individual dangers and endurances. He makes the fate of an offensive more important than the fate of a man." Athenaeum

"Introduction to the American official sources for the economic and social history of the World war," compiled by W. G. Leland and N. D. Mereness (1926 Yale univ. press $5.25; Oxford 25s) is a scholarly work which will interest large libraries

P. A. Rockwell's "American fighters in the Foreign legion, 1914-1918" (1930 Houghton $5) is an intimate and thrilling account written by one of the ninety Americans who served in the Foreign legion during the early years of the European war

Clark, John Maurice

Costs of the World war to the American people. 1931 Yale univ. press $3.50; Oxford 16s 940.37

1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 31-28596

In this study the author, who is professor of economics in Columbia University, has attempted to analyze the gains and losses which have accrued to the American people thru their participation in the war. Partial contents: Nature of war costs; The displacement of manpower; Effects of the war on the national dividend; Toll of death and disability; The war and agriculture; The war and the railroads; Shipping and shipbuilding; Northern migration of negroes

Harbord, James Guthrie

* America in the world war. 1933 Houghton $2 940.37

1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 33-9572

Summarizes the record of American participation in the World war and its lessons. A folded map shows successive stages of the German retreat in 1918

"The rapidly running outline of the whole story is eloquently, often brilliantly, presented and is thickly sprinkled with brief and interesting comments, estimates, observations." N.Y. Times

1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 27-4401

Volume 1 is "a convenient summary of the documentary and diplomatic history of the part played by the United States in the Great war. The story begins with Germany's declaration of war in 1914, and proceeds with an account of each successive phase of the conflict that had a bearing on the final decision of the United States to enter the war." Review of reviews

Volume 2, which covers 1918-20, "completes the history of the United States in the World War. . . . Interestingly written and includes many details not treated in other books; specially good on war work at home, rather inadequate on the work of our army and navy abroad. Chapters on the peace treaty and its rejection. sources are principally newspaper reports. Valuable for ready reference. Useful texts in appendix." N.Y. state lib.

A concise, readable account of the war period, which is now, 1933, out of print is J. S. Bassett's "Our war with Germany" (1919 Knopf)

March, Peyton Conway

Nation at war. 1932 Doubleday, Doran $3 940.37

1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 32-25157

"In crisp, incisive style the Chief of Staff during the World War tells the story of the work done by him and his subordinates in order to keep the A.E.F. in the field. He contradicts many of the statements of General Pershing, whose book minimized this 'superb achievement' and criticized severely the conduct of affairs in Washington." Pittsburgh

940.4 Military history. American expeditionary force

Two important works on the military history of the war which are unfortunately out of print, 1933, are:

Falkenhayn, E. G. A. S. von. German general staff and its decisions, 1914-1916. 1920 Dodd Author who was German Chief of staff, September 1914 to August 1916, gives an account of German war policies of this period

Frothingham, T. G. Guide to the military history of the World war, 1914-1918. 1920 Little An excellent chronological survey

Carey, Gordon Vero, and Scott, Hugh Sumner

Outline history of the Great war. 1928 Macmillan $2.40; Cambridge univ. press 6s, school ed 3s 6d 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles [29-10315]

"A concise narrative of the War in outline, for the benefit of readers who prefer short books to bulky ones." Preface

"The authors justly observe that 'it is sometimes a shock to find that the youth of to-day is often ignorant of the very names of the chief battles of the War.' They have done their work with skill, and their own experience of the war—one was a Major in the Rifle Brigade, the other a Captain in the Artillery—has enabled them to add to their severely compressed narrative an occasional touch of the true stinking, gloomy, yet inspiring atmosphere in which so many lived and so many died in those years of trial." 1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 31-32920

Published in England under title: World crisis; the eastern front

"Follows the author's story of the war from the British standpoint, told in 'World crisis' and 'Aftermath' [class 940.3] It is an absorbing account of the whole war upon the Eastern Front, from the crime at Sarajevo to Francis Joseph's death. Excellent illustrations and maps. [Bibliography]" Pittsburgh

Foch, Ferdinand

Memoirs of Marshal Foch; tr. by T. B. Mott. 1931 Doubleday, Doran $5; Heinemann 25s 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 31-26575

"A significant contribution to war literature, dealing, with the exception of a brief biographical foreword, with the years 1914-1918. In order to make the book readable for the layman, the translator has, as far as possible, avoided military technicalities and added explanatory comment." Providence

"Although Foch's uniform restraint will disappoint the sensation-lover, this is certainly a book that every student of the War will wish to have on his shelves. Yet it is also a book which may give a misleading impression to any but a student well versed in the history of the War. Not by its criticisms, however, and rarely by any flagrant inaccuracy. The book, indeed, is a model of discretion, written throughout in an impersonal style. Its unobtrusiveness is carried so far that only a few persons are even mentioned by name." Spectator

Gilbert, Vivian

Romance of the last crusade. 1923 Appleton-Century $2; 5s 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 2 European war, 1914-1918—Personal narratives 23-17486

"A personal narrative of the Palestine campaign under General Allenby and the capture of Jerusalem. With simplicity and directness and often with humor Major Gilbert recites his experiences with troops on the march, stories of English soldiers fighting their way across the Holy Land, and impressions of natives and Bible scenes. He was in Palestine for three years, staying on a year after the Armistice with the army of occupation." Book rev. digest

"Major Gilbert tells a simple and unaffected story of his share in Allenby's campaign." Times (London) lit. sup.

1 Russia—Hist.—Allied intervention, 1918-1920 31-29133

"Of how General Graves took an American expedition to Siberia to help the Czechs and to guard military stores; and of how pressure from the Allies did not cause him to disobey orders in spite of the farcical situation. It is an exciting and enlightening account." Providence

"The present memoirs of General William S. Graves . . . constitute the most illuminating and refreshing first-hand account of the intervention in the Russian Far East which has yet appeared. The book is neither an apologia nor an indictment, but a simple, well-told narrative by a military man. [Illustrated]" Current history

Leaves from a war diary. 1925 Dodd $3 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 2 U.S. Army. A.E.F., 1917-1920 25-18882

"An illuminating and valuable account of men and events in the World War, written in the form of a diary, without thought of publication. By General Pershing's Chief of Staff and the Commander of the Marine Brigade at Chateau Thierry." Cleveland

"Because of the diversity of his commands during the World War, his close relationship with General Pershing, and his share in the social life of war-time France, these letters of General Harbord offer illuminating, shrewd comment on men and military affairs that is eminently readable and of a certain historic value. Photographs, maps, index." N.Y. state lib.

Joffre, Joseph Jacques Césaire

Personal memoirs of Joffre; tr. by T. B. Mott. 2v 1932 Harper $6; Bles 18s 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 32-31336

"In these frank personal memoirs Marshal Joffre sets down the day by day record of the French high command from 1914 to 1916, from the retreat to the Marne thru the battle of Verdun. The illustrations include 20 war maps. Index." Book rev. digest

"It is no apologia, but a military record, written with the clarity and simplicity of style which was to be expected of the great French soldier; yet it seems unlikely that the reputation of the Maréchal will be either increased or diminished by its publication. The events on which he has written are, as a rule, already well known; he has practically nothing new to relate, and tells us little that happened after September 5, at which date the French Official History also at present stops. He is able, however, to fill a number of small gaps and to state with authority the why and the wherefore of the steps and processes by which certain decisions were reached." Liddell Hart, Basil Henry

"A record of the four-year struggle on the western and eastern fronts which opens with a chapter on the origins of the war and one on the opposing forces and plans in 1914. The successive years of the war are treated under the following headings: 1914—The clinch; 1915—The deadlock; 1916—The 'dog fall'; 1917—The strain; 1918—The break. In certain scenes twenty-six in all, the author also describes the crucial battles and manoeuvers of the War." Book rev. digest

"With all its imperfections, of which the author is himself conscious—this is incomparably the best short history of the war which has yet been written. The almost overwhelming mass of material with which a student of the war has to deal is admirably marshalled. . . Maps of the Western and Eastern fronts and a number of clear sketch maps help to make the course of the war intelligible to the lay reader." New statesman

Masefield, John

‡ Gallipoli. 1925 Macmillan $3; Heinemann 7s 6d 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 25-7919

First published in 1916. This reprint edition contains a new preface by the author and gives his source materials

"Able account of the Allied campaign at the Dardanelles which vindicates that tragic failure and pays reverent tribute to the suffering and heroism of a half-trained army under indescribable conditions. Maps and excellent illustrations from photographs." N.Y. state lib.

"Mr. Masefield has written much in prose and verse of high quality, but he has never written anything worthier of unreserved admiration than this little book on Gallipoli . . . The story has been told before, but never with such a concentration on the essentials, with so vivid a realization of the horrors and splendors of the struggle." Spectator

"Gallipoli memories" by Compton Mackenzie (1929 Doubleday, Doran $1; Cassell 7s 6d) is another English author's narrative of the Dardanelles campaign

1 Somme, Battle of the, 1916 17-27866

"An introduction to an account of the Battle of the Somme, describing in detail the seventy miles of 'old front line,' the starting point of the battle 'which first gave the enemy the knowledge that he was beaten.' A crowding of detail makes the description hard to follow even with a map, but his presentation of the contrast between the quiet scene and the horrors of war has sufficient poetic beauty to relieve any tedium." Paris gun. 1930 Smith, P. $3 940.4

1 European war, 1914-1918—France 2 European war, 1914-1918—Campaigns and battles 30-12977

"The bombardment of Paris by the German long range guns and the great German offensives of 1918." Subtitle

"Of all the mysteries of the Great War that of the long-range gun with which the Germans bombarded Paris has had the least exact explanation. . . The title gives the impression that there was only one long-range gun but actually the Germans had eight or ten. Moreover, the guns did what they were intended to do—drop shells from a distance of seventy-five miles on the capital in order to create panic and apprehension. They worked from March until August, 1918. . . Col. Miller, recognizing that the gun was not only an important chapter in the history of artillery but also part of a thrilling tale, has made his book clear to the layman in every paragraph." N.Y. 1 European war, 1914-1918—U.S. 2 U.S. Army. A.E.F., 1917-1920 31-10662

"General Pershing's 'Experiences' start with his appointment as commander of the American Expeditionary Force in May, 1917, and close with the celebration of the Armistice. The arrangement is strictly chronological. It consists of quotations from his wartime diary followed by amplified discussion written more than ten years later." Sat. rev. of lit.

"The story of his experiences is unique in our literature. It is told in simple, direct style by a soldier modest but unafraid. It is impersonal and temperate. It proclaims no official martyrs; and distributes few laurels, being limited by its title to the author's own experiences." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

1 European war, 1914-1918—Prisoners and prisons 32-6349

"A German artist who was painting in England when the war started and was interned in civilian camps for four years gives here a dispassionate account of the camp routine and analyzes the effects of herd life on the mind and spirit of the individual." Pittsburgh

"It is a valuable record of a spiritual transformation brought about by solitude and enforced contact with very dissimilar types; and of the psychological and physical changes due to poor food and close confinement . . . It is a dignified book, like all these accounts of men swept into something which altogether dwarfed them, but from which, in varying degrees and significances, they drew some spiritual sustenance." 1 Turkey—Hist. 2 European war, 1914-1918—Prisoners and prisons 32-25465

Published in England under title: Golden Horn

"Beginning with a survey of Turkish political affairs in 1908, and tracing the developments of the assassination which started the World War, the author relates in detail his adventures as a prisoner in the hands of the Turks. It is a tale of dreadful capture, of mental and physical anguish, of escape, of disguises, and of a brave English woman who devoted herself and risked her life to aid the escape of English prisoners of war. A remarkable book carrying a varied appeal. Chapters five to eleven are a revision of the author's book 'Caught by the Turks' published in England in 1919." Ontario library

"Intimate details of life at the front, specifically Chateau Thierry and Fismes. 'It shows how we lived and died, ate, cooked, looked, thought and felt during that time,' says the author, who selects his incidents with dramatic insight." Cleveland

" 'Toward the Flame' ranks with Masefield's 'Gallipoli' [class 940.4]. It is a stupendous piece of emotional reporting. His simple narrative is filled with drama and humor. His comrades live in his pages. He shows restraint, courage, intense observational powers." Bookman

Reprint of a book first published 1916

"These light-hearted, humorously toned and yet realistic articles, written from day to day under all sorts of conditions and published from month to month in 'Blackwood's Magazine,' have a place of their own for readers whose sympathies are with the English. Through them the raw recruit can be observed as he is drilled into shape for a crack Scottish regiment, and later as he adjusts himself to life in the French trenches and stands up, or falls, under shell fire." "Rudolf Binding was forty-seven when the War broke out and was in command of a squadron of cavalry. First in France, then in Galicia, and finally in France once more, he was scarcely ever far behind the front line, and these extracts from his letters and diary (beautifully translated by Mr. Ian Morrow) touch every aspect of the War, from its philosophy to its most ludicrous situations. The author spares no one, least of all his own High Command. Hindenburg, alone, among the leaders of both sides, was the only great general." Spectator

"The impress of the war upon the mind of a poet has resulted in this beautifully written book of 'Undertones' with a brief supplement of 'Poetical interpretations and variations.' In these pages Mr Blunden recaptures his whole experience of the war and its effect upon him." Book rev. digest

"He writes, as he tells us, in undertones, but the image and horror of war are presented here as no other writer about the Great War has quite presented them. . . . Mr. Blunden looks at the War first through the eyes of prose and then through the eyes of poetry, and in both forms the undertones are able to shake the reader with vibrations which would hardly have reached him from a full diapason." 'Way of the Lancer' is the story of the last days of the fighting with the Russians, and of the rise of the Red army who became their enemies as they had previously been their allies." Chicago Daily Tribune

"What the average reader, and for the matter of that, what the historian will get from 'Way of the Lancer,' in addition to an uncommonly interesting and manysided story, is a really sound general notion of what that comparatively unknown war in the East was like, in those last terrible months when Russia was hurtling downhill into revolution and the chaos that immediately followed it." Three men's war and personal records of active service. 1929 Harper o.p. 1933 940.48

"Three personal records of war experience are given in this book: John Easton's Broadchalk, R. H. Mottram's A Personal Record, and Eric Partridge's Frank Honywood, Private. Easton, a platoon commander in the 24th Division, describes thru his character, Broadchalk, the experiences of a nineteen-year-old subaltern at the front. Mr Mottram gives an account of the Ypres salient and of administrative work. Mr Partridge, an Australian infantryman, writes of his service in the Gallipoli campaign." Book rev. digest

1 European war, 1914-1918—Secret service 33-30425

"His book is extremely interesting, not only as a vivid and well-written account of the thrilling adventures of a spy, but also because it is concerned wholly with conditions and developments on the Eastern front of the war and in the countries of Eastern and Central Europe, concerning which American readers know much less than they do of what occurred in Western Europe. 1 Europe—Hist.—20th cent. 27-13144

"This study of Europe in the first quarter of the twentieth century relates the present status of individual countries directly to the immediate history of each, and laterally, to the history and present status of Europe as a whole. The periods before, during and after the war are compactly reviewed, and twentieth century life and culture are briefly summarized. Dr Edwin E. Slosson, the author's father, contributes the final chapter on the developments of science and invention during the period considered." Book rev. digest

"The main problems of the period are clearly stated with considerable partiality for the arrangements made after the war and for the League. The organization is logical and the style and presentation attractive." Amer. hist. rev.

1 Ireland—Hist. 2 Ireland—Pol. & govt. 3 Irish question 30-11828
A good little book, first published 1911, which gives a brief account of the Irish people from the earliest time. The 1930 edition has been rewritten and reset thruout. The main account ends with 1900. An additional page gives an account of the establishment of home rule in 1922. The bibliography contains many new titles

The author's "History of the Irish state to 1014" (1925 Macmillan $4.50; 12s 6d) is an important piece of historical research in the field of early Irish history

Gwynn, Denis Rolleston
* Irish Free State, 1922-1927. 1928 Macmillan $4.50; 12s 6d 941.5
1 Irish Free State 28-28863
"The book is a study of the first stage in the evolution of the Irish Free State, 1922-1927, showing how the work of reorganization has been effected and the results that have already followed from the new system. Considerable attention has been given to the handling of financial problems and the methods by which loans have been raised." Book rev. digest
"Fine study of recent Irish history. . . The disappointing feature of Mr. Gwynn's book is his omission to deal with the ideology of the new order in Ireland." Spectator

Gwynn, Stephen Lucius
* History of Ireland. 1923 Macmillan $4.50; Talbot 12s 6d 941.5
1 Ireland—Hist. 24-26384
"Chronicling Ireland's history from legendary times to the birth of the Irish Free State, this survey has an epic quality, is well-balanced, unprejudiced and readable. Two maps and index which brings together isolated references." N.Y. state lib.
"Mr. Gwynn's work is valuable. It will give the general reader a clear comprehension of the past which lies behind present political and economic conditions. The author's sanity, his impartiality, his sympathy, his understanding of political affairs, his literary skill serve him well in the task of historian, and in a broad survey his presentation of the long drama of international and interracial relations from the Elizabethan conquest to the Sinn Fein revolution takes on something of the appearance of a masterpiece." Amer. hist. rev.
The author's "Student's history of Ireland" (1925 Macmillan $2; Talbot 5s) is a popular history based on his longer "History of Ireland"

1 Ireland [24-32090]
"Touching upon the many phases of contemporary Irish life, the social groupings, education, religion, industry and labor, the political situation as well as upon the physical description of the country, this survey is informing, well-balanced and without bias. The appendix is concerned with the constitution of the Irish Free State. Index." N.Y. state lib.
"It is distinguished by its impartiality no less than by its readableness. No better introduction to modern Ireland could be desired by the intelligent foreigner." Nation and Athenaeum
Ernest Barker's "Ireland in the last fifty years; 1866-1918" (2d and enl ed 1919 Oxford $2.50; 3s 6d) is another good survey of Irish social conditions particularly with regard to the land question and education

Joyce, Patrick Weston

Short history of Gaelic Ireland from the earliest times to 1608. 1924 Longmans $2; 5s 941.5

1 Ireland—Hist. 26-4182

First published under the title: Short history of Ireland

"A history, based on original sources, with special discussion of the manners, customs, and institutions of ancient Ireland. Five chapters are devoted to a popular exposition of the Brehon laws, the early code concerning Irish land tenure." Pittsburgh

The author's "Social history of ancient Ireland" (2d ed 2v 1913 Longmans $15; 30s) is useful for reference. It is "an attempt to picture society in all its phases, as it existed in Ireland before the Anglo-Norman invasion."

1 Ireland—Hist. [23-14687]

"The nucleus of the book is the author's article on the recent political history of Ireland contributed to the new volumes of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Following a brief introduction on the history of Ireland before and during the Union, the book treats of the confused and troubled period of Irish political history from the revival of home rule agitation and the beginnings of Sinn Fein organization to the birth of the Free State." Book rev. digest

"Professor Phillips marshals his facts carefully and well. Those who do not agree with his opinions will find it hard to impugn the accuracy of his statements." Times (London) lit. sup.

Books on English constitutional history are classed in 342.4

Some important reference books are:

Gross, Charles. Sources and literature of English history from the earliest times to about 1485. 2d ed rev 1915 Longmans o.p. 1933 This important annotated bibliography is supplemented by two volumes issued under the direction of the Royal historical society and the American historical association as "Bibliography of British history, Tudor period, 1485-1603" by Read Conyers (1933 Oxford $8.50; 30s) and "Bibliography of British history, Stuart period, 1603-1714" by Godfrey Davies (1928 Oxford $8; 21s)

Low, S. J. M., and Pulling, F. S., comps. Dictionary of English history, new ed rev and enl by F. J. C. Hearnshaw and others 1928 Cassell 30s Brief articles with some bibliographic references. First published 1884

"The Cambridge history of the British empire" is an important work which is to be completed in 8 volumes. The following volumes have been published, 1933: v 1 The old empire from the beginnings to 1783 (1929 Macmillan $9.50; 35s); v4 British India, 1497-1858 (noted class 954); v5 Indian empire, 1858-1918 (noted class 954); v6 Canada and Newfoundland (noted class 971 and 971.8); v7 pt.1 Australia (noted class 994); v7 pt.2 New Zealand (noted class 993.1)

"Political history of England," edited by Thomas Hunt and R. L. Poole (12v 1905-10 Longmans ea $4.50, set $50; ea 12s 6d) is a scholarly series which covers the history from the earliest times through the reign of Queen Victoria. Each volume is by a recognized authority. Brief contents: v1 From the earliest times to the Norman conquest, by T. Hodgkin; v2 1066-1216, by G. B. Adams; v3 1216-1377, by T. F. Tout; v4 1337-1485, by Sir C. W. C. Oman; v5 1485-1574, by H. A. L. Fisher; v6 1547-1603, by A. F. Pollard; v7 1603-1660, by F. C. Montague; v8 1660-1702, by Sir R. Lodge; v9 1702-60, by I. S. Callender, Geoffrey Arthur Romaine

Naval side of British history. 1924 Christophers 8s 6d 942

1 Gt. Brit.—History, Naval 24-25660

Formerly carried also by Little

"Professor Callender has the courage of the enthusiast. Into some three hundred pages he has undertaken to compress the whole story of British sea-power from the fifteenth century to the close of the late war. . . . The book presents no mere string of unrelated episodes, but a serious attempt to trace the development of material and technique, the relations between commerce and sea-power, and the reactions of sea-power and policy. It devotes attention to the pay and status of the seaman, the growth of naval administration, and the improvement of signalling, as well as the battles and cruises." Nation and Athenaeum

A collection of 457 extracts from many sources. While intended to accompany the compiler's "Short history of England," it is a useful library tool when source material is needed at other times

* Short history of England. new ed 1932 Ginn $1.96 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 32-17285

A good textbook first published 1904 and often reprinted with slight changes. This edition adds a new chapter on England since the Great war, 1918-32. Illustrations and maps

"I have . . . striven, in the first place, to give a full and clear description of early institutions and conditions. Secondly, I have tried to select from the mass of historical detail what was significant rather than what was merely conspicuous—what either gave shape and character to a considerable period of history, or was a clearly marked step in the general development of the nation." Preface

Cross, Arthur Lyon

* Shorter history of England and greater Britain. rev ed 1929 Macmillan $4; 20s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 29-19311

This is a shortened form of the author's "History of England and greater Britain," brought up to the beginning of 1929. The earlier parts of the book have been revised and condensed, and new chapters on British development since the World war have been added

"Cross is suggested for its comprehensiveness and usefulness, not for reading, but for verification of detail." Hist. outlook

Maps and genealogical tables. Bibliography at end of each chapter

Gardiner, Samuel Rawson

* Student's history of England from the earliest times to the conclusion of the Great war. 1919 Longmans $6; 21s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 22-17480

Also obtainable from Longmans in parts: pt 1 (55 B.C. to A.D. 1509) $2.50, 7s 6d; pt 2 (1509-1689) $2.25, 6s 6d; pt 3 (1689-1919) $2.25, 6s 6d

An excellent book for reference use. First published 1890-92. In later editions chapters have been added by other hands

"Distinguished by accuracy, clearness, sobriety of judgment and a due sense of historical proportion." Athenaeum

Green, John Richard

‡ Short history of the English people; rev and enl by A. S. Green. 1916 Am. bk. $2.60; Macmillan 7s 6d 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 16-18300

First published in 1874. It was afterward expanded and rewritten on an altered plan to form the longer work, the "History of the English people," first published 1877-80 (8v Macmillan ea 5s)

"No English history except Macaulay's has gained such favorable acceptance for general reading. Its vivid narration of the economic, social and literary influences and processes by which the people of England reached their development distinguishes this work from the histories which chiefly record the political and military fortunes of a people's rulers. A later edition contains an epilogue, by Mrs Green continuing the history to 1914." Pratt alcove

1 Gt. Brit.—Soc. life & cust. 2 Middle ages 3 Monasticism and religious orders 2-11015

First published 1888

"Accurate research illuminated by imagination and human sympathy. Deals with concrete local history in thirteenth century England; the Mendicants' objects and methods; life in village, monastery, and university; and the extent of the Black Death. An account of the Muggletonians is added." Guide to hist. lit.

Lucas, Sir Charles Prestwood

Story of the empire. (British empire, a survey, v1) 1924 Collins o.p. 1933 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Colonies 2 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 24-19317

The first volume of a twelve volume series planned to give a complete survey of the history, resources, etc. of the empire. Each volume deals with a special aspect. This volume, which is a general historical sketch, is of interest to smaller as well as to larger libraries. The other volumes are more special in character, dealing with such subjects as health problems, resources of the empire, native races of the empire

"The elements that have gone to make up the national character are separtely noted, and each is shown to have played its part in regulating the country's expansion; and binding them together, throughout the Empire no less than in the home island, is the sea and the instinct for sea power. This is the stimulating conception which gives life and unity to the book; and if there are occasional passages where the reader's interest flags, that is because Sir Charles Lucas has determined to make his narrative complete and does not omit any one of the details of his theme." Times (London) lit. sup.

Lunt, William Edward

History of England. 1928 Harper $4.25; 15s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 28-17001

Muir, Ramsay

Short history of the British commonwealth. 2v 1922-23 World bk. ea $6; Philip ea 15s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. [21-7716]

"Professor Muir has, it is evident, designed a history of the English-speaking peoples, set

in a framework of world-politics . . . He has not only written a history of Great Britain, social as well as political; a history of the British Empire; a history of British foreign relations; but he has included a considerable amount of the history of the United States, and of the separate histories of the British self-governing colonies. He has brought together in the space of two volumes an enormous amount of material, an extraordinary collection of facts, ideas, opinions, conclusions, generalizations, and relationships, making the history of Great Britain a kind of centre of world-history for the period which it covers." Amer. hist. rev.

"He is an accurate and also an attractive writer. He selects judiciously from the immense mass of facts, and dwells on the main tendencies of each successive chapter in a wonderful story." Spectator

The author's abridgment of this work for the use of secondary schools is entitled "British history" (1929 World bk. $3.60; Philip 7s 6d)

Oman, Sir Charles William Chadwick

History of England. new and rev ed 1919 Longmans $2.50; Arnold, E. & co. 7s 6d 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. [4-12970]

A good school history, written in an interesting style, which was first published in 1895. In the present edition the narrative is carried through 1918

Pollard, Albert Frederick

1 Gt. Brit.—Pol. & govt. 2 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 12-6569

A concise, scholarly work by an eminent historian. The period covered is from 55 B.C. to 1911

Powicke, Frederick Maurice

Medieval England, 1066-1485. (Home univ. lib. of modern knowledge) 1931 Holt $1.25, student's ed $1; Butterworth, T. 2s 6d 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 2 Gt. Brit.—Soc. condit. 32-7789

"A study of the growth and development of English society during the middle ages, treated topically rather than chronologically. In part one, The orders of society, the author considers the baronage, the middle element, the boroughs, the crown and the forests, Jews and merchants, and the church; in part two, The Crown and society, he examines the artifice of government, the principle of service, and the joint enterprise. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"This little book is packed with stimulating food for the student, though the ordinary reader, of whose 'general acquaintance with the main facts of English history and English constitutional developments' Professor Powicke seems to take an optimistic view, may find it rather tough." Times (London) lit. sup.

Robinson, Cyril Edward

England; a history of British progress from the early ages to the present day. 1928 Crowell $5; Methuen 21s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 32-33142

First published 1920-22 in 4 volumes under the title "A history of England." This edition has been revised and a new chapter and a bibliography added. Published in England under the title: "History of British progress"

"It is a simple, straight-forward account up to 1928, with chief emphasis on the political and economic history and a rather large space given to wars. There are 63 maps and 24 plates of excellently chosen illustrations, chiefly good portraits and fine architectural subjects. The style is interesting and stimulating, and the factual material is used in discussion rather than merely chronologically arranged. The book would probably be most useful for good senior high school students who were especially interested in English history or for junior colleges. It is naturally English in flavor, but that does not prevent it from being a good introduction to historic England." Hist. outlook

Robinson, Howard

History of Great Britain. 1927 Houghton $4.25; Allen, G. 18s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 27-19243

"In little less than a thousand pages Dr. Howard Robinson, of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, has written an excellent history of Great Britain from the earliest times to the present day. . . Throughout the author has planned his book well; the balance is well preserved and the conclusions reached are presented with scrupulous fairness. The book was prepared under the editorship of Dr. James Shotwell, the Professor of History in Columbia University. It is well indexed, and there are more than thirty maps." Times (London) lit. sup.

"Five years after the appearance of his very timely, scholarly, and useful 'Development of the British Empire,' [1922 Houghton $3.50, student's ed $2.75; Constable 12s 6d] Professor Robinson has produced another important volume dealing with our neighbors across the sea. Covering a much wider field than the former book, the recent 'History of Great Britain' is equally accurate, opportune, and well written." Hist. outlook

Trevelyan, George Macaulay

* History of England. 1926 Longmans $3.75; 12s 6d 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 28-3319

Also published in a 3 volume edition (Longmans ea $1.60; ea 4s 6d)

"Excellent summary in one volume for the person with some background of history, combining as it does, modern historical research with a fluent lucid style. The preface states that the work is 'an essay in so far as it attempts to analyze the social development of the nation in relation to economic conditions, political institutions and overseas activities,' and that it is a textbook in so far as it preserves the narrative form in brief, deals in dates and gives prominence to leading events and persons." [Maps. Index]" N.Y. libraries

"Distinction of treatment is perhaps the most marked characteristic of the work. . . The second characteristic of the book is its swift, brilliant style. . . Third, is its substantial and critical knowledge." Amer. hist. rev.

Williamson, James Alexander

Evolution of England; a commentary on the facts. 1931 Oxford $2; 15s 942

1 Gt. Brit.—Hist. 31-18844

"A history of England which is according to the author not a systematic history but rather a commentary on that history. He accords 'full value to such cataclysmal factors as the achievements of exceptional men, the strokes of death cutting short work half done, the decision of doubtful battles, the effect of plagues, inspirations and enthusiasms, all that category of events which must be classed as providential or accidental and not subject to definable law.' " Book rev. digest

Its "faults are more than outweighed by the author's general sanity and breadth of view, nowhere more effectively displayed than in his accounts of such intensely controversial episodes as the Civil War and the American War of Independence. The book deserves high praise. Mature readers will find it a stimulus to thought; to boys in their teens, anxious to find their way among the multitude of text-book facts, it will be a boon and an illumination." "Dr. Wingfield-Stratford has written a successful piece of humanised history in which the course of our culture is intelligibly traced. He is not deep; he is not a memorable writer; he makes none of the penetrating judgments upon men and events that mark the great historian; but the very sketchiness of his survey will be an attraction to those whom the activities of scientific historians have left with a conviction that history is something to suffer and not to enjoy." R. W. Chambers's "England before the Norman conquest; with a forword on Roman Britain by M. Cary" (1926 Longmans 10s 6d) is a good book for the serious student. It is one of the University of London intermediate source-books of history series

Sir J. H. Ramsay's "Foundations of England; or Twelve centuries of British history, B.C. 55-A.D. 1154," published 1898, forms the first two volumes of his, "Scholars history of England." These first volumes can be purchased only with the other six volumes of that set at $28 (84s in England) from Oxford. According to the "Guide to historical literature" this series presents "a critical digest of the chronicles, adjusted, compared and arranged in chronological order"

"The book which everybody reads, and which every one will continue to read until the English language is itself forgotten, is Macaulay's 'History of England,' a work which, after some magnificent introductory chapters, proceeds to deal in detail with the reign of William and Mary. . . No one ever surpassed Macaulay in the power of making the past live. His knowledge was boundless; and he knew how to employ it all to illustrate his themes. But the proportion is always perfect. There is no ostentatious parade of learning. . . For him all men were either black or white. Third British empire; being a course of lectures delivered at Columbia university, New York. 2d ed rev 1927 Oxford $2; 6s 942.08

1 Gt. Brit.—Colonies 2 Imperial federation 3 Gt. Brit.—For. rel. 4 International law and relations A28-2046

"The third empire, according to the author, is the third and present phase of imperial, development, the British Commonwealth of Nations, which has succeeded the colonial and the mercantile empires. The lectures attempt to answer the questions why the British Empire has survived at a time when others have dissolved and disappeared, how it has survived, and what it must do to justify its survival." Pittsburgh

"The lectures are good history and good philosophy as well as of topical importance today." Spectator

1 European war, 1914-1918 2 War 3 Military geography 34-5813

Published in England with title: Germany, prepare for war!

"This book was suppressed by the German government. not from disapproval of its theories, since the author continues to hold the chair of military science at the Brunswick Technical College, but from fear of its effect on public opinion abroad. The book analyzes the part played in the World war by the various participants and outlines plans for the conquest of most of Germany's neighbors, including an invasion of England from Holland. The plan embraces not only restoration of the Germany of 1914 but annexation of Holland, Austria, parts of Belgium, Switzerland, Alsace-Lorraine and other countries." Book rev. digest

"As a military critic Professor Banse is acute enough, and his actual criticisms of what happened in the War are usually full of suggestion. It is not, of course, merely because he assumes the occurrence of future war, that he invites censure; for that must be the assumption behind any military instruction. His vice is that he puts before his country aims which obviously imply a war of aggression." Spectator

1 Germany 2 European war, 1914-1918—Germany [32-406]

"The first half of the book sketches the development of the German empire and the growth of the national spirit from the 18th century to the eve of the world war, and considers in two chapters the effect of the war on the spirit of the people. The last half is a more detailed study of social and intellectual forces at work since the war." Pittsburgh

"No better pen could have been chosen to write the history of Germany for the plain man to read. Dr Gooch selects the salient facts with that sureness of touch that is only found with encyclopedic knowledge." Nation and Athenaeum

"In Calvin Hoover's book timeliness, thoroughness, accuracy, soundness of judgment and high literary value are combined in a very remarkable manner. Not only did the writer happen to be on the spot when the Nazi revolution occurred; more fortunately he had been in Germany for nearly a year prior to the outburst. . . No brief précis could possibly do justice to the compressed, lucid, illuminating first chapters of the book in which Professor Hoover studies the economic system prevailing in Germany before the advent of National Socialism." "One of the more important books on modern Germany . . . It surveys the German scene as it has developed since the country emerged from the ordeal of the European war. . . The book contains very interesting reflections on German policy before the war, notably with respect to naval policy and to the alliance with Austria. But the parts of more immediate interest are those in which the author discusses the party conflicts of present-day Germany and such questions as treaty revision and reparations." Foreign affairs

1 Germany—Pol. & govt. 2 Germany—Hist.—Revolution, 1918- 3 Germany—Soc. condit. 4 Nazi movement 33-1197

"The author of this analysis of the political situation in Germany in 1932 is an American journalist, Berlin correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and for ten years a resident in Germany. His thesis is that now, fourteen years after the 1918 revolution, the Germans are reverting to the political philosophy of 1913 and that the blame must be shared by the Allies and the German Republicans themselves." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Mowrer is quite certain about both what has happened and what should have happened—a definiteness of conviction which may be a little imprudent now and then, but which does lend stalwart poise to his narrative. . . Mr. Mowrer has, despite a tendency to ramble and to hammer reality into the shape of convenient slogans, written an arresting, thoughtful and very readable book." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Pinnow, Hermann

History of Germany; people and state through a thousand years. 1933 Macmillan $2.75; Allen, G. 12s 6d 943

1 Germany—Hist. 33-27300

"This history is particularly to be commended to the notice of the general reader, for it reveals Germany, her politics, her people, and her culture from the dissolution of the Carlovingian Empire to the setting up of the post-war Republic with unusual clarity. The book, moreover, is instinct with a broad-minded liberalism that invites a sympathetic reading." New statesman and Nation

Roddie, Stewart

Peace patrol. 1933 Putnam $3.50; Christophers 15s 943

1 Germany—Hist.—Revolution, 1918- 33-27100

"Colonel Roddie went to Germany in January, 1919, and remained there for seven years as a member of the Interallied Commission of Control, whose duty it was to disarm Germany and to carry out the terms of the Versailles treaty. Though the central theme of his book is the disarmament of Germany, its chief and very great interest lies in its pictures of the people he met—ex-royalty, officials, lost leaders, and others." Book rev. digest

"This is a very readable book—artless, indeed, but brimful of life and humour. It is also of some historical importance. Colonel Roddie went everywhere, talked to all and sundry and knew every one worth knowing. His reports carried weight at the time, and his evidence must be treated with respect now." Thompson, James Westfall
Feudal Germany. 1928 Univ. of Chicago press $5 943

1 Germany—Hist.—To 1517 2 Holy Roman empire 28-9152

"The work is neither narrative nor systematic, but a connected series of studies of significant phases of German institutions between the ninth and twelfth centuries, such as the church, the economic basis of political and social life, the struggle between local rights and imperial centralization. A curious chapter deals with the sentiment of Europe toward the Germans in the Middle Ages." Sat. rev. of lit.

"Professor Thompson's component chapters are in many cases monographs complete in themselves, so that there is some inevitable overlapping. A little superabundance of material, however, in a work covering an almost untilled field of European history, can easily be forgiven. It must be added that the history is so profusely documented that the author half apologises for his notes and trusts they will not be mistaken for a parade of learning. The volume, moreover is finely printed, has several maps, some useful chronological tables, and an admirable index." New statesman

German phoenix; the story of the republic. 1933 Smith, H. $2.50 943

1 Germany—Hist.—Revolution, 1918- 2 Germany—Pol. & govt. 3 Germany—For. rel. 4 Germany—Soc. condit. 33-27014

"This portrayal of the extraordinary progress of Germany into a socialized state is primarily a tribute to the 'phoenix' which has risen from the ruin of the post-war period, but although the author casts blame on ex-President Wilson, the Versailles treaty, France and Poland, he does not fail to note also German weaknesses and mistakes. There are able chapters on Hitler, on the socialization of industry and business, the 'military menace,' and women and morals." N.Y. libraries

"Germany is inevitably a complex theme and though the author's account is unusually penetrating, clear and forceful, it is not oversimplified. The chapters dealing with the economic, social and psychological aspects of the German 'risorgimento' are the best." Current history

1 Austria—Pol. & govt. 2 Austria—Econ. condit. 3 Police—Austria 32-35773

An account of the financial and political history of Austria since the fall of the Hapsburg empire

"A fine study. . . Mr. Germains is a master of his subject: knows pre-war and post-war Austria like his hand, and even war-time Austria, having been prisoner there. This enables him to correct many legends. . . But the greatest interest in the book lies in Mr. Germains' general thesis, that the fall of the Austrian empire was in the main due to what he calls 'the gravitational pull of the racial mass,' and that the present state of Austria composes a danger to European peace. It is impossible to disagree with him." Saturday rev.

1 Austria—Hist. 2 European war, 1914-1918—Austria 31-12763

"A survey of the events that led up to the downfall of the Austro-Hungarian empire in the World war, which covers mainly the years 1916 to 1918. There is a bibliography, and an index of persons. [Illustrations]" Book rev. digest

"Although written by an Austrian, who remained to the end a loyal subject of his emperor . . . the Collapse is remarkably free from partisanship or rancor, and it painstakingly assigns credit and blame where, on the basis of the available sources, credit and blame seem to be due. Few volumes contain such clear, precise, and penetrating character sketches of the men prominent in the events of 1914-1918 as does that of Director Horstenau. . . Particularly interesting is the exposition of the influence exerted in Austro-Hungarian policies by the Magyars, an influence hardly warranted by their numerical status." Hist. outlook

1 European war, 1914-1918—Bohemia 2 Czechoslovak Republic—Pol. & govt. [27-23931]

"The Slovak professor and philosopher statesman who created a state by the force of his own will narrates the steps by which the freedom of Czechoslovakia was won and explains the ideals which guided him. He tells how he organized abroad the fight of the Czech people against Austria, and comments on the war as a whole, on democracy and on the statesmen whom he met in the capitals of Europe and America." Book rev. digest

"President Masaryk's volume is unique in the vast literature of the war as the narrative of the making of a nation; but it is no less unique in the wealth of its reflections. It provides a history that, while it is scholarly and exact in all its details and traces back to furthest sources, is never dull or pedantic. "Not the least attractive feature of the book is the excellent diction. Many of the illustrations are reproductions of rare prints and paintings, and they greatly enhance the value of the work, which is indeed, a modern and trustworthy textbook." Springfield Republican

Duclaux, Mme Agnes Mary Frances (Robinson)
Short history of France from Cæsar's invasion to the battle of Waterloo. 1918 Putnam $3 944
1 France—Hist. 18-10031
"A simple and vivid story of France written for those of the reading public unacquainted with the influences and events which have moulded the French nation. The narrative is divided into four great periods: the influence of the Roman invasion, the age of feudalism, the growth of the centralized monarchy, and the Napoleonic era, the people and conditions of each period being characterized and the narrative lighted with vivid glimpses of striking personalities. The book has much literary charm and offers convincing proof that history may be both true and interesting." Cleveland

French history. (Hour lib.) 1932 Lippincott $1; 4s 6d 944
1 France—Hist. 32-26076
"A brief summary of the history of France from its beginnings to the present. Illustrated with fifteen small maps incorporated in the text, showing boundaries, possessions, etc. at different periods." Book rev. digest
"His unpretentious though attractive little volume manages to give the broad outlines of events, currents of thought and policy, without once falling into vagueness or platitude. Enough facts are given in detail to fix the attention and lodge in the memory, and, most remarkable of all, the catholicity of interests displayed by the author assures a fairer treatment of historical figures than does many a voluminous work of established reputation." "This book is intended for boys, young men, or girls at school and college, for travelers bound for France, or for readers that stay at home, content to avoid the restless sea, grimy train, and tumultuous motor car; and its aim is to give a slight but continuous sketch in outline of the political growth of France from the time when she first became a Latin country up to the end of the Great War—in short, a brief biography of France." Preface
"Mr Sedgwick chooses his material with fine selectiveness, composes it with excellent emphasis and writes with ease, charm and pictorial power. In short, this necessarily rather slight history is an informing presentation and a work of art." Springfield Republican

"The two largest sections of the book are those dealing with History and Literature, M. Emile Bourgeois being the chief contributor to the former and the editor to the latter. The other sections treat of the Army, the Navy, Economic and Social Life, the Finance of the Ancien Régime, Law, Education and Learning, Architecture, Painting and Sculpture, Music, the Stage, Philosophy, Mathematics, and Science. There are twenty-two contributors, thirteen French and nine British." Times (London) lit. sup.

Van Dyke, Paul
* Story of France. 1928 Scribner $3.50; 15s 944
1 France—Hist. 28-24393
"This book is for those readers who may want a sketch of French history which is neither a summary crammed with names and dates, nor a vague record of the writer's reactions to facts his reader is not told, but rather a suggestion, as definite as brevity permits, of what France has suffered, gained and done in 2,000 years." Preface
"Mr. van Dyke has attempted to compress into some 500 pages the history of France from Julius Cæsar to the Third Republic. The difficulty of such an undertaking is to work it out to scale. Mr. van Dyke has been reasonably successful. It is a conscientious piece of guidework." Saturday rev.

1 Gaul—Hist. 2 France—Hist.—To 1328 [27-19251]
"This volume, the first in time in the National history of France series, covers the beginnings of French history from prehistoric times to the tenth century. The chronicle of Celtic and Roman Gaul and the Merovingian and Carlovingian dynasties is told in popular and readable style." Book rev. digest
"It would be difficult to imagine a more full-blooded introduction to a mighty theme; and there are few more comforting phenomena in modern times than the enthusiasm which the distinguished author of this volume succeeds in keeping up for his subject." Nation and Athenaeum

Covers the period from the reign of Charles VIII to the close of the reign of Henry IV. "M Batiffol is a skilful guide through that most important century of human progress which spans the interval between the middle ages and modern civilization. It is a confused epoch of French history, a period of contradictory movements and currents, in which the nation was only beginning to discover its destiny. The author instead of subjective dissertations on the origins of events and movements, gives us a series of vivid pictures and portraits, chiefly taken from contemporary records." J. E. C. Bodley in Introduction.

"Mr. Batiffol here sets a high standard of matter and presentation; and if, as in the case of Henri III, his judgments sometimes differ from older writers, he supports his views with abundant scholarship. The book is heartily to be commended. It has chapter bibliographies, and a good index." Library association record

"Begins with the barbarian invasions of the ninth and tenth centuries, with their complete destruction of Roman civilization and of government, and describes how out of this state of anarchy and from the only enduring social unit, the family, feudalism arose and developed during several centuries and, in turn, came to an end with the end of the Hundred years' war in the fifteenth century. . . . Bibliographical references at the end of each chapter. Index." Book rev. digest

"The book is clearly and vividly written . . . in the characteristic and delightful style of the French historians, well planned and organized chapters, profusely illuminated with countless illustrative episodes and anecdotes, usually drawn from contemporary chroniclers. What is lost in continuity of thought and logical marshaling of facts is gained in pictorial intensity and compelling interest." Nation

"In this review of the Old Regime, which he sees in its full maturity in the reign of Louis XV, M. Funck-Brentano has recovered for us not only its brilliance but its meaning. It is a book that has been needed for a long time past in England as an introduction to the works of the great French memoirists. Indeed, a social history of France from the close of the Hundred Years War to the Revolution, when French society was a hierarchy of families, noble, official, bourgeois and peasant, with the French King as the father of all. . . . The facts are related with a sparkle of narrative and illustrated with a wealth of contemporary quotation." New statesman

"About a third of the work is given to Richelieu; about a third (six chapters out of twenty) to the Fronde; and three chapters at the end are of a general nature, upon the administration, society, and religion. The reader lays aside the book with a higher estimate of Mazarin's ability and character. "As these volumes were completed in 1837, the question of their value for the present generation of readers is pertinent. No one would consult them for information upon matters in which Carlyle was not interested, such as the financial collapse which occasioned the Revolution or the social and civil institutions which grew out of it. Nevertheless, so eminent an authority as Professor Aulard regards Carlyle's work as good history. He believes that Carlyle was a true interpreter who discerned in the common people the real hero of the epic struggle. He adds that he was as well documented as the best informed of French writers in that time when the archives were still closed. . . Such annotated editions as those of Rose and Fletcher are useful because Carlyle's individual statements often require the correction of later knowledge." Guide to hist. lit.

"[The author] combines a detailed survey of the main events and the byways of the Revolution with a . . . discussion of its economic and philosophical origins. He is not impartial. . . M. Gaxotte looks on the Revolution as a Communist experiment, and a poor one." Spectator
"As a work of art it is excellent reading, and as a manifesto it positively throbs with anti-Socialistic indignation. Accepted on these terms M. Gaxotte's story of the Revolution will be a useful corrective to the more romantic histories, particularly in its references to the old régime, which partisans of the Revolution have libelled and misinterpreted every bit as grossly as the Revolution has been libelled and misinterpreted by the traditionalists." French revolution and Napoleon. (American historical ser.) 1917 Holt $3 944.04

1 France—Hist.—Revolution, 1789-1799 2 Napoléon I, emperor of the French 17-8744

"The author has brought together in this volume the chapters from his 'Modern European history' that deal with the French revolution and Napoleon. He has done this for the convenience of those who wish to review that period of history, as a means to a better understanding of our present crisis. The author says, 'Between that period and our own not only are there points of interesting and suggestive comparison but there is also a distinct line of causation connecting the two.'" Book rev. digest

"The work of Professor Hazen is admirably done. He has a rare talent for the clear and compact statement of complex facts. "This volume is made up of the three chapters in Mr. Lecky's History of England during the Eighteenth Century which discuss the causes of the French Revolution and describe its progress until the outbreak of the war with England. . . .He does not treat the internal history of even the early Revolution quite in the same manner or in as much detail as if this had been his principal theme. He describes it sufficiently to make clear its influence upon English politics or upon the general European situation as this was likely sooner or later to affect England. . . The diplomatic history which led to the beginnings of war between France and the Allies and later to the outbreak of war with England are also treated in detail." H. E. Bourne in Introduction

"Work of immense influence upon opinions held in the English-speaking world concerning the destruction of the old régime and the beginnings of the new. Its influence in France has been scarcely less marked, although from the first competent scholars protested at the defects of Taine's method. . . Taine believed that his methods of investigation were rigidly scientific, but Professor Aulard has shown . . . that his researches were controlled by fixed ideas and that the bases of his conclusions were inadequate. As his work proceeded it was more and more affected by violent prejudices against the revolutionaries and their types of thought. It nevertheless remains of suggestive value for its acute observations and striking analyses." Guide to hist. lit.

"A series of studies of leaders and other prominent figures of the French revolution, the whole forming a good supplement to other histories." Wis. bul.

"These essays are throughout close packed with thought and knowledge. At once fruitful and entertaining, they present a panorama of an epoch of stirring interest and lasting importance; but they would have been easier reading if the sentences had been less frequently overloaded and unwieldly." Men and women of the French revolution. 1933 Viking press $3.75; Routledge 15s 944.04

1 France—Hist.—Revolution, 1789-1799
33-32584

Published in England under title: French revolution

Contents: Philippe-Égalite and the Orléaniste conspiracy; Comte d'Artois and the émigrés; Fouquier-Tinville and the revolutionary tribunal; Madame Roland and the salons; Charlotte Corday and liberalism; Madame Tallien and the Thermidorian reaction; Hoche and Quiberon; Mallet du Pan and conservatism; Babeuf and socialism; Fouché and dechristianisation

"In this companion work [to 'Biographical history of the French revolution' the author] relates the incidents of the French Revolution through the lives of secondary personages. We say secondary personages merely because general opinion has cast them in minor rôles. In fact, from the point of view of human interest, they yield nothing to the more notable actors. . . . It is a long time since I have read such vivid portrayal. The style is remarkable. The scholarship is exceptional." Christian science monitor

"Belloc's account of the adventure which ruined Napoleon was largely written upon the sites of the campaign which it describes. It is a military account, as sound historically as it is dramatic in narration, of the strategy of the Russian campaign and the retreat from Moscow. Many sketch maps are included." Book rev. digest

"This is the ninth volume of the series on the National history of France edited by M. Funck-Brentano, in which the events of various periods are related as far as possible as they appeared to contemporary writers and commentators. The present volume covers the period from 1799 to 1809." Book rev. digest

"Such is the perennial interest in Napoleon that a new book on this subject is sure of a welcome, provided that it has something fresh to say, some new or illuminating point of view. . . . M. Louis Madelin has already contributed 'The French Revolution' to the series, and the excellence of that work raised expectations respecting this his next book which here are amply fulfilled." in 1814 and the fall of the monarchy in 1848, comprising the reigns of three kings, Louis XVIII, Charles X and Louis Philippe. The book is not confined to political history. Several chapters are devoted to the intellectual and social life of the period." Book rev. digest

"M. Lucas-Dubreton's book is one in a series to which M. Madelin and M. Recouly are among the other contributors, and it is very high and at the same time very well deserved praise to say that the new addition is entirely worthy of the distinguished company in which it offers itself. . . If there is any criticism to be made of M. Lucas-Dubreton's book, it is that he sometimes weakens his own arguments by his neglect of what was happening in other countries other than France." Second empire, 1852-1870

‡ Second empire. 1922 Putnam $5; Hodder 2s 6d 944.07

1 France—Hist.—Second empire, 1852-1870 2 Napoléon III, emperor of the French 22-22780

"This history, written in a manner suggestive of Lytton Strachey and with an irony equal to his, covers a longer period than the title implies, since in following the involved fortunes of the Bonaparte family and in setting the stage for the history of France in the Second empire the historian is obliged to go back to the beginning of the nineteenth century. The book is also a personal narrative of Napoleon III from his birth in 1808, and follows his career as prince, president and emperor. The history is introduced by a study of Bonapartism and the growth of the Napoleonic legend." Book rev. digest

"As a piece of literary workmanship, it is exceedingly brilliant. Mr. Guedalla has the power of vivid narration, of picturesque description and penetrating phrase. . . Whatever its scholarly shortcomings, [the volume] is infused with that appealing quality, constructive imagination." Atlantic's bookshelf

Boston Transcript

"This book does not profess to be a history of Modern France. It is rather an attempt to describe the development of political thought and political parties there. 1 France—Hist.—Third republic, 1870- [28-23849]

Covers the period from 1870 to the present

"An excellent addition to M. Funck-Brentano's series of national French histories. . . Beginning with the Commune, and the supremacy of Thiers, omitting unimportant details, and advancing by regular stages, the author shows us how the Republic has triumphed over all its enemies and passed through the ambush of its young days. . . The translation is clear and easy." New statesman

"This book is interestingly written. It is not a profound and even within its limits not a wholly satisfactory work. Its frame-work and standpoint are to a considerable extent conventional and it hardly aims at impartiality." Saturday rev.

History of Italy, 1871-1915; tr. by C. M. Ady. 1929 Oxford $5; 15s 945

"Croce's sketch of Italian history covers a period of forty-five years, from the establishment of political unity in 1870 to the entry of Italy into the World war. His treatment gives dramatic interest to the thought and ideals, political life and foreign affairs of these years of peace." Book rev. digest

"Croce brings to his picture of the age succeeding 1870 all the resources of a mind steeped in knowledge of the politics and persons, the social and moral conditions of the time, as well as the acumen of the trained philosophic thinker. His method is rather that of the survey than the chronicle; but he does not neglect events, and while his style is usually sober, he can occasionally rise to a restrained and excellent eloquence. He is fortunate, too, in having found as his translator so accomplished a writer and Italian scholar as Miss Ady." Spectator

A reprint of a book originally published in 1912 in two volumes

"This work 'includes all the important happenings in politics, religion, art and social progress. Primarily devoted to Italy and Italian leaders in all fields of endeavor it nevertheless and naturally touches on the general aspects of European civilization. While intended to be what its title implies, a history of the thirteenth century only, it really covers the period from 1160 to 1300. . . A comprehensive chronological and bibliographical appendix and a carefully made index add considerably to the value of the book to students.'" N.Y. Sun

Menace of fascism. 1933 Covici $2.25; Gollancz 5s 945

1 Fascism 33-29623

"An exposition of the meaning of fascism, in which the author traces its background, discusses its economic causes, explains its first efforts to gain a foothold in any social system, how it develops in the life of a political organism until it is able to seize the power, and what are its ultimate purposes." Book rev. digest

"Not only has Mr. Strachey a good intellect and a brilliant, forceful pen, but he has also the immense advantage of understanding an Anglo-Saxon point of view. He refrains from the language of class hatred and unreason which destroys the persuasiveness of so much Communist literature. He appeals to enthusiasms which an Englishman or an American can appreciate. His analysis of the character and working of Fascism is cogent and lucid." Christian science monitor

Lea, Henry Charles

History of the Inquisition of Spain. 4v 1906-07 Macmillan ea $2.50; ea 12s 6d 946

1 Inquisition 6-2996

An authoritative history of an institution which influenced Spanish history and to some extent the history of the world. Based on a vast amount of material drawn from archives

"In style and treatment the book shows to the full the qualities so long familiar in Mr. Lea's work—the same wealth of detail, the same direct dependence on the sources, the same avoidance of polemics and all rhetorical amplification. It is everywhere the work of one who still believes that the history of jurisprudence is the history of civilization." Amer. hist. rev.

1 Spain 2 Spain—Hist. 30-26959

"A general study of modern Spain as influenced by the nature of the people, the topography, and the rulers. The book is divided into four parts: Land, people and history; 'School and larder;' The elements of the reign of Alfonso XIII; and The reign of Alfonso XIII. The author is a Spanish scholar who has spent fifteen years collecting his material." Book rev. digest

"It is admirably written, alive and sensitive throughout its five hundred pages. It is full of concise, luminous sentences which, although they may not immediately carry conviction, will be most convincing to those who know Spain best, and are often fraught with far-reaching implications." Published in England under title: "Philip II" (3v Routledge ea 6s)

An admirable work, marked by careful research and impartiality, first published 1855

"Count d'Haussonville ranks the incomplete 'Philip II' as Prescott's best work. That is a dictum hard to accept. The author's attitude towards his central figure is less slashing than Motley's, less appreciative than Martin Hume's. In so much it may be called just, but there is a certain meagreness in the treatment." Cambridge history of American literature

"Professor Sedgwick says that his book 'is intended for the ignorant and the indolent, for passengers in steamer chairs, bound on their first voyage to Vigo or Barcelona, for freshmen or sixth-formers that wish to learn, with the least expenditure of effort.' His book does for Spain what his 'Short history of Italy' does for that country. It embraces two thousand years and devotes a generous proportion of its space to literature and art." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Sedgwick is sympathetic and honest. In matters of art he is arbitrary; as to literature he admits of a slight dogmatism. Politics is allowed space merely as the servant of the arts. Brevity and simplicity greet one throughout his book. He loves Spain and he has done well by her." Literary rev.

"In this restrained account of a subject which has given rise to acute controversy Professor A. S. Turberville takes pains to enable the reader to see so far as possible through the eyes of its contemporaries . . . He explains the various natures of the processes of the Inquisition, arbitrary and irregular as many of them were; touches on its tortures and names some of those who were its victims, among them priests, bishops, abbots, and even a Primate of Spain, and some who now rank as canonized Saints of the Roman church." Contents: From the beginning to 1504, by R. Beazley; From 1505 to 1800, by N. Forbes; From 1801 to 1917, by G. A. Birkett. Bibliography and maps

"A brief history of Russia from the romantic period of the Vikings and traders to the abdication of Nicholas II, a survey forming an excellent background for the study of present conditions. Describes the building of the Empire through perpetual wars and annexation, the growth of German influence, the infiltration of western ideas and the accumulation of those political and social problems which culminated in the Revolution." 1 Russia—Hist. 2 Russia—Pol. & govt. 3 European war, 1914-1918—Russia 4 Russia—Soc. condit. 5 Russia—Econ. condit. 31-13362

"Dr. Florinsky has told the story of Russian defeat and Czarist collapse with a fine restraint and detachment, concretely, concisely and clearly. He has let the pulse of the plot assert itself under the straightforward narrative and analysis, without his own stimulation. His methodical story of Russian breakdown under the stress of the war . . . becomes an epitome of Russian history during more than a half century before the outbreak of the war and reaching forward into a future as yet uncharted." N.Y. Times

"The account presented is the best and most scholarly work on the causes of the Russian revolution that has thus far appeared in any language." Amer. hist. rev.

G. M. Paléologue's "An ambassador's memoirs" (2d ed 3v 1923-1924 Doubleday, Doran ea $3.50, set $10) by the French ambassador to Russia contains much valuable material for both student and general reader on Russia during the war years up to the revolution, 1914 to May 1917

Kornilov, Aleksander

Modern Russian history; tr. and extended by A. S. Kaun. 1924 Knopf o.p. 1933 947

1 Russia—Hist. 25-26127

A reprint of the 1916 two volume edition to which has been added a classified bibliography and a new introduction

"An admirably written and reliable social and cultural history of the Russian people during the nineteenth century, by a professor in the College of Peter the Great, Petrograd. The later chapters which deal with the period from 1894 to 1914 are written by the translator, Alexander Kaun, who does not attempt to emulate the impartial attitude of Professor Kornilov and shows his sympathy with the movements which led to the Revolution." 1 Russia—Hist. 2 Russia—Soc. condit.

"For those who are interested in Russia and its background, this is an excellent book. It begins with a geographical survey and tells something of Russia before the Russians. It follows the history up to the fall of the monarchy." Providence

"Prince Mirsky's history is not, as he says, a substitute for other histories, and might, indeed, be better read together with them. But it displays, as the works of 'single-minded' historians do not always do, the many sides of Russian culture and gives much information which for English readers was formerly found, when to be found at all, only after diligent research." * History of Russia; tr. by E. Aronsberg, ed by F. A. Golder. 1925 Macmillan $2; 10s 947

"It outlines the whole evolution of Russia. The author is one of the greatest living historians; this means that the book is good, competent, and scientific. The bibliography at the end which was added by the editor and translator is incomplete and somewhat accidental." Yale review

"The best parts of a good book, as might have been expected, are those which deal with periods which Professor Platonov has made specially his own. The earlier history of Russia is admirably told." Times (London) lit. sup.

Vernadskiĭ, Georgiĭ Vladimirovich
History of Russia. rev ed 1930 Yale univ. press $4, text ed $3; Oxford 18s 947

1 Russia—Hist. 30-24699

"To the present edition has been added a new chapter concerning the events of the year 1929. The entire text of the volume has been reviewed, some new data have been utilized, and occasional inadvertencies have been eliminated. The bibliography has been enlarged." Note to revised edition

"The peculiar value of Mr. Vernadsky's book lies in the proofs it gives that the Russian Revolution did not represent a breach with Russian tradition, but rather a return into one of its earlier channels. The sources of this tradition, were, of course, various; and Mr. Vernadsky has done well in calling special attention to the Oriental affinities of the Russian people, who for centuries were subject to powerful Asiatic empires, Iranian or Mongolian, while Russia still occupies enormous territories in Asia. In his presentment of the various developments Mr. Vernadsky shows admirable restraint. Equally detached is his somewhat detailed description of the Soviet system and its results; and this makes his judgment on the character of this system all the more impressive." Lances down; between the fires in Moscow. 1932 Bobbs $3 947.084

1 Russia—Hist.—Revolution, 1917- 32-32394

Sequel to "Way of the lancer," class 940.48, telling the author's experiences in Moscow during the 1917 revolution

"There are no half-way measures here. There is no tempering of the wind. The book is positive in quality throughout. It is a diet of raw meat, served without condiments. Boleslavski, as it were, dares people to read him. It is also a sagacious book. Unless, with a surfeit of books on the Red Revolution one has supped too full of horrors already, 'Lances Down' must be added to one's reading." N.Y. Times

Florinskiĭ, Mikhail Timofeevich
World revolution and the U.S.S.R. 1933 Macmillan $2; 8s 6d 947.084

1 Russia—For. rel. 2 Communist International 3 Socialism in Russia 4 Bolshevism
33-24063

"Dr. Florinsky's book is a lucid account of the changes that have taken place in the attitude of the Soviet rulers toward the question of world revolution. That this attitude is fundamentally different from what it was in Lenin's time is one of the few cardinal facts about Russia concerning which there is no room for doubt. . . In addition to this his book throws much light on the whole Soviet story, and especially on the part which the canonization of Lenin has played in it." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 Russia—Hist.—Revolution, 1917- 27-23536

"A complete account of the memorable nine months in which Kerensky sought to unite Russia, and failed. Few will agree with the reasons for his failure, but all will read this account with interest." Chicago

"In vivid, dramatic prose, M. Kerensky describes the part played by himself in the Revolution of 1917. He also gives us a lucid and convincing account of the circumstances that preceded it. His book deserves attention for two reasons. As a kaleidoscope of Russian life during the period covered it is uncommonly fascinating; and it throws important sidelights upon the inner working of events." Nation and Athenaeum

E. A. Ross's "Russian Bolshevik revolution" (1921 Appleton-Century $3) is one of the good early accounts of the Kerensky period and the October revolutions written from an impartial point of view

Crucifixion of liberty. 1934 Day $2.75; Barker 15s 947.084

1 Russia—Hist.—Revolution, 1917- 34-27114

"Alexander Kerensky, who was for a few months in 1917 head of the provisional government in Russia, sketches the history of the revolutionary movement which began with the liberation of the peasants in 1861 and ended in November 1917, with the advent of bolshevism." Book rev. digest

"In this volume M. Kerensky comes forward as the advocate of a lost cause—his own rehabilitation. . . . He tries to show that his actions were logical, that his statements were reasonable, that various accusations made against him by Trotsky, Milyukov and other historians of the Revolution are based on prejudice. . . . Much more interesting, therefore, is the earlier portion of the book in which the writer describes the old régime into which he was born." Times (London) lit. sup.

Mavor, James

* Russian revolution. 1928 Macmillan $7.50; Allen, G. 21s 947.084

1 Russia—Hist.—Revolution, 1917- 2 Russia—Econ. condit. [28-26714]

"A sequel to the author's 'Economic history of Russia' [noted class 947] this volume traces the history of the social and political changes wrought by the Revolution of 1917, emphasizing the economic legislation and administration of the Soviet government. The first three chapters deal with the interval between 1907 and 1917." Pittsburgh

"Professor Mavor for many years held the chair of Economics at Toronto and made a special study of Russian economic history. He knew Russia well before the War and read Russian. In his last book he tried to give an accurate and unimpassioned account of the revolution and to estimate its effects. Nothing could be more effective as criticism than this plain statement." Bain, Robert Nisbet

Scandinavia; a political history of Denmark, Norway and Sweden from 1513 to 1900. (Cambridge historical ser.) 1905 Cambridge univ. press o.p. 1933 948

1 Scandinavia—Hist. 5-8752

A comprehensive history of the Scandinavian countries. The author says in the preface that "the present volume is, mainly, an attempt to describe the rise of the Scandinavian Kingdoms to political eminence, and their corresponding influence on European politics, generally." The greater part of the volume is devoted to Sweden's history. Five pages of bibliography and maps are included

30-30010

"The first English translation [by J. W. Hartmann and H. A. Larsen] of a book published a generation ago, and chiefly valuable for the light it throws on some sections of the Norse myths and sagas." Pittsburgh

"A clear and concise portrayal of the rise and growth of the Viking age in Norse history. Mr Olrik, a distinguished Danish scholar, discusses the development of Viking myths and legends, romantic sagas and art. Two chapters are given to Iceland and its sagas and Icelandic scholars. A final chapter takes up the era of the ballads." Book rev. digest

T. D. Kendrick's "History of the vikings" (1930 Scribner $5; Methuen 18s) is a comprehensive, scholarly study of Scandinavian history during the Viking period

Stefánsson, Jón

* Denmark and Sweden with Iceland and Finland. (Story of the nations) 1917 Putnam $3 948

1 Denmark 2 Sweden 3 Iceland 4 Finland
18-26168

"In the arrangement of the book, the section devoted to Denmark's history is followed by a brief chapter on Iceland, the section on Sweden by a short sketch of Finland after its separation from Sweden, 1809-1914. The treatment in each case is necessarily sketchy but the author has succeeded in presenting an outline of the main political events from Viking days to the present. Viscount Bryce contributes a preface. There are thirty-three illustrations and a map, a 'synchronistic table of events' and index." Book rev. digest

948.1 Norway

Gathorne-Hardy, Geoffrey Malcolm

* Norway. (Modern world) 1925 Scribner $5; Benn 15s 948.1

1 Norway [26-26030]

"An essay packed with information. The language, literature, and history of the country are given such an adequate treatment that the later chapters dealing with problems of today are not quite so full as might be desired. Even so, the discussion of industrial, shipping, and agricultural developments is most suggestive, while the prohibition experiment and the troubles in the Church have particular interest for America." 1 Sweden—Hist. 26-5194

"Stories of Swedish heroes chronologically arranged to form a history of the country from the Stone Age to the beginning of the nineteenth century. Told with poetic imagination suitable to young readers." Pratt quarterly

"The technique of the book is simple and orthodox, far removed from the technique of our present-day sophisticated historians; but its aims are far removed also. Here are sagas and battle-pieces and chronicles simple and clear in their architecture and their style. They constitute an effective arrangement of the high points in Sweden's history." 24-2336

"Beginning with the legends and traditions concerning the discovery of Iceland by the Phœnicians and, later, by the Norsemen, the history of Iceland is brought down through the centuries to the present. Includes chapters on the literature, ancient and modern, and information on art, education, and economic conditions." Pittsburgh

"As a whole, the book is sound and scholarly. Moreover, it constitutes the first real history of Iceland in English, and is perhaps the best work on the subject in any language, with the possible exception of Icelandic." Amer. hist. rev.

Maps on end papers. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Mavrogordato is Greek in descent, not only in name, but in mind. In easy, well-modulated tones, broken by an occasional burst of fun or thrust at moral hypocrisy, he has embraced the political, economic, and cultural chronicle of modern Greece within the compass of a small book. "This discussion of the new Balkans is clear, interesting, and easy to follow, and will give the reader an intelligent grasp of the contending claims and disputes which form obstacles in the way of peace among the Balkan states. The Professor of History at Harvard university writes the introduction. The book is illustrated with a full-page map of the Balkan peninsula, and with smaller maps of the areas under dispute." Book rev. digest

"To Americans this volume brings its own welcome. All who read it have a more intelligent interest in the peoples with whom it deals because of a clearer knowledge of the problems which confront them and which require the highest statesmanship to solve wisely. The author is especially well qualified by general historical knowledge of his subject, as well as by personal observation and acquaintance with the countries and peoples concerned, to clearly present and fairly appraise the merits on both sides of the questions which he discusses." 1 Eastern question (Far East) 2 China—Pol. & govt. 3 Japan—Pol. & govt. 4 China—For. rel. 5 Japan—For. rel. 16-18764

This book attempts to give within a single cover a brief account of Chinese politics, of Japanese politics and of some of the outstanding features of the international situation in the Far East. As much history has been included as was necessary to the clear understanding of the political developments. Rather than giving personal opinions the author has given first place to statements of facts and quotations from documents. Adapted from Preface

"At time of publication, the best and most impartial study of its subject. While some new material has since become available, it remains of great permanent value and may be reckoned among the books essential for an understanding of the course of events in the Far East since 1898. Publicist's treatment rather than a historian's." Guide to hist. lit.

Hutchinson, Paul

Storm over Asia. 1932 Holt $3 950

1 Asia—Politics 2 Eastern question (Far East) 32-32771

"An authoritative survey of the situation in the Orient. Recent developments in Japan, China, India and Russia are described with the manner in which they all contributed to the general upheaval. This work provides the general reader with an accurate picture of current issues in the East, and is a help to the understanding of the politics of oriental peoples." Ontario library review

"The book deals with the internal and external problems of China and Japan and with the grand question of East versus West. It presents one of the few synthetic interpretations of China which approach adequacy, and covers almost every phase of the stupendous process of ferment, experiment, and adaptation now taking place in that vast country. Restless Pacific. 1928 Scribner $3; 12s 6d 950

1 Pacific ocean 2 Eastern question (Far East) 3 World politics 4 U.S.—For. rel. 28-11419

"Since the theater of world events has shifted from the Atlantic to the Pacific and the United States has become one of the three domminating powers in the Pacific area new international problems have arisen in which the United States has a vital interest. The book argues that the interests of the United States demand that no nation or group of nations becomes sufficiently strong to disturb the balance of power, and that a strong navy is required to uphold the arm of diplomacy and 'maintain the peace.'" Book rev. digest

"He has done a highly creditable piece of work, but the book is marred by a style that makes it difficult to see and remember what some of the chapters are about, and by the methods of a publicist with a point of view to 'put over' rather than by those of a scientist seeking the truth only. Nevertheless, the book is a good one." Yale review

1 East (Far East) 2 Eastern question (Far East) 3 China—For. rel. 4 Japan—For. rel. 28-15605

The author states in the preface that "the purpose of this survey of the political and diplomatic history of the Far East is to furnish a text-book for students and a reference work for general readers in a field which is rapidly assuming more importance and merits greater consideration." The book is divided into three parts: China to 1895, Japan to 1895 and the Far East, 1895-1927, the latter section giving enough of the history of the neighboring countries to make a complete account. 1 China—Hist. 28-11331

"'A program of national reconstruction for China,' written in 1918 by the first provisional president of the Chinese Republic. In this book Sun Yat Sen hoped to make clear the falsity of the proverb, treasured and believed for two thousand years, 'actions are difficult, but knowledge is easy.' This saying he regarded as the most powerful enemy of his plans for the new China. Valuable as the opinions of the chief instigator of the revolution which brought about the downfall of the Manchu dynasty." Cleveland

The author of this defense of Japan's position is the Washington correspondent of a Tokyo newspaper. The Chinese viewpoint is presented in "China speaks" by Chih Meng (class 951)

"Mr. Kawakami is . . . of course, a propagandist when he writes on Japan for Occidental consumption. The tone of his argument is, however, restrained, and if he does not always tell the whole truth he is too well seasoned in publicity to support his apologia for Japan with anything but the truth. His book is a thoroughly honest sketch of the background and present scene of the conflict of ambitions in the East as every intelligent and patriotic Japanese sees them." Books (N.Y. 1 India—Hist. 2 Delhi—Siege, 1857 3 Cawnpore—Siege, 1857 4 Lucknow—Siege, 1857 33-4045

"Concerned with the central events of the mutiny, when a handful of Englishmen managed to stand against the native army. There are descriptions and character estimates of leaders on both sides, and many anecdotes of heroic deeds, of sudden death, of thrilling courage, and of dramatic climaxes to long suspense. Partial contents: Mutiny in Delhi; Cawnpore; The prelude to tragedy; Lucknow; Capture of Delhi; The second relief of Lucknow; The aftermath." Ontario library review

W. H. Fitchett's "Tale of the great mutiny" (1901 Murray, J. 6s) is another readable account of the Sepoy mutiny

Hull, William Isaac
India's political crisis. (Johns Hopkins univ. studies in history and political science) 1930 Johns Hopkins $2; Oxford 9s 954

1 India—Pol. & govt. 30-5050

"A brief scholarly account of the situation in India in 1929 and of the events and aspirations leading to it. The treatment is detached and non-partisan." Pratt quarterly

"On the whole, the picture he gives is remarkably free from those larger inaccuracies which often are noticeable in the case of a newcomer who has to decide on the spot the proportions to be given to different contending parties. . . It is only in minor details that the book is defective—such as the inaccurate spelling of Indian proper names and some of the facts regarding the historical situation in the past. . . The book can be strongly recommended as a valuable document on Indian affairs today, written at the very centre of the struggle." World tomorrow

Hunter, Sir William Wilson
Brief history of the Indian peoples; ed by W. H. Hutton. 23d ed 1903 Oxford $1.50; 4s 954

1 India—Hist. 4-18013

First published in 1880. This edition brings the chronicle down to 1903. It is suitable for the ordinary reader, and for use as a textbook. The author's aim is to exhibit the growth of the Indian peoples, and to show the part they have played in the world's progress

Marriott, Sir John Arthur Ransome
English in India; a problem of politics. 1932 Oxford $3.75; 12s 6d 954

1 India—Pol. & govt. 2 India—Hist. 3 British in India [32-26657]

"An attempt to analyze the difficult and anxious problems arising out of the circumstances unique in the history of mankind." Preface

"The book is an account, as comprehensive as the limits of space permit, of the relations between Great Britain and India: how the British came to be associated with India; how their power has been exercised; and how the politicians of both countries are working toward a settlement of India's constitutional problem." Book rev. digest

The author "has done his work well. He has used his abundant material with skill and discrimination, and has produced an excellent survey, succinct yet always readable, of a subject which affords almost unlimited temptations to digression. Above all he has approached his task in a judicial spirit and with an absence of partisanship which, on so controversial a topic, is especially commendable." Spectator

A readable account of the history and social conditions of this early period, many centuries before the Christian era, based on what is found in the Rig Veda itself

"Mediaeval India under Mohammedan rule, 712-1764," by Stanley Lane-Poole (1903 Putnam o.p. 1933) is another book in the same series which gives an interesting account of the Muslim conquest of India

Smith, Vincent Arthur

‡ Oxford history of India from the earliest times to the end of 1911. 2d ed rev and continued to 1921, by S. M. Edwards 1923 Oxford $5; 14s 954

1 India—Hist. 30-23752

"An admirable book of reference rather than a philosophic history." Times (London) lit. sup.

"Dr Vincent Smith is one of the most distinguished of the scholar-administrators of whom the Indian civil service is justly proud. He is a veteran in historical studies. Unlike most of his predecessors, he carefully cites at the end of each of his chapters the authorities on whom he relies. It is noticeable that among these are quoted with hearty gratitude and approval many native Indian scholars of our own time. Dr Smith's business is with facts, not with generalized interpretations of them." Spectator

Contains illustrations, maps and plans

The author's "Oxford student's history of India" (13th ed 1931 Oxford $1.35; 4s) is a much shorter account of Indian history but gives a fuller treatment of the early and Mohammedan period

Thompson, Edward John

* Reconstructing India. 1930 Dial press $4; Faber 7s 6d 954

1 India—Pol. & govt. 2 Gt. Brit.—Colonies—India 30-25496

English edition has title: Reconstruction of India

"Mr Thompson outlines the history of the British-Indian question in the first part of this volume; part two is a discussion of politics in India; part three contains a final plea for dominion status as solution of the difficulties." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Edward Thompson, as one 'above the battle,' has written just such a fair, well-balanced and compelling book as the situation demands. No praise can be too high for his manner of treating the major problem of our time. It is a book which, for the first time, places the British-Indian question in proper perspective." Spectator

"The author was born in India and lived there for many years in various official positions. While sympathizing with the Indian nationalist movement he is a firm believer in the British rule." Pratt quarterly

"Few Englishmen are as well qualified as Sir Francis Younghusband to understand and explain the Hindu point of view, while his long experience of the Frontier, and his knowledge of certain backward Indian States, where spirituality was at a discount, have prevented him from drifting into the sentimental approach to Indian questions which repels so many more people than it attracts." Nation and Athenaeum

Lord Meston's "Nationhood for India" (1931 Yale univ. press $1.50; Oxford 5s) is another discussion of the Indian situation by a competent observer. He believes that "the real driving force behind India's discontent and claims is the spirit of Hinduism."

Books dealing with the history of ancient Persia are classed in 935

A. C. Millspaugh's "American task in Persia" (1925 Century o.p. 1933) is an account of the problems met by the American financial commission sent to Persia in 1922, and also a picture of the social and political conditions of the country

Sykes, Sir Percy Molesworth

Persia. 1922 Oxford $2.50; 7s 6d 955

1 Persia—Hist. 23-4737

Persian history from the earliest times to the close of the World war compressed into less than two hundred pages. Based on the author's longer authoritative "History of Persia," published in 1915 (3d ed 1930 Macmillan $25; 42s)

"As a sketch, nothing could be better. The story is so full of interest, especially in the pre-Christian era, that readers will assuredly go on to the author's standard history." Spectator

1 Armenia 2 Levant—Descr. & trav. 3 Georgia (Transcaucasia) 4 Reconstruction (1914-)—Armenia [28-21499]

An account of the survey made by Dr. Nansen, as head of a commission informally sponsored by the League of Nations, to see what could be done to repatriate Armenian refugees on reclaimed land within the territories of present soviet Armenia. First published in Norwegian under the title: Gjennem Armenia

"The Armenians are a sorely tried race and Dr. Nansen's chapters are of sombrely terrible interest. There is also much concerning the prospects and resources of a country about which very little is generally known." Spectator

Kevork Aslan's "Armenia and the Armenians from the earliest times until the Great war (1914); tr. from the French by Pierre Crabités" (1930 Macmillan $1.40) is, on the whole, a fair and unbiased account by an Armenian historian

Mrs F. F. P. Andrews's "Holy Land under mandate" (2v 1931 Houghton $10; Allen, G. 50s) is an important work for larger libraries. It covers fully the history of Palestine since 1919, the period of the British mandatory power. N. De M. Bentwich's "England in Palestine" (1932 Routledge 12s 6d) is a trustworthy, concise account of the British occupation written by a man who was for years a high official in the administration

Palestine; the rebirth of an ancient people. 1917 Sidgwick 12s 6d 956.9

Formerly carried also by Knopf

"A detailed presentation of the social, economic, and agricultural conditions in modern Palestine, accompanied by a brief survey of the history of the country since the time of Roman occupation. . . What Palestine needs, Mr Hyamson states, is, first, a new vitalized western population, secondly, roads, railways and harbors, and above all a wise, just and stable government. Since the sorry events of Turkish misrule following the war, the Jews of Palestine hope for local autonomy under the protection of a Protestant power that will see fair play between the different elements of the population." "Miss MacCallum tells the complete story of how and why the Syrian rebellion started, how it spread, together with the political, racial, economic and general causes behind it." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"Miss MacCallum's book must be unreservedly commended as admirable in balance and proportion and in the fullness and acccuracy of its presentation of her subject. It is not often that a writer who feels as strongly as she does writes with such restraint and fairness throughout." Times (London) lit. sup.

Rappoport, Angelo S.
* History of Palestine. 1931 Dutton $3.50; Allen, G. 12s 6d 956.9
1 Palestine—Hist. [31-15115]

"A history of Palestine covering in part one pre-Israelite Palestine; in part two Palestine from the conquest of Canaan to the conquest by Rome; in part three Palestine from 70 A.D. to the present (1930). The text of the League of nations mandate for Palestine is given in full in the last chapter. Includes a map of modern Palestine, a chronology, a bibliography, and index." Book rev. digest

"The appeal of the book is twofold; first it is addressed to Biblical students, and only secondly to students of human culture generally, the result, of course, being that the trend of the book is always towards the corroboration of Jewish history and legend and that much space is devoted to the historical period. The most interesting part of the narrative, however, is that in which Dr. Rappoport endeavours to reconstruct for us that land of Canaan in which the intruding Israelites came as marauders and conquerors." "In this little book Mr. Stein briefly summarizes the main points in the history of Syria since the expulsion of the Turks in 1918, and explains with an admirable impartiality the difficulties with which the French have been faced in their administrative experiences and experiments. Few people personally unacquainted with that country appreciate the complexity of the religious and racial problems which vex Syria. These Mr. Stein explains on broad lines." Harris, Norman Dwight
Europe and Africa. (International politics) 1927 Houghton $4 960
1 Africa—Colonization 27-4161

"The present work is a revised edition of ['Intervention and colonization in Africa']. The Great War, the establishment of the Mandate System in Africa, the introduction of Indian labor into the Dark Continent, and the creation of an independent Egypt have necessitated important changes in the relation of European states to African communities. And the forward march of events, accompanied by new and noteworthy developments—both political and economic—during the decade which has elapsed since the publication of the first edition, have made it imperative that the volume be brought down to date." Preface

"Only the development of the larger representative colonies under English, German, French or Belgian administration is traced—those of little importance to the history of Africa have been omitted. Maps, bibliography, index." Book rev. digest

Lane-Poole, Stanley, and Kelley, James Douglas Jerrold

1 Barbary States—Hist. 2 Pirates 4-17680

"Mr. Poole has made the most of his materials, and given us a very entertaining volume. There is not much intrinsic importance in the story he has to tell, but the presence of the Corsairs at the siege of Malta and at Lepanto enables him to add to its interest and substance by his well-written descriptions of those striking and memorable events." Spectator

Lucas, Sir Charles Prestwood

Partition & colonization of Africa. 1922 Oxford $4.25; 12s 6d 960

1 Africa—Colonization 2 Africa—Hist. 22-21426

"Not so much a history of Africa as a history of Africa's relationship with the rest of the world, from ancient times up to the League of Nations. A brief and concise but clear survey." Cleveland

"Sir Charles Lucas was for long a distinguished official of the Colonial Office at Whitehall. The book itself had its origin in lectures delivered at the Royal Colonial Institute to a study circle of teachers of the London County Council. His lectures are, for the most part, a bare record of facts, of the slave trade and the explorations, of missionary enterprise, of the scramble for and partition of Africa, and of the African campaigns of the great war. In so far as any historian can be impartial and objective, Sir Charles Lucas succeeds in being so; his facts are facts, and no one can possibly deny it . . . They are official facts recorded in Blue Books and White Books, sanctified in State Papers, and apotheosised in imperial histories. And only the official facts find a place in Sir Charles Lucas's pages." New statesman

Smuts, Jan Christiaan

Africa and some world problems. 1930 Oxford $2.50; 7s 6d 960

1 Africa—Race question 2 Africa—Native races 3 Livingstone, David 4 League of nations 5 Democracy 30-13996

These Rhodes memorial lectures, 1929, include six addresses: Livingstone and after; African settlement; Native policy in Africa; World-peace; Future tasks of the empire; Democracy

"General Smuts . . . stands for international peace and justice between races; and his lectures . . . offer a valuable contribution towards solving two of the greatest contemporary problems of politics, the adjustment of international differences and the government of African peoples. . . His discourses on the League and on Democracy, where he repeats the current view of the 'expert' as a sort of scientist, do not deal with the fundamentals, but are valuable statements of generally accepted ideas." 962 Egypt

Churchill, Winston Leonard Spencer

River war; an account of the reconquest of the Sudan. Scribner $2.75; Eyre 7s 6d 962

1 Sudan, Egyptian 33-16061

Reprint of a book first published 1899. Recounts the history of Lord Kitchener's campaign in 1896 to 1899 which resulted in the conquest of the Egyptian Sudan

"There is something of the younger Kipling's temper about the story, but here the events are actual, and the accounts of such exploits as Omdurman and the charge of the 21st Lancers, for instance, could not be surpassed in vivid narration by any purely imaginative literature." New statesman and Nation

Cromer, Evelyn Baring, 1st earl of Modern Egypt. 2v in 1 1916 Macmillan $4.50 962

1 Egypt—Hist. 2 Egypt—Pol. & govt. A16-801

A narrative of the events in Egypt and the Soudan 1876-1907, and a statement of the results which have accrued to Egypt from the British occupation of the country in 1882. First published 1908 in 2 volumes. Map

"He writes with a largeness of view, a generosity of temper, and a sense of responsibility which belong characteristically to the man who has been at the helm of Egypt through his eventful and fruitful quarter of a century." Athenaeum

"Egypt since Cromer" by Lord G. A. Lloyd (v1-2 1933-34 Macmillan v1 $5.50, v2 $7.50; v1 21s) forms a sequel to Lord Cromer's book. Volume one covers the years 1904 to 1919; volume two deals with the years from 1920 to the present

Elgood, Percival George

Transit of Egypt. 1928 Longmans $7.50; Arnold, E. & co. 18s 962

1 Egypt—Hist. 2 Egypt—Pol. & govt. (29-4301)

"A reliable survey of Egyptian history from the time of early Persian subjection under Cambyses to the present time. The past is covered by a brief recapitulation, the larger part of the book being devoted to the story of British intervention and recent troublous days of Egyptian independence. The author has long resided in Egypt, in the service of the British ministries of war, interior, and finance, and is intimately acquainted with the personages and events of which he writes." Bkl.

"His book represents very fairly, on the whole, the average, commonsense point of view of Englishmen who have lived in Egypt and know its problems at first hand." Saturday rev.

Newman, Edward William Polson

Great Britain in Egypt. 1928 Cassell 15s 962

1 Egypt—Hist. 2 Egypt—Pol. & govt. 28-23228

"A capital popular exposition of the Egyptian problem. His is not the highest form of historical writing, but the book is useful . . . Sir John Maxwell (who has written a preface) . . . is a soldier, and Major Newman, besides being a soldier, is a traveller and a student of the Mediterranean and the Middle East. Nothing could be more pleasant and reassuring than the sympathy of these two with every reasonable Egyptian demand and their obvious desire to get inside the Egyptian mind. An Egyptian politician or a fellah able to read this book could not honestly say when he had finished it that he had found a trace of any arrogance or a desire to bully a weak country. And yet the book expresses what may be called the ordinary British opinion." Spectator

"England in Egypt," by Lord Milner, (13th ed 1920 Longmans $3; Arnold, E. & co. 8s 6d) is an earlier work of authority, first published 1899, which is still useful. The author was connected with the Egyptian administration for four years

Young, Sir George, bart.

* Egypt. (Modern world) 1927 Scribner $5; Benn 15s 962

1 Egypt—Hist. 2 Egypt—Pol. & govt. [28-2122]

"In this volume in the Modern world series, an authority on Near East politics surveys the course of events by which Egypt has arrived at its present state of self-consciousness. The author begins his story of modern Egypt a century ago, after the Napoleonic wars, and follows the development of Egyptian nationalism to the day when Egypt was declared a sovereign state. In the last few chapters he discusses the future relations of Britain, Egypt and the Sudan." Book rev. digest

964 Morocco

Harris, Walter Burton

France, Spain and the Rif. 1927 Longmans $7.50; Arnold, E. & co. 21s 964

1 Morocco—Hist. 2 French in Morocco in Morocco 3 Morocco—Hist. 26-24158

"Mr Harris introduces his account of the French and Spanish campaigns in the Rif by a description of the country itself, its inhabitants and the stock from which they spring. He then describes the separate, long drawn-out campaigns which were only terminated by the concerted action of French and Spanish forces against a common enemy. Mr Harris writes from first-hand knowledge of events, and a personal acquaintance with the leaders including the Rifian chiefs, Raisuli and later Abdel Krim. There are interesting photographs and three maps." Book rev. digest

"It is highly fitting that Mr. W. B. Harris should be the first historian in the field, as . . . he was so often first with the news. He brings to his present task the same cool detachment of view, the same all-round knowledge of the country and personal acquaintance with men like Raisuli and Abdel Krim, which were a feature of his despatches." Pechkoff, Zinovi

Bugle sounds; life in the Foreign legion. 1926 Appleton o.p. 1933 964

1 Foreign legion (French army) 2 French in Morocco 3 Morocco—Hist. 26-24158

"The entries in this diary, written by an officer of the French Foreign legion and adopted son of Maxim Gorky, begin March 2, 1923 with the legionnaires garrisoned in Morocco. It is a modest and absorbing account of the life and exploits of the Legion first in Morocco and then in Algeria and in particular its campaign in defense of the frontier tribes against the Riffians. Soldier life in camp, on the march and in battle is described, with word pictures of unusual characters and episodes." Book rev. digest

"It is a vivid, unconventionally constructed story, unexpectedly powerful and comprehensive. There is a sincerity in Major Peckkoff's writing, a deep underlying desire to tell just what the Legion is, and how and why, that differentiates his book from the various recent attempts to capitalize this romantic and exotic subject." Saturday rev. of lit.

"Royal adventurer in the Foreign legion," by Prince Aage (1927 Doubleday, Page o.p. 1933) is the account of the experiences of a Danish prince during the three years he was a member of the French Foreign Legion in Morocco. * South Africans. 1927 Liveright $3.50; Constable 7s 6d 968

1 Africa, South 2 Africa, South- Race question 27-4078

"One comes away from this beautifully written book with a clear picture of South Africa today against the background of the old South Africa, and with a new idea of the country itself, its heterogeneous people, their life and their problems, political, economic, and social. There are several photographic illustrations." Book rev. digest

"Mrs. Millin is capable, upon occasion, of being a little unfair, but she is incapable of being even a little dull. She is thus admirably equipped to hold the reader's attention while she discourses of her real theme, the everpresent problem of the natives. Her book may lead many of her countrymen to add to the amount of serious thought which they give to the subject." Times (London) lit. sup.

"I have endeavored in this work to give a bird's-eye view of life in the Union of South Africa, beginning with an account of its history and political development, a knowledge of which is necessary to understand the relationships between the different races which inhabit the Dominion. . . The second part deals with life in the Union and its problems at the present day, my object being to convey some idea of existing conditions to the reader who desires information in a small compass." 1 Africa, South—Hist. 2 Africa, South—Pol. & govt. 28-5040

"In the story an attempt has been made to show the interaction of the various States and Colonies upon one another and of world forces upon all of them, rather than to follow the history of each particular State. The main theme is not the struggle between the British and Afrikander sections of the European community for predominance, but the relations between white men on the one hand and the Bantu and coloured folk on the other." Publisher's note

"A most thorough, minute, and scholarly record and interpretation of events in South Africa from the earliest times down to 1924. The author has tried to be impartial, a most difficult task, and he has the ability to turn a happy phrase which here and there enlivens the steady outpouring of the stream of facts. "This remarkable book, written by a 21-year-old boy just after the South African war and now published after the boy has grown into middle life, fought side by side with his old enemies in the World War, and served as a Cabinet Minister and Member of Parliament under the British flag, is far more than an adventure story. . . At 17 he obtained leave from President Kruger himself to enlist in the Boer Army, and fought straight through until hostilities were ended three years later." N.Y. Times

"In view of the simple, yet strongly vivid, way in which the story is told, of the thrilling nature of the adventures and hairbreadth perils it recounts, of the revelation it offers of the soul of a people rightly struggling to be free, this book certainly achieves a greatness never before reached in the history of the Boers' fight against overwhelming odds." Spectator

1 North America—Hist. 2 Spain—Colonies 3 Canada—Hist.—To 1763 (New France) 4 U.S.—Hist.—Colonial period 29-17105

"This volume, which in chronology is the first in the 'History of American life' series, describes social and institutional life under wilderness conditions in the Spanish, French, and Dutch colonies of North America, and shows what elements in our present-day American life are derived from these earlier civilizations." Pittsburgh

"As a much needed complement to existing textbooks, this account of Spanish, French, Dutch and Swedish history in North America is highly welcome. But, better still, the author has fulfilled this task with admirable thoroughness and in a way to hold the imagination of even the laggard student. . . Mr. Priestley has added to the historical chapters a critical essay on his sources which will be of great assistance to the more serious student." Survey

970.1 Indians

A useful short bibliography prepared primarily for school use is "Indians of America; a reference list for schools and libraries," compiled by E. G. Dennis (1928 Faxon pa 50c). It is a selected annotated bibliography covering books concerning the Indians north of Mexico and more briefly those of Mexico, Central America and South America

Some of the bulletins of the Bureau of American ethnology contain much interesting and valuable information on Indian life and customs. These are listed under subject in Price list 24 published by the Superintendent of documents

Goddard, P. E. Indians of the Northwest coast. (Handbook ser. no. 10) 2d ed 1934
Goddard, P. E. Indians of the Southwest. (Handbook ser. no. 2) 4th ed 1931

Buffalo Child Long Lance, Siksika chief
Long Lance. 1928 Farrar $2.50; Faber 10s 6d 970.1

1 Siksika Indians 28-20565

"A vivid recounting of the tribal life and ceremonies of the Canadian Blackfeet by Chief Long Lance who as a boy of the tribe watched or took part in the experiences he describes. Photographs of his Blackfeet friends illustrate Chief Long Lance's story." Book rev. digest

"The autobiography of Chief Buffalo Child adds another and by no means the least, to the list of life stories of primitives by which here in America new and freshly informed concepts of the beginnings of human society are built up. . . Never has that social organization . . . been more pleasingly and precisely portrayed than by Long Lance." Sat. rev. of lit.

Crane, Leo

Desert drums. 1928 Little $3.75 970.1

1 Pueblo Indians 2 Indians of North America 28-23643

"Mr Crane has been agent for the government on four Indian reservations. . . The present volume, which is a history of the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico from 1540 to 1928, contains many interesting and amusing reminiscences from his own experiences. It is illustrated with photographs and a map." Book rev. digest

" 'Desert Drums' is a splendid picture of the New Mexican Pueblos, a picture painted skilfully upon the background of almost four centuries of history. . . Mr. Crane's style is vivid and forceful. His narrative is frequently flavored with episodes drawn from his rich store of personal experience." Nation

Three additional books on the Pueblo Indians are F. G. Applegate's "Indian stories from the Pueblos" (1929 Lippincott $2.50; 15s); Mrs E. F. Estabrook's "Givers of life; the American Indians as contributors to civilization" (1932 Jones, Marshall $2) and E. L. Hewett's "Ancient life in the American Southwest" (1930 Bobbs $3)

Indians of the enchanted desert. 1925 Little $3.75 970.1

1 Painted Desert, Ariz. 2 Navaho Indians 3 Hopi Indians 25-17104

"Life among the Hopi and Navajo Indians of Arizona, fully and entertainingly described by a superintendent of the Moqui reservation. The trials of an Indian agent, both in his relations with official Washington and in handling the tribes' affairs, anecdotes illustrative of Indian psychology, descriptions of rites, customs and of the country itself, make a book of more than usual interest and merit. Half-tone photographs." N.Y. state lib.

Eastman, Charles Alexander

From the deep woods to civilization; chapters in the autobiography of an Indian. 1916 Little $2.50 970.1

1 Dakota Indians 16-19654

"Begins where the writer's 'Indian boyhood' left off, when he left his wild life to enter mission school, and continues thru his years at Beloit and Dartmouth, his medical studies at Boston university and his subsequent work for his people as government physician and Y.M. C.A. Indian secretary. This simple sincere account not only covers the facts in the life of this nearly full-blooded Sioux Indian, but gives glimpses of his feelings, his impressions gathered in college and later life, and his aspirations for himself and his people." Cleveland

* Indian boyhood. 1902 Little $2.50 970.1

1 Dakota Indians 2-22660

"Record of the author's boyish impressions and experiences up to the age of fifteen years. Dr. Eastman is a Sioux Indian, whose younger days were passed entirely on the plains of the Northwest in the tribal life of his family." Pittsburgh

Soul of the Indian. 1911 Houghton $1.50 970.1

1 Indians of North America—Religion and mythology 11-5343

"Dr. Eastman disclaims all desire to offer an ethnological treatise. His study is the outcome of childhood teaching and ancestral ideals rather than of scientific inquiry. He attempts to show the true Indian nature freed from the prejudices and legends that prevail in the minds of white men." Book rev. digest

"Dr. Eastman's chapters . . . are extremely interesting: and if he unconsciously idealizes his fellow Indians, it is a natural and pardonable error." Dial

Cheyenne Indians, their history and ways of life. 2v 1923 Yale univ. press $10; Oxford 45s 970.1

1 Cheyenne Indians 23-17688

Recounts briefly their early history and pictures in great detail their manner of life, religious, social and industrial. Many excellent illustrations and an index

"Mr. Grinnell has, through vast industry, collected and put into excellent form much valuable information concerning this vanishing people who, in the lapse of another century, will have perished or become absorbed into our civilization." Boston Transcript

The author has written other books on Indians and their customs. Two desirable ones are: "Fighting Cheyennes" (1915 Scribner $4) primarily a history of the wars of this tribe but also describes their customs and social organization; and "Indians of to-day." (rev ed 1911 Duffield o.p. 1933) an older book with chapters on beliefs, dances, education, etc.

Hinman, George Warren

1 Indians of North America—Missions 33-8693

"The author who is secretary of the American Missionary Association [1933] limits his study of Christian missions among the American Indians largely to the nineteenth century and after, and to the work of Protestant missions. Contents: The religion of the Indian; Missions and wars; Among Indians in the South; In the Oregon country; The Dakota missions; A challenge to cooperation; Transplanted churches; Indians in the Southwest; A review of present conditions." Book rev. digest

"The author's treatment is fair and judicious in a field where these qualities are difficult. This is, without doubt, the best general book on Indian missions." Christian century

Hodge, Frederick Webb

McClintock, Walter

Old Indian trails. 1923 Houghton $5 970.1

1 Siksika Indians 23-9781

"In 1896 the author went to northwestern Montana on a government forestry expedition. A Blackfoot Indian acted as guide and when the last survey had been made . . . Mr McClintock stayed behind with his Indian scout, joined the camp of the Blackfoots and became a member of the tribe. . . His book is a record of this fifteen years' association with the Blackfoot chiefs, medicine men, and common people. [Illustrations]" Book rev. digest

"Very few white men have had so rare an opportunity for study and observation as Dr. McClintock. And how rarely he profited by it, this book, as fascinating as a record of out-of-door adventure, as valuable for reference, attests." Boston Transcript

* Story of the red man. 1929 Longmans $5; 21s 970.1

1 Indians of North America—Hist. 2 Indians of North America—Wars 29-19704

The author is an authority on Indian affairs and a member of the Board of Indian Commissioners

"Beginning with the coming of the white man, the author traces the history of his relation to the Indian, knowing how the latter has been forced steadily back from one successive frontier to another until the defeat of the last of the rebels, Sitting Bull, in 1890, proclaimed the white man victor. Three chapters, on The red man at school, The red man and the land, and The red man at home, survey his present status. Sympathetic to the Indian, but not biased. Well illustrated and supplied with maps." Wis. bul.

1 New France—Disc. & explor. 2 Canada—Hist.—To 1763 (New France) 18-16740

"'A chronicle of the fleur-de-lis in the wilderness,' describing the governmental and religious solidarity of the French Régime in Canada during the seventeenth century. Includes encounters with the Indians, the work of the Jesuits and interpretations of Cartier, Colbert, Richelieu, La Salle, Father Brébeuf and Bishop Laval." Cleveland

"The last five chapters [are] an interesting corrective to Parkman. Mr. Munro shows that the organization of New France was far better adapted to Canadian conditions than generally supposed." Dial

"Account of the courage and sacrifice of Jesuit missionaries in efforts to Christianize the Indians. Opening chapter a truthful picture of savage life and manners." N.Y. state lib.

* Old régime in Canada. (France and England in North America, pt 4) Centenary ed Little $3; Macmillan 10s 971

1 Canada—Hist.—To 1763 (New France) 15-28009

"The monarchial administration of France, at the height of its power and at the moment of its supreme triumph, stretched an arm across the Atlantic and grasped the North American continent. This volume attempts to show by what methods it strove to make good its hold, why it achieved a certain kind of success, and why it failed at last." Preface

Canadian federation; its origins and achievement; a study in nation building. 1924 Dent 7s 6d 971

1 Canada—Hist. 24-30504

An authoritative book when one is needed on the period in Canadian history which culminated in the confederation of 1867. Suggested by Canadian librarians. Contains a detailed bibliography

"Primarily it is an account of the circumstances which made federation not only possible, but also timely, necessary, and even, one is tempted to say, inevitable." Preface

Vandiveer, Clarence A.

Fur-trade and early western exploration. 1929 Clark, A.H. $6 971

1 Fur trade 2 Northwest, Canadian—Disc. & explor. 3 The West—Disc. & explor. 29-7510

"A sober, reliable and readable account of the American fur trade, from the explorations of the early trappers to the rise and decline of the great fur companies. The narrative is continuous, and concludes with special chapters devoted to the 'free' traders, the coureurs de bois, the fur posts and the life there led. There are illustrations and an analytical index." N.Y. Evening post

"Mr. Vandiveer writes interestingly and the book is well worth reading. Its value to the historian of specialized interests is distinctly limited, however. There is no bibliography and only occasionally are the writer's sources mentioned in the text itself. . . Though there are several fine illustrations, not a single map appears." Amer. hist. rev.

Wittke, Carl

* History of Canada. rev ed 1933 Crofts $6, text ed $5; Allen, G. 27s 6d 971

1 Canada—Hist. 33-29185

First published by Knopf, 1928. In the 1933 edition the last three chapters have been rewritten and a new chapter added to bring the material up to date

"Dr. Wittke, who is [1933] professor of history in Ohio State university, has written an historical textbook that summarizes the main developments in the history of a country of which comparatively little has been written. He emphasizes the constant inter-relations of Canadian and United States history and the importance of Canada's part in the development of British imperial policies." Book rev. digest

"Informing and attractively written, newcomer in a field which has been most inadequately dealt with by historians, the volume supplies for students, teachers and general readers what may well be called a long felt want." Boston Transcript

Conquest of New France. (Chronicles of America ser., v10) Roosevelt ed 1921 Yale univ. press $1.50 971

1 U.S.—Hist.—Colonial period 2 Canada—Hist.—To 1763 (New France) 22-12132

"The fall of French power in America is like a great play—a play in five acts of which the titles are Frontenac, Acadia, Louisburg, the Ohio, Montcalm and Wolfe. This Mr. Wrong has seen, and has frequently opposed his figures with apposite dramatic effect. He is interested in character. Frontenac is superbly drawn." Dial

The author's "Rise and fall of New France" (2v 1928 Macmillan $10.50; 42s) is a more comprehensive account of the French colonization of Canada. Scholarly and readable

Grenfell, Sir Wilfred Thomason

* Romance of Labrador. 1934 Macmillan $4 971.9

1 Labrador 2 Natural history—Labrador 34-9645

"A readable account of the history of Labrador, including information on the geology, animal life, the Eskimo, and the Indians of that country, with a final chapter giving briefly the story of Dr. Grenfell's forty years of service there. His enthusiasm for the country and its people is communicated to the reader in a delightful manner. The book is well illustrated with photographs and charming black-and-white prints." Bkl.

Two older books by this author are: "Labrador, the country and the people" (new ed rev 1922 Macmillan) a popular and informing handbook, containing some of the same information found in "Romance of Labrador" and "Down to the sea" (1910 Revell) vivid stories of the fishermen of Labrador and a doctor's work among them. "Prescott's classics have often been reprinted and are still the broadest general treatment in their respective fields. Prescott used a wealth of manuscript sources, but did not sufficiently discriminate between the violently partisan accounts which he found; and he exaggerated the cultural development of the Aztecs. Monograph corrections of Prescott will continue to appear as new material is found and old material more impartially sifted. To this end the publications of the Cortes Society and the introduction and illustrations in the Henderson-Joyce edition are worthy of careful consideration." Guide to hist. lit.

First published in 2 volumes, 1927. Reprinted in one volume in 1930. In the 1933 edition a 37 page chapter carrying the history thru the Hoover administration has been added

The Beards have gathered into the sweep of their history the whole circle of American life—economic, social, political, agricultural, industrial, intellectual. "Dr. and Mrs. Beard's work is interpretive rather than merely descriptive. They pick out of the stream of time the most significant developments—the settlement of the Colonies, the war for independence, the young republic, the conquest of the West, the war between the North and South, the rise of big business, the World War, the conquest of 'normalcy'—and explain them. As the explanation proceeds the facts are developed." N.Y. Times

"It is written with verve and swift facility, with nervous, careless prodigality of phrase and epithet, with free and pungent comment, and with an occasional irrepressible sardonic sideswipe at anything smug that turns up by the way. Westward; the romance of the American frontier. 1930 Appleton-Century $5; 21s 973

1 U.S.—Hist. 2 The West—Hist. 3 Frontier and pioneer life 30-22840

"Beginning with a chapter, When Massachusetts was west, the author has told the story of the western movement from the beginning, putting his emphasis on the battle with nature and the wilderness, not on political events. 'It was a battle fought by plain men; with them this narrative deals.' A good popular account to accompany such books as Prof. Paxon's. [Maps]" Wis. bul.

"A survey of the historical background for the present-day interests of the United States in the Pacific, covering the western expansion on the continent, early relations with China and Japan, and the acquisition of Samoa, Hawaii and the Philippines. Bibliography." Book rev. digest

"It is history, such history as satisfies the technical historians, even though they cannot write that kind themselves. It is equipped with references to chapter and verse for all of its statements. It is for this reason among others that it steps immediately into a place of authority in the libraries. But its authority detracts not the least from its readability." Sat. rev. of lit.

1 U.S.—Hist. 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 28-7782

In this edition chapters have been revised and new chapters have been added. Most of these are in lighter vein than are the chapters of the first edition

"It has been written for the general reader, as well as for students of the grammar-school grade and the grades immediately above it. . . No attempt at connected history has been made . . . In order that every important aspect of our national growth be presented, the subjects chosen are as unlike as practicable, and the events have been related with greater detail, than is possible in the ordinary school history." Preface

1 U.S.—Bound. 26-14839

"A popular account of the boundary disputes and decisions of the United States and the various states. While he is chiefly concerned with the human interests involved, the author has depended on reliable secondary sources and his information is accuraate. . . Many illustrations and 12 maps. [Bibliography]" Wis. bul.

"The book is primarily a library book for students of historical topography. But there is interest in it for the general reader, too, odd things as well for the man hunting suggestions for short story writing, queer sidelights on history of a sort to engage a teacher with respect for his class; in short, a book for novices and experts alike." "The object of these volumes is to furnish a collection of sources for the study of American history . . . Few public documents are given, but rather extracts from diaries and contemporary narratives. The editor believes that by means of such material the reader will get a knowledge of the real life of the past and catch its true spirit. The selections will be of great service in furnishing illustrative material for teachers or for students who are reading modern authors. Each selection is preceded by a very short statement concerning the life of the author." Larned's Literature of Amer. hist.

Political and social growth of the United States, 1492-1852. rev ed 1933 Macmillan $3; 15s 973

1 U.S.—Hist. 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 33-23026

A thoro revision of his "Political and social history of the United States, 1492-1828." This is a companion volume to A. M. Schlesinger's "Political and social growth of the United States, 1852-1933." The change in the point of division between the two volumes from the year 1828 to 1852 has involved the incorporation into volume 1 of the first eight chapters of the original edition of volume 2. The two books give a continuous history of the United States in its political, social and economic aspects. Intended primarily for college students. Bibliographic notes at the end of each chapter

"An authoritative work marked by breadth and thoroughness of knowledge which give it encyclopædic value." Bookman

"A discussion of the influences of the soil on American settlement and expansion, comprising a survey of the New England colonies, the migration to the Mississippi, and the later movement from the Mississippi to the Pacific coast." Book rev. digest

"Mr. Hulbert makes here a new and valuable contribution to the story of American settlement and expansion and opens a door upon a rich but hitherto unworked field of our historical studies. . . Although Mr. Hulbert's book hardly does more than sketchily outline his theme and suggest its possibilities, it is a fascinating volume because of its different viewpoint and the new light it sheds upon familiar facts." Wertenbaker, Thomas Jefferson

American people; a history. 1926 Scribner $5 973

1 U.S.—Hist. 26-19266

The Edwards professor of American history in Princeton university has written this one-volume history, not for the historian but for the general reader

"In compressing the chief facts of American history into a single readable volume, Professor Wertenbaker has performed a very difficult task. . . . He has avoided abstract discussions of political philosophy by letting his characters, from time to time, express their opinions in conversation. If he has not quite attained the art that conceals art, he has written a book that is consistently interesting and often vivid." Yale review

Series

American nation: a history from original sources by associated scholars; ed. by A. B. Hart. 28v 1904-18 Harper ea $2.25; ea 10s 6d 973 Series

This set is recommended as a good starting point for a library building up its collection. In this catalog all the volumes are listed separately with other books on the various periods because the majority of libraries consulted voted to have them separated rather than kept together as a set. If the set is kept together with its index (v28) it will sometimes furnish a convenient first aid

"The best comprehensive cooperative history written by specialists; a standard work; very valuable for collateral reading; mainly political and constitutional with some attention to economic and social history; contains notes, maps and extensive bibliographies." M. W. Jernegan

Chronicles of America series; ed by Allen Johnson. text book ed 51v 1921 Yale univ. press set $75, ea $1.50 973 Series

Single volumes sold to libraries and schools at $1.50 each

An attractive series planned to appeal to the general reader. The volumes are of somewhat unequal merit. "These volumes are for the most part scholarly and at the same time written in an unusually interesting 'story-telling' manner." M. W. Jernegan

Although listed together in this Catalog a few of the volumes are also listed separately according to the field covered: for example, W. R. Shepherd's "Hispanic nations of the new world" (class 980); W. B. Munro's "Crusaders of New France" (class 971))

Contents: v1 Red man's continent, by Ellsworth Huntington; v2 Spanish conquerors, by I. B. Richman; v3 Elizabethan seadogs, by W. C. H. Wood; v4 Crusaders of New France, by W. B. Munro; v5 Pioneers of the old South, by Mary Johnston; v6 Fathers of New England, by C. M. Andrews; v7 Dutch and English on the Hudson, by Mrs M. W. Goodwin; v8 Quaker colonies, by S. G. Pageant of America; a pictorial history of the United States, ed by R. H. Gabriel and others. Independence ed 15v 1925-1929 Yale univ. press 973 Series

Single volumes sold to libraries and schools, each $5.50. Sold on subscription basis of $75 for set. The set is planned to give a panorama of the history and life of the country in a series of pictures accompanied by brief descriptions

"The outstanding merit of the set . . . is the bringing together in one place of a large number of pictures of many types, illustrations of historic events, of the life of the people, of industrial and agricultural processes, of works of art, portraits, cartoons, maps and of facsimile reproductions of documents of various kinds. . . No other single set of books contains a collection of pictures in American history which approaches this in size. An especially valuable feature is the inclusion of a reference to the source from which each illustration has been taken. The printed word is used only to describe the pictures, not to give a connected written history." I. G. Mudge in Library journal

Contents: v1 Adventurers in the wilderness, by Clark Wissler and others; v2 Lure of the frontier, by R. H. Gabriel; v3 Toilers of land and sea, by R. H. Andrews, Charles McLean

Colonial background of the American revolution. rev ed 1931 Yale univ. press $2.50; Oxford 11s 6d 973.2

1 U.S.—Hist.—Colonial period 2 Gt. Brit. —Colonies—North America 3 U.S.—Hist.—Revolution—Causes 31-24004

First published 1924. The revision in the 1931 edition consists of slight corrections or additions

"In these four essays the Farnam professor of American history in Yale university explains the relationship of the American colonies with Great Britain. He deals with the larger aspects of this relationship and the motives which actuated the colonial policy of Great Britain. He shows how for a hundred years before the Revolution the colonies and the mother country were moving in exactly opposite directoisn and how the conflict between antagonistic interests grew thruout this period. The last essay is a summing up of the chief obstacles to the popularization of an accurate interpretation of the revolutionary period." Book rev. digest

"Professor Andrews's book has two beauties: it is beautiful in form—in paper, type, and binding one of the fine products of the Yale University Press; and it is beautiful in spirit, in that, while frank and vigorous, it yet reveals a sympathetic understanding of the outlook of both sides in the unhappy struggle of the American Revolution." 1 U.S.—Hist.—Colonial period 2 Gt. Brit.—Colonies—North America 3 France—Colonies—North America 4 Spain—Colonies—North America 29-8364

Presents the subject from the standpoint of North America as a whole. Pays special attention to the colonies of nations other than England and to English colonies other than the 13 which revolted. The book is divided into three main parts—the founding of the colonies, expansion and international conflict, and the revolt of the English colonies. Condensed from Preface

"The best outline of the international background of colonization and the colonial systems of European powers in America." M. W. Jernegan

* American colonies, 1492-1750. (Epochs of American history) 1929 Longmans $1.60; 7s 6d 973.2

1 U.S.—Hist.—Colonial period 29-5118

This replaces the earlier volume by R. G. Thwaites, "The colonies 1492-1750" published in 1890

"Jernegan's masterly analysis, formidably buttressed with bibliographies, differs radically from its predecessor in many respects. . . The earlier volume disposes of the first half of the eighteenth century in a single chapter; its successor devotes no fewer than six chapters, about 200 pages, to the same period. But even more illuminating is the shift in emphasis from the chronicle of colonization and of political and constitutional development to that of economic and social development. . . The volume is, in short, an extraordinarily excellent example of twentieth century historical synthesis." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Egerton, Hugh Edward

Causes and character of the American revolution. 1923 Oxford $3; 7s 6d 973.3

1 U.S.—Hist.—Revolution 23-26846

What the author has set himself to do is to examine the causes of a revolt which, in making the United States a nation, went far toward putting an end to what he calls the old British empire. His study of the documentary sources leads him to the conclusion that the American revolution was primarily the result of faulty relations which existed from the beginning between the Colonies and the mother country, which Great Britain made no intelligent and genuinely honest attempt to improve. "The 'critical period' is the period from 1783 to 1789. The work thus follows, in point of time, the same author's 'American Revolution.' The state of the country at the close of the war with Great Britain, the development of the states and the westward expansion, the imperfect working and gradual breakdown of the Articles of Confederation, and the formation and adoption of the Constitution are the topics treated. "Deciding that the American Revolution needed not only to be humanized but to be jazzed up, Mr. John Hyde Preston has addressed himself to the task with fine enthusiasm, a flair for the dramatic and homely detail, and a sense of realism quite comparable with that of an 'Only Yesterday.' He has succeeded in making the struggle for independence about as believable as the Civil War, taking it quite out of the realm of the costume drama. On the other hand, his book is one that ought not to be read without the corrective of a few soberer narratives of the same period. He is a first-class reporter—but he is not altogether a historian." Rives, G. L. United States and Mexico. 2v 1913 Scribner $8 A study of the relations between the two countries from 1821 to 1848

Smith, J. H. War with Mexico. 2v 1919 Macmillan $10 A work based on first hand

Bishop, Farnham

Our first war in Mexico. 1916 Scribner $1.50 973.6

1 U.S.—Hist.—War with Mexico, 1845-1848 16-16923

"A popular account of the Mexican war and its causes based largely on Rives' 'The relations between the United States and Mexico, 1821-1848.' The author also quotes from Grant's 'Memoirs,' Polk's diary, and other sources. In dealing with the causes of the war he begins with the earliest history of Texas. He is particularly explicit on the part played by slavery. There are eight illustrations and two maps." Book rev. digest

1 U.S.—Pol. & ovt. 2 Slavery in the U.S. 6-42362

"The aim of the volume is 'to bring out the contrast between the old parties and their aims and the new and imperious issues.' The efforts to prevent the crisis which resulted in the Civil war, and the rival habits of thought which made it inevitable are clearly shown, the effects of the struggle upon parties, legislation and the courts as well as the social and economic changes brought about by railroad development and the growth of cotton are carefully detailed." 1 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 2 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 6-42435

"The author presents the full significance of the John Brown raid, pictures the attitude of Buchanan and his unsuccessful attempts at compromise, discusses the status of the federal forts, pays tribue to the high minded attitude of Lincoln and closes with the fall of Sumter. [Maps]." Book rev. digest

Chestnut, Mrs Mary Boykin (Miller)

Diary from Dixie. 1929 Smith, P. $5 973.7

1 U.S.—History—Civil war 2 Confederate States of America A30-1158

"Mrs. Chesnut's diary [first published in 1905 and for some time out of print] has always held a place of its own in the literature of the Confederacy. She was in the very midst of the struggle, acquainted with some of its greatest figures. She was in Montgomery when the Confederacy was organized, sat on sofas with Davis and Stephens, and chatted in parlors with Toombs, Cobb, and Hunter; she was in Charleston when war began, watching the bombardment of Fort Sumter from a housetop; and during the grimmest years of the struggle she was in Richmond." Dodd, William Edward

Lincoln or Lee. 1928 Appleton-Century $2 973.7

1 Lincoln, Abraham 2 Lee, Robert Edward 3 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 28-13309

"Comparison and contrast of the two greatest leaders in the war between the states. The narrow and accidental margins of success." Subtitle

"This small, provocative book is less a parallel study of Lincoln and Lee than a closely packed, dramatic narrative of the trials of spirit that beset the northern president from his first inauguration to his death. Into the brief compass of the narrative Professor Dodd marshals, in order and perspective the miscellaneous and confusing mass of the whole Civil war." New republic

Geer, Walter

Campaigns of the Civil war. 1926 Coward-McCann $4 973.7

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war—Campaigns and battles 26-15438

"Walter Geer in his 'Campaigns of the Civil War' has given us a story of the great conflict in a single volume which, for the layman at all events, covers the ground as adequately as do histories in four, five, and six volumes. It is well written; carefully documented; there are maps of the greater battles; there are appendices." Bookman

"The author has expressed a good many opinions which are not likely to pass unchallenged. But the general narrative is well informed and impartial." Times (London) lit. sup.

Hergesheimer, Joseph

Swords & roses. 1929 Knopf $3.50 973.7

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 2 Confederate States of America 29-9116

"Some of the traditions of valor and beauty which have given the old South its radiantly romantic aspect are told in this group of semi-historical essays. Mr. Hergesheimer shows how the Civil war brought to the surface the aristocratic and knightly heritage of the south in such figures as Stonewall Jackson, Jefferson

1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 7-4798

This volume and the one listed below together from a brief, compact history of the war. Each contains maps and a bibliography
"The point of view of the author . . . is that of a participant in the campaigns, and a friend of many officers on both sides, who relates the story not as a victory of the United States over a national enemy, but as a part of the history of the whole people, both North and South." Kirkland, Edward Chase
Peacemakers of 1864. 1927 Macmillan $2.50; 12s 6d 973.7
1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 27-9371

"A study of the attempt to bring about peace between the North and South, and the struggle made by various men, great and small, who made sincere but often misguided efforts to end the war." Chicago
"As a story the book leaves little to be desired; from the opening sentence the reader's interest does not wane throughout the 250 pages of brilliant narrative. The style is vigorous, epigrammatic; a word, a phrase, a clause, and some obscure historical personage lives and moves before us a man of flesh and blood and passions." Amer. hist. rev.

McMaster, John Bach
History of the people of the United States during Lincoln's administration. 1927 Appleton-Century $5; 21s 973.7
1 U.S.—Hist.—Civil war 27-8471

"Professor McMaster's latest volume in United States history is a study of the people behind the battle lines during the four years of the war, of feeling and opinion both in the South and in the North, of economic and industrial conditions, the effect of victory and defeat on the popular mind and the influence, in turn, of the demoralization of public opinion on Lincoln's conduct of the war. Foreign opinion, especially in England, is also dealt with. [Maps]" Book rev. digest

A well-documented history of the confederacy's efforts to secure recognition and aid thru cutting off the European supply of cotton. Bibliography
"To say that 'King Cotton Diplomacy' is far and away the best history of Confederate diplomacy that has yet been written would not of itself be sufficiently descriptive of it, for while the book is an admirable example of thoroughgoing research it also develops a thesis whose demonstration necessitates not a little rewriting of the story of the Civil War." "The student of war politics and of mid-century American diplomacy will find much to interest him in several of the chapters, for the volume is not, as its title might imply, a mere narrative of military operations. It is a discussion of national life in all its phases during a great and critical period of American history." Amer. pol. sci. rev.

1 U.S.—Pol. & govt. 2 Reconstruction 3 Johnson, Andrew 4 Washington, D.C.—Soc. life & cust. 29-17848

Also available in a satisfactory cheap reprint (Blue ribbon bks. $1)

"This history recreates the Reconstruction period after the Civil war, the twelve tragic years that stretched from the death of Lincoln to the close of the Grant administration. The period lives again in this dramatic and fully documented account of the political corruption of the times, carpet-bag rule in the South, leading politicians and women of society, the scandals of Grant's administration, the rise of the Ku Klux Klan and the disputed Hayes-Tilden election. The much misunderstood Andrew Johnson, for years the storm center of hate and abuse, is given his rightful place as an honest man and a faithful public servant." Book rev. digest

"Here is the 'new history' at its best. It bears the unmistakable authenticity of careful scholarship, hard work, heartbreaking research among musty records and forgotton documents. Yet it moves swiftly. There are few dull spots among its five hundred pages. . . . Mr. Bowers writes with vigor, a sense of the colorful, and above all a feeling for the people of his drama." "The purpose of the volume is to show that Reconstruction, with all its hardships and inequities, was not deliberately planned as a punishment and humiliation for those formerly in rebellion, though the spirit of retribution had its part. It was an effort, clumsy and partisan, yet in the main honestly meant to make provision for the inevitable consequences of the Civil War." Editor's introduction

"To an extraordinary degree for a work in general history, it takes into account the social and intellectual movements as well as the changing economic conditions which parelleled the succession of political events." Christian century

"On the whole, the significance of this book lies not in the new and startling facts brought to light by the historical spade, but in the temper and slant revealed by it. It is a book with few façades and doctrinal illusions. It goes behind the scenes and it refuses to accept statements as they appear laid out for posterity in the tomb of family biographies. It betrays, not obtrusively, a genial humor, tinged with a soft and appropriate irony." C. A. Beard in New republic

1 Johnson, Andrew 2 U.S.—Pol. & govt.—1865-1869 30-31349

"A scholarly work of over seven hundred pages in which the political controversies during the reconstruction period are presented with a wealth of detail. . . . The drama of Johnson's struggle against the radicals, like Sumner and Thaddeus Stephens, and especially against Edwin M. Stanton, the 'evil genius' of his administration, are presented in a spirited way." Boston

"The unfortunate President is the central figure, but he does not dominate the book. His chapters are successive scenes in a drama of political intrigue. His actors are debauched with vindictiveness and partisanship. From time to time the reader catches a glimpse of Johnson. Milton's treatment of him is frankly defensive, but the final estimate seems balanced and fair." Yale review

He is exceedingly incisive and succinct in his estimates without being prolix and pursuing mere literature. His enthusiasms are fresh, vibrant, interesting. Above all they make good history. State histories which may be of general interest have been included in this Catalog but no attempt has been made to give for each state all histories that will be needed in local libraries. In small libraries the purchase will often be limited to histories of the home state or surrounding states. Each library will probably wish to add one late history of its own state, if one is to be had. For this purpose it will be necessary to supplement the titles included here

An important work, which is out of print, 1933, is W. B. Weeden's "Economic and social history of New England, 1620-1789" (2v 1891 Houghton)

Another useful book is S. A. Drake's "Making of New England, 1580-1643" (1886 Scribner $1.75). It is much briefer than Weeden. Intended for young people and general readers

Adams, James Truslow

* Founding of New England. 1921 Little $5; Am. bk. supply 25s 974

1 New England—Hist. 21-9397

"The author shows how the religious factor in the early settlement period has been overestimated, and that economic as well as religious factors have played a very considerable part; that the evolution of a colony can be viewed correctly only when it is seen against the background of the economic and imperial conditions and theories of the time. The book is indexed and illustrated with facsimiles of maps and documents." Book rev. digest

"With broad background and scholarly equipment, Mr. Adams maintains a serene, judicial attitude and proves his capacity as a historian. He has made no original research but has digested the greater part of the printed material that has appeared in the last thirty years, and retold the story of early New England in a clear, simple style, with touches of quiet irony." Amer. hist. rev.

New England in the republic, 1776-1850. 1926 Little $5 974

1 New England—Hist. 26-9006

"The final volume in Mr Adams's history of New England closes with the year 1850, which marked the 'accomplishment of its most distinctive work in the life of the American nation.' From that time on, as Mr Adams shows, the swift current of nationalism into which New England was swept tended to diminish its extreme sectionalism, tho the distinct New England type and point of view remained." Book rev. digest

Adams, James T.—Continued

"He has done a very scholarly piece of work. A sane, cold estimate, a true balance, will never be struck on the historical deserts of New England without taking into account the deep researches, vigorous opinions and excellent writing of James Truslow Adams." Boston Transcript

Contains illustrations, many of which are facsimiles of contemporary documents and cartoons

Revolutionary New England, 1691-1776. 1923 Little $5; Am. bk. supply 25s 974

1 New England—Hist. 23-15926

A sequel to "Founding of New England." "Carries the Colonial story from 1691 to the Declaration of Independence. 'The origin of grievances, the slow growth of revolutionary sentiment, and the rise of a radical party,' together with economic, social and political changes are ably traced and interpreted in this informing study." N.Y. state lib.

Contains illustrations, including portraits and reproductions from cartoons

Bolton, Charles Knowles

Real founders of New England. (Useful reference ser.) 1929 Faxon $3.50 974

1 New England—Hist. 2 New England—Biog. 3 Names, Geographical 29-19510

"An account of the life of the Englishmen who explored or settled along the coast of New England in the period between the voyage of Gosnold in 1602 and the coming of the Puritans in 1628. Chapters of special interest are, 'Mr. Blaxton comes to Shawmut (Boston)' and 'Shawmut in Mr. Blaxton's day (1625).' Numerous excellent drawings. Appendices contain 'A tentative list of old planters and sojourners in New England before September 6, 1628,' and a bibliography." Cleveland

Fiske, John

* Beginnings of New England; or, The Puritan theocracy in its relation to civil and religious liberty. 1889 Houghton $3 974

1 New England—Hist. 11-13687

Not a formal history. "It has been my aim to give the outline of such a narrative as to indicate the principles at work in the history of New England down to the Revolution of 1689." Preface

"For this era, the general reader can do no better than to follow Fiske through his delightful. . . 'The beginnings of New England.'" E. W. Pahlow

974.1 Maine

Verrill, Alpheus Hyatt

Romantic and historic Maine. 1933 Dodd $3 974.1

1 Maine—Descr. & trav. 2 Maine—Hist. 33-5294

"History, background, atmosphere, places of interest attractively dealt with, and good photographs, drawings and maps." Providence

974.2 New Hampshire

Sanborn, Franklin Benjamin

New Hampshire, an epitome of popular government. (American commonwealths) 1904 Houghton o.p. 1933 974.2

1 New Hampshire—Hist. 4-10074

"Covers three centuries of New Hampshire history, but is chiefly devoted to the period from 1623 to 1788. The historian has drawn freely upon documents . . . which throw much light on the early story of land grants and land tenure. [Map]" Pittsburgh

974.3 Vermont

Robinson, Rowland Evans

Vermont, a study of independence. (American commonwealths) 1892 Houghton $2.50 974.3

1 Vermont—Hist. Rc-3094

"Reliable and well-written history of Vermont from the time of its settlement until its admission into the Union; while in a few of the later chapters its development is sketched till times subsequent to the Civil War. [Map]." Pittsburgh

974.4 Massachusetts

"Massachusetts, its historians and its history," by C. F. Adams (1893 Houghton) is a brief résumé of the history of the state which is now, 1933, out of print

Kittredge, Henry Crocker

Cape Cod. 1930 Houghton $5 974.4

1 Cape Cod—Hist. 30-5060

"Although an interesting book in any event, this will be a matter for enthusiasm for those who love the stern picturesqueness of Cape Cod. Its geology, history, the canal, shipwrecks, fisheries, and other features that are peculiar to the cape are described with a large fund of incident and anecdote." Providence

Attractive end maps and illustrations

Morison, Samuel Eliot

Maritime history of Massachusetts, 1783-1860. 1921 Houghton $5 974.4

1 Massachusetts—Hist. 21-18423

"Authentic and exhilarating account of the great days of Massachusetts shipping; of East India men, whalers, fishing vessels, packet and clipper ships; their owners and builders, merchant-princes, and captains; their ports and trading ventures 'round the world. Many interesting illustrations, maps, appendix, bibliography, index." N.Y. state lib.

"Mr Morison has cunningly woven an unusually interesting narrative embodying the romance and dangers of the old sailing days. The story he tells is never over-burdened with citations; and anecdote, biography and antiquarian lore all combine to increase the interest of a book written confessedly for the enjoyment of his readers." Times (London) lit. sup.

Usher, Roland Greene

Pilgrims and their history. 1918 Macmillan $2.25; 12s 974.4

1 Pilgrim fathers 2 Massachusetts—Hist. 18-19815

Gives a description of the Pilgrim country in England, the story of the flight to Holland and the life there, the voyage, the difficulties of the early life at Plymouth, and the later history of the colony and the people down to the period of the union of the Plymouth colony with that of Massachusetts Bay, in 1692. Condensed from Boston transcript

974.5 Rhode Island

Richman, Irving Berdine

Rhode Island, a study in separatism. (American commonwealths) 1918 Houghton $2.50 974.5

1 Rhode Island—Hist. 5-34187

974.7 New York State

"Political history of the state of New York," by De A. S. Alexander (4v 1906 Holt o.p. 1933) is a good detailed study which is of interest to larger libraries. Volume 4 has title: Four famous New Yorkers

New York (State). State historian
American revolution in New York; its political, social and economic significance. 1926 Univ. of the state of N.Y. pa 50c 974.7
1 New York (State)—Hist. 27-27037
Official volume prepared by A. C. Flick for general use as part of the program of the Executive committee on the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the American revolution
"Prepared (1) to present in brief outline for popular use the history of the Revolution; (2) to acquaint the people of the State with the outstanding personalities of New York in that memorable conflict; (3) to supply a handy bibliography for further study of the many aspects of that crisis; and (4) to give some useful suggestions for local celebrations in churches, clubs, patriotic and civic bodies, and schools and colleges." Introduction

New York state historical association
History of the state of New York. v1-4 1933 Columbia univ. press ea $5; Oxford ea 25s 974.7
1 New York (State)—Hist. (33-11644)
This scholarly history to be completed in 10 volumes, is made up of articles contributed by specialists in their fields. Altho the work will not be needed by many libraries it is included here because it will form, when completed, an exhaustive and authoritative source for all aspects of New York history and will probably replace other histories of the state. Contains illustrations and bibliographies
"The separate papers are valuable studies of the varied phases of New York's history. Especially fine are the paper of Adrian J. Barnouw in Volume I on 'Dutch Background of New Netherland,' the contributions in Volume II by Victor H. Paltsits on 'The Transition from Dutch to English Rule' and those of Samuel McKee on 'The Economic Pattern of Colonial New York' and 'A Century of Labor.' Virginia D. Harrington's paper on 'The Colonial Merchant Ledger' is also an interesting one." New republic

Wilstach, Paul
Hudson River landings. 1933 Bobbs $3.75 974.7
1 Hudson valley—Hist. 2 Hudson valley—Historic houses, etc. 33-25057
"Another of the author's charmingly illustrated and interesting books on America's historic places. He discourses of the old houses of the Dutch, English, and revolutioary periods, and of events from the voyage of Hendrick Hudson to the present time. He succeeds in bringing out the romantic glamour of this loveliest of rivers." Cincinnati

974.71 New York City

A scholarly work now, 1933, unfortunately out of print is M. G. Van Rensselaer's "History of the city of New York in the seventeenth century" (2v 1909 Macmillan) covering the history of the city to 1689

Abbott, Wilbur Cortez
New York in the American revolution. 1929 Scribner $3.50 974.71
1 New York (City)—Hist. 29-29220
"Readable and informing narrative by a professor of history in Harvard, of the events and activities in New York City, 1763-83, prior to and during the Revolution up to the evacuation by the British. Based upon contemporary material as well as later writings. Illustrations pertinent to the text were selected by V. H. Paltsits, Chief of American History Division, New York Public Library. 1 New York (City)—Hist. 1-14311
"The chief merit of Mr. Roosevelt's sketch, so far as it relates to the history of the city of New York—for we think his digressions the best part of it—is the clearness with which he brings out the mongrel character of the population . . . The purely narrative portions of the history are very agreeably written, and leave the reader with the single regret that they are necessarily so much abbreviated." Nation
S. M. Lockwood's "New York, not so little and not so old" (1926 Doubleday, Page o.p. 1933) contains a guide to spots of antiquarian or present day interest as well as a history of the city from 1609-1926. Illustrated with amusing woodcuts and sketch maps

Overton, Jacqueline Marion
Long Island's story. 1929 Doubleday, Doran $2.50 974.72
1 Long Island—Hist. 29-17844

"The history of Long Island is here attractively told and illustrated and given a very fine format. Miss Overton is children's librarian of the Robert Bacon Memorial library, Westbury, Long Island, and has written her book for the Long Island boys and girls who asked for it." Book rev. digest

"A skilful blending of Long Island's past and present. Topography, famous citizens and their contributions, birds and flowers, smugglers and pirates and other special interests are discussed in this readable history from the coming of the 'Half Moon' in 1609 to the coming of the airplane. Reproductions from old prints and decorations by E. A. Wilson. Map on end papers. Bibliography, index." N.Y. libraries

Fisher, Sydney George
Making of Pennsylvania. 2d ed 1896 Lippincott $1.50; 7s 6d 974.8
1 Pennsylvania—Hist. 32-8629

Reprinted 1932 with a new introduction by George Wharton Pepper

"A study of the various nationalities and religions which formed elements in the population of early Pennsylvania, with special reference to their dispersion, and to their influence upon the history of the colony and state. To this are added chapters on the early development of science and the mechanic arts, the Wyoming controversy, and the boundary dispute with Maryland. The style is popular, and at times flippant, but the facts have been industriously accumulated, and the book may be read with profit." Larned's Literature of Amer. hist.

Lippincott, Horace Mather

Liberalism in the South. 1932 Univ. of N.C. press $3.50; Oxford 16s 975
1 Liberalism 2 Southern states 3 Education—Southern states 32-30107

"This is a scholarly study, a cultural history of the South, written from a definite point of view, and outspokenly critical. A large part of the book is devoted to a discussion of pre-Revolutionary days and the first two decades of the Nineteenth Century when the South was actually under liberal leadership; an even larger part is devoted to discussing the manifestation of forces exactly opposed to any sort of liberalism." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

"To important and absorbing content this book adds admirable English style." Survey

Our capital on the Potomac. 1924 Appleton-Century $5 975.3

1 Washington, D.C.—Hist 2 Washington, D.C.—Soc. life & cust. 24-25528

"A chronicle of Washington and life in Washington from Colonial times which, aside from its historical value, could be useful in the library to add choice bits to the biographical studies of American statesmen and as a new travel book about our capital. Scholarly in treatment and well-indexed." Wis. bul.

"Hardly any incident or person connected with the city is neglected, but with all this comprehensiveness it is never dull. The half-tone illustrations are good, and a few of them merit the word superb." Outlook

1 Washington, D.C.—Hist. 23-17608

"This last book of Thomas Nelson Page is an entertaining story of the troubles that arose out of the selection of Washington as the site of the capital. It closes with Jefferson's administration. The data were all collected from original sources. The account is enlivened with good anecdotes, and the illustrations are charming." St Louis

"Throws interesting sidelights on social life and conditions in the United States during the thirty years immediately following the War of Independence." New statesman

Coulter, Ellis Merton
Short history of Georgia. 1933 Univ. of N.C. press $3.50; Oxford 16s 975.8

1 Georgia—Hist. 33-30230

"Professor Coulter has recorded the pageant of Georgia history with understanding and discrimination, but without much enthusiasm. The emphasis, as we might expect, is on the Colonial period and the half century prior to the attack on Fort Sumter: the years since Reconstruction are allotted a bare fifty pages. . . . Particularly interesting are the chapters telling of land speculation, the conflict with the Cherokee Indians, ante-bellum industrialism and railway building." Books (N.Y. Herald Tribune)

Spanish-American frontier: 1783-1795. 1927 Houghton $3.50 976

1 Southwest, Old—Hist. 2 Mississippi valley—Hist. 3 Spain—Colonies 27-23368

"An interesting chapter in the history of the winning of the West is unfolded in this account of the frontier advance and the Spanish retreat in the Mississippi Valley in the years immediately following the Revolutionary war. It is a study of commercial and diplomatic intrigues among backwoodsmen, fur traders, land speculators and the officials of Spain's empire in North America, further complicated by relations with the Indian tribes that were the neighbors of Spanish and Americans." Book rev. digest

"The study is carefully worked. The treatment is sane and unbiassed; the analysis of the two powers' strength and weakness is keen and discerning. It is readable as well as historically sound, for the author keeps ever in mind the dramatic aspects of the story." Amer. hist. rev.

976.7 Arkansas

Lewis, Anna
Along the Arkansas. 1932 Southwest press $2.50 976.7

1 Arkansas river—Hist. 33-426

The author "follows the story through the years for two and a half centuries, telling of French and Spanish and English attempts to explore and hold and exploit the country, of intrepid adventurers, brave priests, traders, colonizers, soldiers. . . The story is brought down to the beginning of the nineteenth century and the acquiring of the region by the United States. . . Her volume has the values of competence and authority that will make it welcome among scholars, while her bringing out of the humanly appealing factors in the story should draw the attention and the interest of general readers." 1 Kentucky—Hist. Rc-2325

An account of the development of the state thru the Civil war and reconstruction periods. Includes a chapter on the geology of Kentucky. Map

"Author . . . was qualified by a long personal knowledge of men and events in Kentucky,

to write the history of the state. He fought in the Civil War on the Union side, and presents a vivid picture of the events that marked the great conflict, as well as of the period of 'reconstruction' . . .Author's judgment seems to be occasionally biassed by excessive state pride; but he shows an honest effort to be fair towards those who thought differently from him in the Civil War. The style is clear and vigorous." Larned's Literature of Amer. hist.

E. M. Coulter's "Civil war and readjustment in Kentucky" (1926 Univ. of N.C. press $3.60; Oxford 16s) is an attempt to discover what was typical in the history and character of the state of that period

Latin America, its rise and progress. (South American ser. v9) 1913 Scribner o.p. 1933 980

1 Latin America—Hist. 2 Latin America—Politics 13-5080

"M. Calderon opens his book with a keen and brilliant analysis of the Spanish character, since any full understanding of the continent cannot be had, without an understanding of the people who settled it and held it until a hundred years ago . . . With directness and simplicity he talks of the race question, finding a certain satisfaction in the thought, that the complete intermixture of the three races on the southern continent, places them farther from a sympathy and understanding with the United States . . . The problems that face the Latin republics is really the theme of M. Calderon." Boston Transcript

Incas of Peru. 1910 Murray, J. o.p. 1933 985
1 Peru—Antiq. 2 Incas 10-34090
A series of essays on the origins and history of the Incas, by a distinguished geographer and traveller. Excellent illustrations

"The book is full of learning and of Inca lore, contains the curious drama, is written seriously and well, just as one would expect that it should be under the signature it bears." Saturday rev.

"World of the Incas, a socialistic state of the past," by Otfrid von Hanstein (1925 Dutton $2.50; Allen, G. 7s 6d) is another interesting book about ancient Peru. It tells the story of the old Inca civilization and the conquest of the country by Pizarro

1 Peru—Hist. 2 Incas 3 Spain—Colonies 4 South America—Comm. 5 Peru—Antiq. 32-30373

"Taking up the story of Peru where Ancient Civilizations of the Andes [class 913.8] left it, Mr. Means devotes the first five chapters of his new book to a brief sketch of the coming of the Spaniards under Pizarro, their conquest of the country, and the downfall of the native government. . . . The second part of the book shifts from events to institutions, describing the Spanish governmental system, the rule of the vice-roys, and the temporary grants of land, which had they been permanent, might have given rise to a feudal type of aristocracy, and improved the unhappy fate of the Indians." Bookman

"To those who think that the narrative of Prescott is too diffuse the treatment of Professor Means may be commended. It is spirited, with a lively sense of the picturesque." N.Y. Times

1 Philippine islands 2 Philippine islands—Hist. 30-14901

First published 1914 in two volumes. The 1930 edition contains four additional chapters by Ralston Hayden. Besides the history of the Islands, facts are given as to the climate, natural resources and commercial possibilities. Views are set forth on the ability of the Filipinos to maintain an established stable government. Numerous illustrations and map

"Worcester's book, as he wrote it, [published 1914] has already gone through several printings and has received generally favorable reviews. Its greatest drawback was in the personal feeling introduced. In the revision by Hayden, this has been largely omitted, changes or additions have been made in the annotation, a biography of nine chapters has been prefixed to the work, and four new chapters to bring the work up to date added. The result is admirable. . . . The volume is now much more valuable than formerly and will clarify many points." Amer. hist. rev.

"A terse summary of the history of Australian colonization is followed by dissertations on the present-day development of national aims and methods in the economic, political and social sphere. Professor Hancock closes with a chapter on the literary and artistic influences of the Commonwealth. [Maps]" Book rev. digest

"It is the special and invaluable quality of Professor Hancock's work that he is an Australian describing his countrymen from the inside, after having gained enough knowledge of the outside world to find out what explanations were needed, and having acquired—as few Australians do—valid standards against which the national character and achievement may be measured." 1 Australia—Disc. & explor. (30-8617)

Contents: v 1, By sea; v2, By land

"In long extracts from the original narratives of the explorers—Tasman, Dampier, Cook, Flinders, Bligh and others, the story is told of the more important discoveries of Australia. [The second volume] brings together some of the most interesting narratives of later explorers who opened up the continent and prepared the way for the miner and the farmer." Book rev. digest

"The editor has very properly used only the original journals of Tasman, Dampier, Cook, Flinders and the rest. He has taken pains to choose the most telling passages—those which make good reading and, at the same time, mark a real advance in geographical knowledge. From this point of view, the selection is excellent. And the portraits and maps used for purposes of illustration are well chosen and reproduced." New statesman

Mrs I. L. Marriott's "Early explorers in Australia, from the log-books and journals; including the diary of Allan Cunningham, botanist, from 1817-1818" (1925 Methuen 21s) is another good book of selections from original documents

Author, Title, Subject and Analytical Index

Analytical entries are introduced by the word In. These give (1) the page numbers in the book where the material is to be found; (2) the class number of the book.
